The Magistrate, of his own motion, attached the grain on the 10th of August 1878, pending inquiry into the complaint, then proceeded with the inquiry, and dismissed the complaint, but continued the attachment pending the decision of the Civil Court to which he referred the parties. A in 1879 brought a suit against B to establish his title to the grain, which was finally rejected on the 21st of June 1880, and B recovered his grain on the 30th of September 1880, but in a damaged condition. B, on the 13th of November 1881, sued A for damages for wrongful detention of his grain, and its consequent deterioration in quality and value. Held that the date of the complaint was the date of the wrong, and limitation ran from that date, or, at the latest, from the date of the attachment, and that B's suit was therefore barred, whether the period applicable was one year under art. 23, or two years under art. 36, of sch. 3. ——— Suit to set aside sale or for compensation—Boundaries erroneously described in sale proclamation—"Falsa demonstratio."—On the 17th November 1877, a certain piece of land was sold within the boundaries of which, as described in the proclamation, another piece of land was included. The land was sold in execution of a decree obtained by the first defendant against defendants 2, 3, and 4, and was purchased by the plaintiff. The second piece of land was sold on the following day and purchased by defendant No. 5. On 28th November, the plaintiff applied to have the sale set aside and his money refunded unless he was put in possession of all the land included in the boundaries mentioned in the proclamation, but his application was refused and the sale confirmed on 20th July 1878. In a suit for possession of all the land or for return of his purchase-money with interest, it was contended, in the Courts below and on second appeal, that the plaintiff was, at any rate, entitled to damages or compensation because of the land as defined by the survey number proving to be of less acreage than that included in the boundaries, and the lower Court had held such a claim as barred also under art. 36, sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held that the suit, regarded as one for compensation, was not barred, as three years had not elapsed since the confirmation of the sale when the suit was brought—art. 36 applying only to suits for compensation for tortious acts independent of contract. But the claim for compensation was not maintainable, as the property offered for sale was sufficiently identified by the description as "Survey No. 291, Pot No. 3, containing 24¾ gunthas," and the statement of boundaries, so far as it was inaccurate, might be properly regarded as "falsa demonstratio." MAHOMED SAYAD PHAKI v. NAVROJI BALABHAI

VII of 1822.*—A Settlement officer by a certain proceeding recognized the plaintiffs' right to the property in suit, and, declaring them not to be clearly shown to be out of possession of it, ordered their names to be recorded in the proprietary register. The plaintiffs subsequently brought a suit for establishment and declaration of right to partition and possession of the property. Held that the proceeding of the Settlement officer was undoubtedly an award under Regulation VII of 1822, and that, as the plaintiffs sued for possession, and did not allege that they had been dispossessed since the award, thus raising the presumption that they were not in possession at the time, and as their suit was in substance and effect a suit to recover property comprised in an award, the suit was barred by limitation, not having been instituted within three years. In 1890 the Survey officer, purporting to act under s. 20 of the Bombay Khoti Act (Bombay Act I of 1880), decided that defendants were occupancy tenants, but the plaintiffs did not come to know of this decision till 1893, when the botkhat was prepared and signed. Shortly afterwards the plaintiffs took forcible possession of the lands. Thereupon the defendants filed a suit in the Mamlatdar's Court to recover possession, alleging that they were owners of the land, and that they had been illegally dispossessed. The Mamlatdar restored them to possession. In 1896 plaintiffs filed the present suit to eject defendants. Defendants pleaded (inter alia) that the suit was bad for want of notice to quit, and that the claim was time-barred. Held that the suit was within time, the cause of action having accrued in 1893, when the botkhat was prepared, and not in 1890, when the Survey officer passed his decision. 20. ——— Finding by Mamlatdar as to possession—Subsequent contrary finding by Civil Court—Effect of Mamlatdar's order—Limitation Act, s. 28—Suit by party against whom Mamlatdar's order was made.—The plaintiff brought this suit to recover possession of certain land which had belonged to her nephew, and of which, after his death in 1878, she had assumed the management. In 1881, she brought a possessory suit against the first defendant in the Mamlatdar's Court, which suit was dismissed in January 1885, the Mamlatdar holding that she had not been in possession. In a civil suit, however, which (pending the proceedings in the Mamlatdar's Court) she had filed against the first defendant in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Haveri, the Judge found that she had been in possession since 1880, and awarded her damages against the first defendant (who was held to be her farm servant) for crops which had been taken away by him. In 1887, the second defendant as mortgagee from defendant No. 1 obtained a decree against plaintiff in the Mamlatdar's Court awarding him possession of the land, and in execution of that decree the plaintiff was dispossessed in December 1887. In 1890, the plaintiff filed this suit to recover possession and for mesne profits since 1887. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had no title to the land, and that the suit was barred by limitation, inasmuch as the plaintiff had not brought a suit to establish her right within three years after the Mamlatdar's order in 1885 dismissing her possessory suit. Held that the Mamlatdar's order of January 1885 had no conclusive effect, and was rendered ineffectual by the subsequent decree of the Civil Court; and as the plaintiff continued in possession, notwithstanding that order, down to 1887, the present suit was not barred by limitation, and neither her remedy nor her right to the land was extinguished. Disputes arose between plaintiffs and defendant, and in February 1893, the defendant obtained an order from the Mamlatdar in a possessory suit against the plaintiffs directing the plaintiffs to give up possession of the property to him. In August 1893, an agreement was made between them, in pursuance of which the defendant executed a rent-note to the plaintiffs promising to give up the property to the plaintiffs at the end of four months on payment by the plaintiffs of R100. On the 25th November 1896, the plaintiffs brought this suit for possession, alleging that the defendant refused to give up the property. The District Judge dismissed the suit, as barred by limitation, under art. 47, sch. II of the Limitation Act, not having been brought within three years from the date of the Mamlatdar's order of 28th February 1893. Held also that the contract between the parties dissolved the order of the Mamlatdar in the possessory suit and rendered it unnecessary for the plaintiffs to sue to set it aside. That claim being disallowed, plaintiff filed in the City Civil Court, Madras, a suit for, and obtained a declaration of, his title to the goods, but prior to the date of the decree, namely, in October 1895, the goods attached had been sold by the Court of Small Causes, and certain third parties had become purchasers thereof. On the 16th September 1876, another mortgage was executed, whereby C further charged X with the repayment of further advances, and B mortgaged factory X as a further security, the mortgage containing a stipulation for repayment, within one month after notice, of the balance due in excess of ₨12,000. B became insolvent in July 1882. No demand was made. On the 5th January 1877, a balance of ₨27,552 remained due which with interest up to July 1882 was increased to ₨42,564. The liquidators of S & Co., who had in the meantime dissolved partnership, sought to prove against B's estate for ₨30,564 after deducting the ₨12,000 advanced to A. Held that the claim to prove against the estate was in the nature of a suit, not to enforce payment of money charged on immoveable property under art. 132, Act XV of 1877, nor was it within art. 60, but it was a suit for money, and was governed by art. 59 of the Act. 2 ————Native banker and customer—Deposit—Loan—Suit to recover money lodged with a native banker more than three years after lodgment.—The relationship between a native banker and the person depositing money with him in the ordinary way of business is that of borrower and lender, and the money lodged can be recovered as money lent. Art. 59 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) applies to such a transaction. The plaintiffs, who were members of the Dalvádi community, sued in 1883 to recover from the defendants the sum of ₨2,611-3-6 as found credited to their account in 1880 by the defendants' father, with whom the community had lodged a sum of ₨2,320 in 1874. They alleged that the sum was lodged on the condition that it was to be returned with interest on demand. It appeared that small sums were paid by K to the plaintiffs from time to time, and no demand had ever been made during the lifetime of K for repayment. The defendants denied the alleged condition, and contended that the suit was barred. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiffs' claim. The defendants appealed to the Assistant Judge, who reversed the decree, being of opinion that the transaction was a loan and not a deposit, and that the suit was barred. On appeal by the plaintiffs to the High Court,—Held, confirming the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiffs' suit was barred by art. 59 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). The plaintiffs contended that the money was lodged as a "deposit" and not as a loan, and that art. 60 of sch. II of the Limitation Act applied. They relied upon the following circumstances as showing the nature of the transaction, viz. (1) that it was arranged that the money should remain until a favourable opportunity should occur for applying it to the building of a dharmshala; (2) that interest was to be paid upon it; (3) that the account was to be annually settled; (4) that it was to be withdrawn in one sum. Held that these circumstances, if proved, did not necessarily deprive the transaction of the character of a loan by creating a fiduciary relationship between

The plaintiff alleged, and the Court found, that these sums were presents which had been made to him on his birthday and other auspicious occasions. The said sums had been carried over from year to year in the firm's books, the interest being added each year, but no payment had ever been made to the plaintiff, or on his behalf, out of the sum so standing to his credit. Compound interest had been allowed in the account, and, on the 9th November 1893, the amount standing to the credit of the plaintiff was R4,917. The plaintiff contended that the money had been paid to, and accepted by, the defendant as a deposit to be held in trust for him. The defendant alleged that the money in question had been lent to him by the plaintiff's mother, and contended that the plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation. Held that the plaintiff's claim was not barred. The defendant stood in a fiduciary position to the plaintiff, and therefore there was a deposit within the meaning of art. 60 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and limitation did not commence to run until demand. 1. ——— Money paid at defendant's request—Hindu family—Debts of manager.—In the year 1867 the plaintiff, who was then living jointly with the defendant, who was his brother, executed a bond to secure the repayment of moneys advanced to him, which moneys were applied by him for the joint benefit of himself and the defendant. In the year 1868 the plaintiff executed another bond for the same purpose. In 1870 the plaintiff and defendant separated, and the lender thereupon sued the plaintiff upon the bond executed in 1867, and obtained a decree. In 1871 the plaintiff executed a fresh bond in favour of the decree-holder, in order to avoid execution of the decree and to retire the bond of 1868. In 1877 (within three years from the date of the fresh bond), the plaintiff sued his brother to recover a moiety of the sum secured thereby. Held that the date upon which money was paid by the plaintiff for the defendant must have been before 1870, and that therefore the suit was barred by limitation under Act IX of 1871, sch. II, art. 59. Ramkristo Roy v. Muddun Gopal Roy, 12 W. R., 194, followed. SUNKUR PERSHAD v. GOURY PERSHAD [I. L. R., 5 Calc., 321

One of the persons so made liable, alleging that he had paid more than his share of the expenses, sued the other for the balance in excess of the moiety which he was bound to pay under the award. Held that the suit was governed by art. 61 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, and that, although the taking of accounts might be necessary, the suit was not a suit for an account to which art. 120 of the same schedule might apply. Rohan v. *Jwala Prasad, I. had been settled and executed for the sale of the property. B in defence alleged that, although certain terms and conditions as to the sale had been definitely settled for embodiment in a formal sale-deed, it was only subject to these terms and conditions that he had been prepared to complete the transaction, and that, as they had been omitted from the document executed by D on the 1st September 1879, he had never accepted that document. In March 1884, the High Court on appeal dismissed the suit, holding that the parties had never been ad idem with reference to the contract alleged by D, and that the document of the 1st September 1879 had never been finally accepted so as to be binding and enforceable by law. In September 1884, B sued D for recovery of the sum of R33,000 with interest. He contended that, under the terms of the arrangement made on the 1st September 1879, the debt of R33,000 then owing to him changed its character; that it was no longer merely the old balance due by the defendant, but having been credited in the latter's books, should be treated as a payment by him (the plaintiff) as a deposit on account of the sale; that the suit was therefore one for money had and received by the defendant to the use of the plaintiff; and that the cause of action did not arise until the contract failed, by reason of the decree of the High Court on 14th March 1884, dismissing the suit for specific performance. Held that this contention must fail, and the debt must be treated as the old balance due by the defendant to the plaintiff, inasmuch as by the terms of the agreement itself which the plaintiff set up, no deposit was payable, and the price was not to be paid till the completion of the contract, and inasmuch as the plaintiff, in demanding payment, after the negotiations had failed, demanded it simply as for the balance of the old debt, and not as for the return of a deposit. Held, further, that the 1st September 1879, upon which the contract set up by the plaintiff was alleged to have been completed, was the latest possible date upon which the debt could be said to have become due, and that, inasmuch as the present suit was not brought until the 8th September 1884, it was barred by limitation. This application was ultimately struck off. In April 1881, judgment was given in the appeal, increasing the amount to be paid by the decree-holder to R1,994, which was to be deposited in Court within a certain time. The decree-holder did not deposit the balance thus directed to be paid, and the decree for possession of the property accordingly became void. In 1882 the decree-holder assigned to K his right to recover from the judgment-debtors the sum of R1,595 which he had paid to them in August 1880. In December 1883, K sued the judgment-debtors for recovery of the R1,595 with interest. Held that art. 62 of the Limitation Act did not govern the suit, but that art. 97, and, if not, art. 120, would apply, and the suit was therefore not barred by limitation. The defendants contended that arrears for only three years were recoverable under the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and that the rates applicable to ascertain the amount were the Government auction rates. Held that the plaintiff's right would, under the Hindu law, be "nibandha," and would under the law rank for many purposes as immoveable property, but that a different principle applied to sums realized and become payable in the hands of him who realized them to the intended recipient. The interest or jural relation of right of such recipient was nibandha, but the particular sum due to him was either money received to his use, or payable on a contract, and money which would remain due, though the grant constituting the nibandha were cancelled and had ceased to exist after the realization of the money. It being thus distinguishable from the original right which produced it, the claim in this suit was barred by limitation after three years. Money value means the market value, that for which the grain would actually sell, not a merely arbitrary value called auction rates. MORBHAT PUROHIT v. GANGADHAR KARKARE

The defendants refused to accede to this demand on the 14th February 1876, and on the 17th of the same month they paid the plaintiff such balance with such interest calculated at the rate they proposed, viz., four per cent. The Act of 1871, however, altered the time from which the cause of action arose in such a case to the date when the demand was made; but under the present Act, the law was again altered and now remains as it was held to be under the Act of 1859.

No sum either in respect of principal or interest was paid on the note, and payment was demanded for the first time in November 1875. Act XIV of 1859 contained no provision as to the date of the accrual of the cause of action in a suit on a promissory note payable on demand, but Act IX of 1871, which repealed Act XIV of 1859, and which applied to suits brought after the 1st April 1873, provided that the cause of action in such a suit shall be taken to arise on the date of the demand. The defendants entered the amount in their own books, and furnished the plaintiff with a pass-book, which contained this entry: "The account of the amount deposited by B (the plaintiff) with V (the defendants), of the city of Poona. The details of it are as follows: We have debited the amount to ourselves, and will return it whenever you demand it. Shake 1786 (A.D. 1864)." The defendants adjusted the account in the plaintiff's pass-book in July 1865 in these words: "Balance this day, the 1st Jyest vadya, Shake 1787, R1,159-2-0. Interest on this sum will run from 1st Jyest vadya, Shake 1787 (A.D. 1865)." This entry was signed by the defendants. The plaintiff drew several times against this account within the first year, sometimes taking cash and sometimes gold. On the plaintiff's demanding the money in April 1877, the defendants refused to pay it. The plaintiff therefore filed a suit against them on the 25th June 1877. The defendants pleaded limitation. Held that, regarding the entry made by the defendants in the plaintiff's book as a promissory note, the suit was barred by the law of limitation. The document contained the following clause: "If any of the instalments is not duly paid, I am to pay the whole amount with interest at eight annas per cent. per annum." The defendant failed to pay the first instalment, which the plaintiffs admitted was now barred, but on the 10th June 1895 the plaintiffs filed this suit to recover the remainder of the debt and interest. The defendant pleaded that under the above clause the whole sum became due on the failure to pay the first instalment; that the right to sue which then accrued was never waived, and that the suit was now barred by limitation. Held that the plaintiffs having failed to prove a waiver of the right of suit which accrued to them in August 1891, the suit was barred by limitation. The waiver contemplated by art. 75 of sch. No further instalments were paid, but no demand for payment of the entire sum secured by the bond was made by the plaintiff until the 30th January 1884 The plaintiff filed this suit on the 28th April 1884 The defendant contended that the plaintiff's cause of action arose on the 4th December 1879, when he (the defendant) failed to pay the instalment then due and pleaded limitation The plaintiff contended that under the bond the cause of action did not arise until the date of his demand, viz, on the 30th January 1884 Held that the suit was not barred. The 2nd of July 1872 was the last occasion that any balance was due from B to A. Payments continued to be made on behalf of A into B's bank up to the 12th of June 1873, when a sum of R1,083-8 was paid into her account; but, notwithstanding this payment, the balance of account was on that date against her. After the 12th of June 1873, B continued to make payments on behalf of A, and also to render monthly accounts in which he charged A with such payments, and also with the principal of, and interest upon, the balance due on previously-rendered accounts. This continued till the month of January 1874, when B for the last time rendered a monthly account to A, the last item in which was a payment made on the 6th January 1874. On the 23rd December 1876, B instituted a suit against A to recover the balance of principal and interest due to him on the footing of the last account rendered by him to A. Held that the account between A and B was not, and never had been, a mutual, open, and current account, and that the suit was therefore barred by limitation; and that the payments made by B on behalf of A within the period of limitation, even if authorized, did not have the effect of keeping alive his previous claim against her. Held also that, even if the dealings and transactions between A and B could be so construed as to show that there had been at any time a mutual, open, and current account between them, that mutual relation terminated on the 2nd July 1872, or if not, then on the 12th June 1873, when the last payment was made on A's account into B's bank MAHOMED v. ASHRUFUNNISSA . 13 ——————— Mutual accounts—Reciprocal demands.—From the month of September 1873 until the month of May 1874 the plaintiffs at Bombay and the defendant at Karachi had dealings with one another. It was the practice for the defendant at Karachi to draw hundis upon the plaintiffs at Bombay, which the plaintiffs duly accepted and paid at Bombay; and in order to put the plaintiffs in funds, the defendant was in the habit of drawing hundis upon other firms in Bombay in favour of the plaintiffs, the amount of which hundis the plaintiffs realized from time to time at Bombay. Until the 8th January 1874 the balance of the account was sometimes in favour of the plaintiffs and sometimes in favour of the defendant. After that date, the balance of the account was always in favour of the plaintiffs, who continued to make advances up to the 10th May 1874. The last payment made by the defendant was on the 27th April 1874. The last advance made by the plaintiffs was on the 10th May 1874. On the 10th May 1874 the total balance due by the defendant was R8,514-12-2. The plaintiffs calculated interest on this sum up to the 9th April 1877, and on the 19th April 1877 filed the plaint in this suit to recover the said amount. The defendant pleaded limitation. The plaintiffs contended that the account between them and the defendant was a mutual account, and that, under cl. 87 of sch. II of the Limitation Act (IX of 1871), the period of limitation dated from the day of the last advance made by them to the defendant,—viz, 10th May 1874. Held on the authority of Ghaseeram v. Munohur Doss, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 241, that the account between the plaintiffs and the defendant was a mutual, current, and open account within the meaning of cl. 87, and that the suit was not barred. Literally construed, cl. 87 would apply only to those cases in which both parties have in the course of their dealings made actual demands on one another. The more reasonable and more probable intention of the framers of the clause appears to have been that it should apply to cases where the course of business has been of such a nature as to give rise to reciprocal demands between the parties; in other words, where the dealings between the parties are such that sometimes the balance may be in favour of one party and sometimes of the other. 3. ———— Grant by zamindar of estate for maintenance—Lease by grantee in excess of his estate—Suit for possession after death of grantee.—A grant of a village for maintenance was made by a zamindar to his nephew operating only for life. The grantee survived the grantor, and by ikrarnama acknowledged the preceding zamindar to be entitled to the village. The grantee had, however, already executed a pottah described therein as permanent to a lessee. The latter obtained possession, and from him after the death of the original grantee for life the zamindars who succeeded the grantor accepted rent at the rate stipulated in the pottah and did not disturb his possession. In a suit after the death of the lessee claiming the village as part of the inherited zamindari the defence was that the lease was perpetual, but it was held that it was void as against the successor of the grantor and not merely voidable after the grantee's death. Held that the suit for possession was not barred under art. 91 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) on the ground that a decree declaratory of title to have the pottah cancelled might have been sued for in the lessee's lifetime under s. 39 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877. This suit was instituted on the 22nd November 1875. On the 25th of the same month, K, learning that B was about to dispose of his property, caused a notice to issue to him directing him not to transfer any of his property. This notice was served on B on the 29th November. On the 1st December 1875 B transferred certain land to T by way of sale. K's suit was dismissed by the lower Courts, but the High Court, on the 7th August 1876, gave him a decree. Although in another suit a sale by the husband effected in 1879 was set aside in 1882 on the ground of his having been unduly influenced, he was not at the time of the previous transaction, nor for some years after it, mentally incompetent or unable to allow that knowledge to operate on his mind. Held that therefore the suit falling within s. 91 of sch. 13. ———— Mahomedan law—Gift—Suit by heir for share of donor's property by declaration of invalidity of gift.—A Mahomedan, who in October 1875 executed a deed of gift of his property, under which possession was taken by the donees, died in June 1885, never having taken any steps to have the deed of gift set aside. In February 1886, a suit was brought by his nephew claiming a share in the donor's estate by right of inheritance, and by having it declared that the deed was procured from the donor by fraud and undue influence. It was found that the plaintiff was aware of the existence of the deed soon after its execution, and that, if there were any facts entitling him to have it cancelled, those facts were known to him more than three years before the institution of the suit. Held that the plaintiff had, during the donor's lifetime, no reversionary or vested interest in the estate, but a mere possibility of inheritance, and consequently the donor, when he executed the deed, had full disposing power over his property, and the right which at his death accrued to the plaintiff came to the latter affected by the donor's acts and dispositions; and that as a suit by the donor to set aside the deed would at the time of his death be barred by art. 91 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), such a suit was also barred against the plaintiff, who obtained through him the cancelment of the deed, being a substantial and necessary incident of the claim, and the necessity which rested upon the plaintiff for obtaining such cancelment before he could dislodge the donees, not being obviated by his choosing to call the suit one for possession of immoveable property. *Abdul Wahib Khan v. His widows entered into possession of his property and the survivor died on the 23rd April 1886. The predecessors in estate of the plaintiffs brought a suit to set aside the ikrarnamah, which suit was dismissed in 1864 on the ground that they had no cause of action during the lifetime of the surviving widow. On the 29th June 1889, the plaintiffs, as the heirs of D after the death of the surviving widow, instituted a suit to recover possession of the property of D from the defendants, who claimed to have come into possession thereof under the ikrarnamah upon the death of the widow. Held that the suit was governed by the limitation of three years for a suit to set aside an instrument, and not by the general limitation prescribed for suits to recover immoveable property, as after the widow's death the parties in possession were those claiming under the ikrarnamah, who could not be displaced except by setting it aside. *Raghubar Dyal Sahu v. She first adopted in 1884 a boy who soon after died. She then, in 1887, adopted the defendant, whose adoption the reversionary heirs of her husband brought this suit, in 1888, to have set aside. Held that neither art. 92, nor art. 93, of sch. There had been no "issue" of the instrument, the anumati-patro, within the meaning of the former article, the term "issue" having no application to such a document. There had not, within the meaning of art. 93, before this suit, been any attempt to enforce the instrument against the plaintiffs. 4. ——— and art. 132— Suit to recover assessment paid by a co-owner of property from other co-owners—Charge on share of co-sharer.—In 1868, the uncle of the plaintiff brought a suit (No. 176 of 1868) against five members of the undivided family, to which the defendants in the present suit belonged, and obtained a money-decree. In execution of that decree, he attached and sold certain land, in which all the members of the defendants' family were interested. At the sale he purchased the land himself, and was put into possession. In 1873, he began to pay the assessment upon the whole property. Subsequent litigation took place between him and the defendants' family, pending which the plaintiff separated from his uncle, and obtained the property in question as his share. The result of that litigation was a decree by the High Court, on the 23rd September 1879, declaring that the plaintiffs' uncle was only entitled to the interest of the five members of the family who had been defendant in his suit (No. 176 of 1868) in execution of the decree in which the property had been sold. The plaintiff brought the present suit, in 1883, against the other members of the family to recover their proportionate share of the assessment for the years 1875—1878, during which period he had paid the whole assessment. He prayed for a sale of their interest in the land. Both the lower Courts held that the payment of assessment did not create a charge on the property, and that the plaintiff having omitted to sue within three years from the date of the payments made by him, the present suit was barred. On appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court,—Held, confirming the lower Court's decree, that the suit was barred. The plaintiff paid the assessment as full owner of the property, and it was entirely by his own action that the defendants had been excluded from the property, and did not pay their quotas of the assessment. Under those circumstances, the payments could not be regarded as salvage payments so as to make them a charge, according to equity, justice, and good conscience, upon the shares of the other co-owners ACHUT RAMCHANDRA PAI v. HARI KAMTI . . Plaintiffs paid the Government revenue due from the defendants in respect of their plot from September 1873 to June 1885 in order to prevent the two plots being brought to sale, and on the 28th September 1885 instituted a suit to recover the amount. It was contended on behalf of the plaintiff that art. 132 of sch. II of Act XV of 1877 applied to the facts of the case, and that the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to recover all amounts so paid within twelve years of date of suit. Held that, as on the authority of Kinu Ram Doss v. Muzaffer Hosain Shaha, I. L. R., 14 Calc. 809, the plaintiffs had no charge upon the property in respect of which the payment had been made, and as on the authority of Ramdin v. *Kalka Pershad, I. L. R., 12 I. A. 12; I. L. 19. ——————— Suit on contract unregistered—Money due under unregistered contract payable on demand—Money to be paid for particular purpose—Construction of agreement.—The plaintiffs were husband and wife, and they were married on the 14th March 1888. On the day of their marriage the defendant, who was the father of the first plaintiff, gave him a note addressed to his (the defendant's) firm as follows: "Do you be pleased to pay R7,000, namely, seven thousand, for ornaments in respect thereof, together with interest thereon, at the rate of R4, namely four, per one centum per one annum, within a period of 3, namely three, years from this day." The first plaintiff took this note to the defendant's firm, and in return received the following document addressed to himself; "You sent one chithi (note) for R7,000, namely seven thousand, on me. The sum which your father caused to be paid to you in respect of the ornaments appertaining to your marriage has been credited to your account, bearing interest at 4, namely four, per cent. For the same this 'receipt' has been given in writing." No money was actually paid by the defendant to the plaintiffs, and none was lodged with the defendant's firm by the plaintiffs, but subsequently to the above transaction an account was kept in the defendant's books, in which the first plaintiff was duly credited with interest every year. In March 1894, the first plaintiff demanded from the defendant the amount standing to his credit out of his account. The defendant pleaded limitation. Held that the purpose for which the money was to be paid, viz., the purchase of ornaments for the wife, indicated that it was the intention of the parties that payment should not be made until the plaintiffs were prepared to purchase ornaments, and that until then the money should remain with the defendant's firm. The intention was that the money should not be paid until the plaintiffs required it for the purpose for which it was destined, and demanded it. The contract was not broken until the plaintiffs demanded the money, which they did in March 1894. Art. 115 of sch. 27. ——————— Suit on mortgage—Claim for interest post diem in absence of covenant—Claim in nature of damages.—The defendants hypothecated to the plaintiff, to secure repayment of a debt, their interest in certain lands. The hypothecation-deed was executed in 1875 and registered, and it contained the following terms with regard to interest and the repayment of the debt: "We (the obligors) shall pay interest at 7 per cent. per annum before the 30th October of each year; we shall pay in full the principal amount on the 30th October 1878, after clearing off the interest, and redeem this deed; should we fail to pay the interest regularly according to the instalments, we shall at once pay the principal together with the amount of interest" Default was made in the payment of interest in 1876. The plaintiff in 1888 sued the executants of the above instrument and their heirs and representatives to recover the principal together with interest up to date. The Court of first instance held that the claim for a personal decree was barred by limitation, but passed a decree directing the sale of the hypothecated land in default of payment of the principal together with interest up to date. On appeal,—Held that, since the instrument did not provide for interest post diem, any claim in the nature of a claim for such interest could be allowed by way of damages

4. ———— Suit to obtain a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid or never took place—Suit for possession of immoveable property —Act XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 141.—Art. 118 of the Limitation Act applies only to suits where the relief claimed is purely for a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid or never in fact took place. Such a suit is distinct from a suit for possession of property, and the latter kind of suit cannot be held to be barred as a suit brought under art. 118, merely by reason of its raising a question of the validity of an adoption, but is separately provided for by art. 141. It is discretionary in a Court to grant relief by a declaration of a right, and consequently the fact that a person has not sued for a declaration should not be a bar to a suit for possession of property on any ground of limitation prescribed for the former. 5. ———— Act IX of 1871, art. 129—Meaning of "suit to set aside adoption."—Art. 129 of sch. II of Act IX of 1871, the Indian Limitation Act of that year, using the expression "suit to set aside an adoption," denoted a suit bringing the validity of an adoption into question; and the rule of limitation given by that article applied to all suits in which the suitor could not succeed without displacing an apparent adoption, in virtue of which the opposite party was in possession. The plaintiffs, as collateral heirs of a childless Hindu, questioned the adoptions purporting to have been made by his widows in pursuance of authority from him; such adoptions having been followed by continuous possession, and having been recognized in formal instruments, proceedings, and decrees to which the plaintiffs were parties. Held on the ground that the adoptions were brought into question more than twelve years after their date, though less than twelve years after the plaintiffs' titles (if any) had accrued at the death of the surviving widow, that the suits were barred under art. 129 of sch. II of Act IX of 1871. Part of the language of the judgment in Raja Bahadur Singh v. *Achumbit Lall, L. R., 6 I. 6. ———— Suit questioning an adoption—Invalidity, by Hindu law, of second adoption. —An adopted son, proprietor in possession of half of the estate of his adoptive father, deceased, sued to obtain the other half which was in the defendant's possession. The defence was that the latter was entitled to the half share in dispute, having been adopted to the deceased under a power given by him to his widow, and exercised by her. Held that the suit, having, in order to succeed, brought into question the second adoption, was a suit to set aside an adoption within the meaning of art. 129, sch. II, Act IX of 1871, the Limitation Act in force for a period after the cause of suit had arisen. Jagadamba Chowdhrani v. *Dakhina Mohan, I. L. R., 13 Calc., 308: L. R., 13 I. The general period of limitation of six years under cl. 16 of s. 1 of the Act of 1859 was necessarily much wider in its application than is art. 120 of the present Act, so many more suits being now specially provided for. There was under the Act of 1859 a difference of three years in the period of limitation applicable to contracts registered and that applicable to unregistered contracts which could have been registered, the period being six years for the former, and three years for the latter. Suits on contracts which could not have been registered were considered as cases not specially provided for, and held to be governed by the general limitation of six years.

of 1859), s. 246, and (Act X of 1877) ss. 97-371.—The defendants attached certain property, which the plaintiffs alleged belonged to them. The plaintiffs preferred a claim to the property under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859; this claim was disallowed on the 15th August 1877. In June 1878 the plaintiffs brougt a suit to establish their title to the property attached, and for confirmation of possession. Pending this suit, the principal defendant died, and the plaintiffs applied for an order to substitute certain persons as defendants. The Court thereupon directed the issue of a summons on the defendants proposed by the plaintiffs to appear and defend the suit; but the plaintiffs failing to pay the costs of the service of this summons, the suit was dismissed on the 14th March 1879. 32. ——— Express trust—Administration suit—Executor—Suit for an account against an executor or his representative.—R died in 1865, leaving a will, of which his nephews P and S were the executors. His will provided that after payment of all debts, etc., the residue of his property should remain in the hands of the executors, who were "to maintain the family in the same manner as I used to maintain the family in my house." After the death of both the executors, the residue was to be apportioned among the children of his nephews in equal shares. On the death of the testator, P took possession of the estate, and died on the 10th January 1876. S remained passive until the 27th August 1884, when he took out probate of R's will. On the 23rd January 1885, he filed the present suit against the defendant as widow and administratrix of P, praying for an account of the estate of R that had come to the hands of P, and also for an account of the estate of P. The plaintiff contended that R's estate came into the hands of P as a trustee; that the suit was to recover the property for the purposes of the trust, and that s. 10 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) applied. The defendant alleged that all the moneys belonging to R's estate, which had come into the hands of P, had been expended in paying R's debts, and that there was no residue left for the purposes of the trusts of the will, and she contended that the suit was barred by limitation. Held that the suit was barred by art. 120 of sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), being primarily not a suit to follow trust property in the hands of a representative of a trustee, but really to ascertain whether any trust remained to be administered after the testator's debts and funeral expenses had been paid. No breach of trust was alleged. The suit was merely for an account against the executor or his representative. To such a suit s. 10 of the Limitation Act does not apply. 39. ——— and arts. 131, 144—Adverse possession—Suit for declaration of right to malikana and to set aside order refusing to register names.—Previous to 1825, dearah X accreted to mouzah Y, and some time before 1860 the malik of Y executed two conveyances in favour of A and B respectively. In 1860 A sued B in the Munsif's Court for possession of a share in X which B claimed under his conveyance. In that suit A succeeded on the ground that B's conveyance did not cover the share claimed by him in X, but merely covered the share in the mouzah itself, whereas by his conveyance A had acquired the right to the share in X which he claimed. In 1866 the Collector refused to recognize B's right to malikana payable in respect of the share in X which had been the subject of the suit in 1860, or to register his name in respect thereof, but acknowledge A's right thereto, relying on the decision of the Civil Court in the suit between A and B. Subsequently B's representatives, C and D, in 1866, sought to have their names registered in respect of the same malikana, but they were opposed by E, who alleged that A had been acting throughout as his benamidar. The Collector referred the case under s. 55 of Act VII of 1876 to the Civil Court, and the application of C and D was eventually disallowed. C and D thereupon, on the 5th November 1880, instituted the present suit against E in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, for a declaration of their right to the malikana, and for a reversal of the order refusing to allow their names to be registered in respect thereof. Held that the suit was barred by limitation, being governed either by art. 120, 131, or 144 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), because—(1) there being no allegation of dispossession, if it were contended that the suit was one for possession of an interest in immoveable property, art. 144 would apply; (2) if it were contended that the suit was for the purpose of establishing a periodically recurring right, pure and simple, art. 131 would apply, and the period must be reckoned from 1866, when the plaintiff was first refused the enjoyment of the right; (3) if, however, it were said to be a suit to establish a periodically recurring right, and something in addition, inasmuch as the right carried with it a right to the property itself, if the parties consented to take a settlement when the time for concluding the next temporary or permanent settlement came, art. 120 must be held to apply. But that, in any event, inasmuch as in the year 1866 the Collector refused to recognize B's right to the malikana, and adverse possession, so far as possession could be taken of such an interest in immoveable property, was then taken by A, or in other words by E, because it must be taken that the Collector since that date had been holding for A, whose right he had then recognized, after refusing to recognize the right claimed by B, the present suit, having been instituted in 1880, was equally barred, whichever of the above articles was held to apply. Rao Karan Singh v. *Bakur Ali Khan, L. action.—D died leaving him surviving a widow and a daughter who was plaintiff's mother. Defendant No. 2 obtained a decree against the widow, and in execution put up D's property to sale. Defendants 3, 4, and 5 purchased the property and took possession in 1869. In 1883 the plaintiff sued as D's reversionary heirs for a declaration that they were entitled to the property in dispute on the widow's death, alleging that the decree, in execution of which the property was sold, was a collusive and fraudulent decree, and that they were not bound by the sale in execution. They further alleged that the cause of action arose in 1879 when their mother died. Held that the suit was barred by limitation. The cause of action giving any reversioner the right to sue for a declaration was that given to the plaintiff's mother in 1869, both by the sale and the dispossession, and it was not revived in favour of the plaintiffs on her death in 1879. All right to sue for a declaration was therefore barred in 1875 under art. 120 of sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). CHHAGANRAM ASTIKRAM v. BAI MOTIGAVRI [I. L. R., 14 Bom., 512

If therefore the right of the nearest reversioner for the time being to contest an alienation or an adoption by the Hindu widow is allowed to become barred by limitation as against him, this will not bar the similar rights of the subsequent reversioners. Beni Prasad v. Hardai Bibi, unreported ; Ramphal Rai v. *Tula Kuari, I. 52. ———— Suit for a declaration of heirship—Accrual of the cause of action—Denial of title.—A sued for a declaration that she was the daughter of B, who died in 1870. On B's death, his kulkarni vatan was attached, and C was appointed to officiate on behalf of Government. In 1892 A applied for a certificate of heirship to B, with a view to get her name entered as a vatandar in place of her deceased father's. C opposed her application, denying that she was the daughter and heiress of B. Her application being rejected, A filed the present suit against C in 1877, to obtain a declaration that she was the daughter and heiress of B. The Court of first instance granted the declaration sought. The Appellate Court rejected the claim as barred under art. 120 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), holding that time should be computed from the date of B's death. Held that A's cause of action accrued not on B's death, but on the denial of her status by C in the certificate proceedings. The suit, having been brought within six years from that time, was not barred under art. 120 of the Limitation Act. TUKABAI v. VINAYAK KRISHNA KULKARNI . I. L. R., 15 Bom., 422

53. ———— Suit by a decree-holder against the sons of a deceased judgment-debtor whose property had passed to them.—A decree was passed against a Hindu for money dishonestly retained by him from the plaintiff's family to which he was accountable in respect of it. The judgment-debtor having died, the decree-holder sought to attach in execution property of the family which had passed into the hands of his sons by survivorship. The sons objected that such property was not liable to attachment, and the decree-holder was referred to a regular suit. He now brought a suit against the sons. Held that the suit was governed by art. 120 of the Limitation Act, and that time began to run for the purposes of limitation from the death of the father. 54. ———— Suit by the purchaser in execution-sale to recover the purchase-money.—The plaintiff purchased land sold in execution of a decree in favour of the defendant, but was subsequently evicted by the son of the judgment-debtor. He now sued in 1889 to recover the purchase-money paid by him on the ground that the judgment-debtor possessed no saleable interest in the property in question. It appeared that in 1888 the son of the judgment-debtor had obtained a decree against the plaintiff and others, declaring that she (the judgment-debtor) had no saleable interest in the property. Held that Limitation Act, sch. II, art. 120, contained the rule of limitation applicable to the suit, which was accordingly not time-barred, since the cause of action did not arise until 1888. NILAKANTA v. IMAMSAHIB . . . I. L. A suit for declaratory relief of such a nature cannot be held to be barred so long as the right to the property in respect of which the declaration is sought is a subsisting right, and the plaintiff has a subsisting right as reversioners, so long as the widow was alive. The right to bring such a suit is a continuing right therefore, and may be claimed within the statutory period from the time when the plaintiffs become entitled to the consequential relief. The present suit, having been brought within six years from the death of the widow, was within time. CHUKKUN LAL ROY v. LOLIT MOHAN ROY . I. L. R., 20 Calc., 906

68. ———— Liability of son for father's debts—Suit for money against sons of a deceased judgment-debtor—Decree for money against father to be discharged by instalments—Previous execution proceedings—Form of decree.—A personal decree on a mortgage was passed against a Hindu (the mortgagor) and his two sons on the 19th October 1877. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883, having discharged part of the debt. The decree-holder having attached certain family property in execution, the mortgagor's two younger sons, who had not been born at the date of the above decree, objected that their shares were not liable to attachment. This objection prevailed, the Court expressing the opinion that the matter in controversy should be determined in a regular suit. The other defendants in the suit of 1877 had both died in the interval, one of them leaving infant sons. The decree-holder (in whose sole name the mortgage stood) now sued the sons of the mortgagor and their infant nephews in 1891 for the payment out of the family property of all the unpaid instalments. Held that the period of limitation applicable to the suit was six years, and that time began to run for the purposes of limitation from the date when each instalment would have become due from the deceased judgment-debtor; and that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for payment out of the family property of all such instalments as would have so become due at the date of the suit, and for a declaration only as to the subsequent instalments. proceedings were pronounced to be irregular. The plaintiff thereupon, in the year 1877, filed the present suit on the strength of his decree of 1848. Held that the period of limitation applicable was that of twelve years from the date of the decree (Act IX of 1871, sch. II, art. 121), but that the decree should be viewed as analogous to an instalment decree and made as against the defendant in 1867,—down to which time the proceeds were regularly realized,—because it then, on his father's death, became first operative against him. In the case of a decree payable by instalments, as the command of the Judge prescribes a term for the performance of the several parts of his order, it is to be construed as becoming a judgment for purposes of limitation as to each instalment only on the day when payment is to be made. II, arts. 179 and 180.*—On the 29th September 1882, a decree was obtained against the defendant's husband in a suit on a mortgage by the latter dated the 6th April 1880. On the 27th July 1883, an order was made for transfer of the decree to the High Court for execution. On the 8th April 1886, the mortgagee applied to the High Court for execution by attachment of the mortgaged properties, and in the same year an order for attachment was made. The mortgagee died in April 1892, and on the 20th August 1894 the plaintiff (his widow and administratrix) applied to the High Court for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged properties under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act. On the 5th January 1895, the application was refused on the ground that the mortgaged properties were outside the territorial jurisdiction of the High Court. The plaintiff then instituted the present suit, in which she sought (inter alia) administration of the estate of the mortgagor (who had died before the mortgage suit was filed), and asked for the sale of such properties as might be found subject to such mortgage. Held (affirming the decision of SALE, J.) that, whether the plaintiff sued on the original debt or on the decree of the 29th September 1882, the suit was barred by limitation. Held also that, even apart from any question of limitation, the suit was not maintainable by reason of the provisions of ss. 230 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, the questions arising in the suit being such as should have been determined in execution of the decree, and not by a separate suit. Shortly after this, the testator died and the elder of the plaintiffs was born. The mother having since died without drawing the principal or taken the allotment of land, and the manager of the family estate having refused to give the plaintiffs their due, they sued to recover what was left to their mother. Held that this was a suit for legacy, and that cl. 11, s. 1, applied so far as the claim for money was concerned; and that the cause of action to the plaintiffs occurred at the time of the birth of the elder plaintiff, when his mother became immediately entitled to the principal sum of money and to the land. Long previously to 1872, the defendant's branch got into sole possession, and in that year a family settlement was arrived at, by which it was arranged that the offices should be held in rotation and the lands in equal shares; and, in accordance with this settlement, a certain village forming part of the endowment was delivered to the plaintiff's branch of the family. In 1889 the defendant brought a suit to recover a moiety of that village, but it was dismissed on the ground that the offices and emoluments were indivisible and went by right to the older branch of the family. The plaintiff now sued in 1895 to establish his right to the entire offices and to recover possession of the other village. Held that the defendant had acquired a divisible right to a moiety by twelve years' adverse possession, and that the suit should to that extent be dismissed. 7. ——— Suit to compel partition of moveable and immoveable property.—A Hindu of the Southern Maratha country, having two sons undivided from him, died in 1872, leaving a will disposing of ancestral estate substantially in favour of his second son, excluding the elder, who claimed his share in this suit. In 1861, a suit brought by this elder son against his father and brother to obtain a declaration of his right to a partition of the ancestral estate, was dismissed on the ground that he had no right in his father's lifetime to compel a partition of the moveables; and that, as to the immoveables, the claim failed, because they were situate beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. Held that the suit was not barred under the Limitation Act (XIV of 1859), s. 1, cl. 13. As to the immoveables, setting aside the fact that the plaintiff had remained in possession of one of the houses of the family which had been treated by the father as continuing to be part of the joint property, the decision of 1861, based as to the immoveables on the absence of jurisdiction to declare partition of them, caused this part of the claim to fall under the provisions of Act XIV of 1859, s. 14. As to the moveables: assuming that they could, on the question of limitation, be treated as distinct from the immoveables, and that no payment had been made within twelve years before this suit by the ancestral banking firm to the plaintiff, the adjudication of 1861, whether in law correct or incorrect, had been that the elder son could not assert his rights in the moveables until his father's death. The defendant in this suit, who had taken the benefit of that judgment, could not now insist that it did not suspend the running of limitation on the ground that his brothers might have appealed from it if erroneous. So far, also, as the father's interest was concerned, the succession only opened on his death. LAKSMAN DADA NAIK v. RAMCHANDRA DADA NAIK . I. L. R., 5 Bom., 48

33. ——————— Exclusion from joint property.—A collateral member of a Hindu family, alleging it to be joint, claimed his share of ancestral property in Oudh, part of which formed a talukh inherited for a considerable time past by the eldest son, who, taking the whole of it, had given maintenance to the other members. This taking was entered in the first and second of the lists made under the provisions of the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), and as to it there was no ground of claim. But with respect to the savings, accumulations, and investments made from the income and proceeds of the talukh before the confiscation and restoration of Oudh lands in 1858, the contention was that each member was entitled to his share, and that, by the presumption in respect of a joint family, the burden was on the talukhdar to prove that there were no savings or accumulations made otherwise than out of the talukh and before the confiscation. Held that, if it were assumed that the family was for some purposes undivided, still this was not the case of an ordinary undivided Hindu family, and that, in such a case as this, the presumption must depend on somewhat special circumstances. However, this case must be decided on the distinct ground that, as the claimant had been excluded from his share, if he had one, for more than twelve years, he knowing of this exclusion, the law of limitation enacted in Act XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 127, was applicable, and the claim was barred by lapse of time. RAGHUNATH BALI v. MAHARAJ BALI

45. ———— Joint family—Possession by one member of family—Neglect by plaintiff to take possession of his share notwithstanding request that he would do so—Adverse possession.—The plaintiff and the defendant were brothers and members of an undivided family. The plaintiff was in Government service, and had been for a long time absent from his native place on duty, the family property remaining under the management of the defendant. In 1863 the defendant wrote to the plaintiff, requesting him to return and manage his share of the property, or to employ some one to manage it for him. Nothing, however, was done by the plaintiff in the matter, and the defendant continued in possession. In 1882 the plaintiff sued the defendant for partition. The defendant pleaded that the suit was barred, contending that he had been in adverse possession from the date of the letter. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff's claim. The defendant appealed, and the lower Appellate Court reversed the lower Court's decree, holding that the suit was barred. On appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court,—Held that the suit was not barred. The above-mentioned letter of the defendant showed that, up to the date at which it was written, the defendant had not been in possession of the property "as his own property to the exclusion of the plaintiff," and the mere circumstance that, subsequently to the date of the letter, the plaintiff had not participated in the profits, would not, in the absence of other evidence, justify the inference that the plaintiff was then excluded. In 1835 the zamindari was granted to J, the son of C, by Government, and a sanad issued in the usual terms as prescribed by Regulation XXV of 1802. J died in 1864, leaving four sons, the three plaintiffs and D, his eldest son. D died in 1869, leaving an only son, the infant defendant. In 1869 the Court of Wards took charge of the estate on behalf of the infant defendant and allowed his uncle, plaintiff No. 1, to receive the rents of the zamindari as renter. The infant defendant and his three uncles lived in the same house and participated in the joint family property until 1872, when the plaintiffs claimed to have the zamindari divided. By an agreement between the plaintiffs and the Court of Wards all the moveable and immoveable property, except the zamindari talukh, was divided into four shares and distributed in 1874 between the plaintiffs and defendants. In 1884 the plaintiffs sued for partition of the zamindari, alleging that their cause of action arose in 1872, when the Court of Wards denied their right to a partition of the zamindari talukh. in 1881 for a share of joint family estate, the question whether the plaintiff's right to sue was barred by limitation under Act XIV of 1859, s. 1, cl. 13, depended on whether there had been any participation of profits between the plaintiff's father and the defendants, who with him were co-descendants from a common ancestor, after 1837 down to which year the family was certainly joint. If in 1871 the period of limitation had expired, the Act IX of that year and the later Acts need not be referred to; for, if they altered the law, they would not revive the right of suit. Upon the evidence it was found that, whatever might have been the father's intention when he settled in another village in 1837, the effect of what had been since done, or omitted, on both sides was that in due time the right of suit had become barred under the first Limitation Act. No mutation of names was affected in the Government registers, but the deed of gift and the sanads in respect of which the pension had originally been granted were handed over to the donee. After the death of the donor, one of his sisters brought a suit against his widow to establish her right (i) to receive the share in the pension which she had inherited from her father and received up to her brother's death; and (ii) as heir to her brother himself, to the share which he had inherited. 8. ——— Suit for assessment of rent on lakhiraj land after decree for resumption—Effect of decree as creating or not relationship of landlord and tenant.—The plaintiff brought a suit in 1861 against C for resumption of, and for declaration of his right to assess rent upon, C's lands within his zamindari which C held as lakhiraj. That suit was presumably instituted under Regulation II of 1819, s. 30, which related only to resumption of lakhiraj lands existing prior to 1790, but there was nothing to show conclusively under what law it was instituted, or whether the lakhiraj grant was one subsequent or anterior to 1790. In that suit an ex-parte decree was passed in 1863 that "the suit be decreed and the land in dispute be declared to be shukur," i.e., liable to assessment. In a suit brought in 1886 against the representatives of C after serving a notice upon them to pay rent for the land at a certain rate, to assess the land at the rate mentioned in the notice, and for the recovery of rent at that rate,—Held that the decree of 1863 had not the effect of creating the relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties, and therefore the suit, not having been brought within twelve years from the date of that decree, was barred by art. 130 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). 39. ———— Suit to establish title and for arrears—The plaintiff sued the defendants to recover a share of the income of a certain watan which was admitted to be connected with an hereditary office, but was not, strictly speaking, charged upon immoveable property In 1861 the plaintiff had brought a previous suit, and obtained a decree declaring his right to share in the watan, and awarding him arrears for six years Under this decree, he had received payment of his share up to the year 1860 In the present suit the plaintiff claimed arrears for twelve years, viz, from 1862 to 1874. He admitted that he had received no payment for the rate, so long as the Limitation Act, XIV of 1859, was in force, and that therefore the claim to so much of the arrears as was time-barred under that Act could not be revived by Act IX of 1871. Held that, whether Act XIV of 1859 or Act IX of 1871 applied to the plaintiff's claim, the period of limitation was twelve years Art 132 of sch. II of Act IX of 1871 was a distinct provision to that effect There was no similar provision in Act XIV of 1859, but all hereditary offices, and all payments or allowances made on account of such offices, are to be regarded as immoveable property within the meaning and intention of that Act, and are therefore governed by the provisions of cl 12 of s 1 It was also contended on behalf of the defendants that, even if the period of limitation were held to be twelve years, the plaintiff's claim was nevertheless barred in toto, inasmuch as he admitted that he had received no payment on account of his share for thirteen years preceding the institution of the suit In support of this contention, the cases of Raiji Manor v Desai Kallianrai, 6 Bom, A C, 56, and Madhavrao v. Balvant, 9 Bom, 260, were cited where it was laid down that the cause of action to establish title and the cause of action to recover arrears which rest on such title are not distinct and independent of each other so that, if the former be barred even the arrears which may be within the period of limitation cannot be recovered Held that, while this is the rule, which must be applied to cases in which a plaintiff must establish his title before he can ask for arrears accruing due under such title, the same rule does not apply where, as in the present case, the plaintiff has in a former suit obtained a decree declaratory of his title It is no longer necessary for which can be construed into a restriction of the plaintiff's right to recover the arrears falling due within the period of limitation. CHHAGANLAL v BAPUBHAI . I. L R., 5 Bom, 68

mortgage-money. Held that s. 12 of Regulation V of 1827 is not in force. That section was repealed by Act XXVIII of 1855, s. 1, and although the latter section was repealed by Act XIV of 1870, the former was not restored, there being no express provision in Act XIV of 1870 to revive it, as required by the General Clauses Act (I of 1868, s. 3). The question of the period for which interest was to be allowed was therefore to be determined by Act XV of 1877, the Act in force at the date of the institution of this suit, art. 132 of which applied; but as the rule of damdupat is not affected by Limitation Acts, the defendants could not be allowed as interest more than the amount of the principal on which it was to be paid. The land was washed away in 1892. In an action brought in 1894 under s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) for the money of both the mortgages on the ground that the defendants declined to give fresh security, the defendants objected that the claim as regards the mortgage of Sraban 1280 was barred before the inundation under cl. 132, sch. II of the Limitation Act (1877), the money being due on the date of the bond. Held, overruling the objection of limitation (1) with reference to the terms of the mortgage of Sraban 1280, that it was intended to add the money to the amount of the previous mortgage and to place it on the same conditions, and that the plaintiffs were therefore equally entitled to sue for the money upon this mortgage as upon the other. (2) That assuming that there was a right to sue for the money, it did not follow that the plaintiffs were not entitled to have substituted for the security the money which took the place of the security. That on the happening of the event provided for in s. 68, the plaintiffs, who were admittedly entitled to remain in possession of the property until the moneys had been repaid, were clearly entitled to have the money substituted for the property. mortgage-deed, which provided that, if the mortgage-debt was not paid at the stipulated time, the land should become the absolute property of G, the mortgagee. In 1871 G filed an ejectment suit against B and C and one H alleging that he had become owner of the land by operation of the above clause, and that he had subsequently let it to H, who now, in collusion with the other two defendants (the mortgagors), denied his title. The ejectment suit was subsequently converted into one for a declaration of G's title as owner as against the mortgagors, B and C, who claimed a right to redeem. A decree was passed in 1872, ordering B and C to pay R100 to G within one month, or, in default, to deliver up to him possession of the land. The money was not paid, and V as purchaser from G got possession in execution of the above decree in August 1873. In September 1885, the plaintiff, as B's heir and legal representative, filed a suit against G and V to redeem the property. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata by virtue of the decree passed in 1872, and that the right to redeem was lost. On 9th May 1872, M's son, who was then still in possession, representing himself to be the owner, mortgaged the property with possession to defendant No. 2 and S, the grandfather of defendant No. 3. These defendants sued upon their mortgage of May 1872, and obtained a decree and sold the property in 1881 in execution, purchasing it themselves. Defendant No. 3 subsequently sold his share to defendant No. 4. In 1892 the plaintiff sued the first defendant (the grandson of the original mortgagee M under the mortgage of 1842) for redemption, making defendants Nos. 2, 3, and 4 party-defendants. The defendants contended that they were purchasers for value, and that the suit was barred by art. 134 of the Limitation Act. Held that the suit was not barred, and that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem. By the sale in 1881, the interest of defendant No. 1 became vested in them. The plaintiff could then have redeemed them on paying off the amount due under the mortgage of 1842, disregarding the mortgage of 9th May 1872 altogether. But when the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 had held possession under that mortgage for twelve years (i.e., on 9th May 1884), that mortgage, under art. 134 and s. 28 of the Limitation Act, became a valid mortgage as regards the plaintiffs, and they could not after that date recover possession without redeeming it also. The purchase by defendants Nos. 2 and 3 at the auction-sale in 1881 could not avail them, as the present suit was brought within twelve years from that date. Though a mortgagee is a purchaser for value, he is not an out-and-out purchaser, but only a purchaser sub modo. He purchases a mortgagee's interest in the land, viz., a right to hold the mortgaged property until the debt is paid. A mortgagee is pro tanto a purchaser for value within the meaning of art. 134 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). MALUJI v. FAKIRCHAND of a decree against him and was purchased by the plaintiff. In 1877 B and his two brothers sold plot 1 to defendants Nos. 3—6, who at once paid off the mortgage of 1870, and took possession. On the 11th February 1877, the three brothers paid off the mortgage of 1874 of plot 2, and in the same month mortgaged that plot to the defendants with possession. On the 26th August 1890, the plaintiff sued for possession of B's share by partition and redemption if necessary. Held that the suit was barred by art. 137 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). B became entitled to possession of his share of plot 1 in 1877, when the mortgage of 1870 was paid off by the defendants, and their possession had been since then adverse to the plaintiff. As to plot 2, B had become entitled to possession of his share therein on the 11th February 1877, when the mortgage of 1874 was redeemed. Ramchandra v. *Sadashiv. I. L. 4. ——— Suit by purchaser at sale for arrears of rent of patni tenure— Cause of action —Adverse possession.—A let an under-tenure to B, which under-tenure was sold for arrears of rent under s. 105, Act X of 1859, and bought in by A. On proceeding to take possession, A found that C had trespassed upon the under-tenure during B's tenure, and had held possession for more than twelve years. A sued to recover possession of the under-tenure, and it was held by the senior Judge of the Division Bench (BAYLEY, J.) that A's cause of action was the act of dispossession by C, and that the suit was barred, more than twelve years having elapsed; and that A's right to sue was not affected by the fact that B's tenure was still running. The junior Judge (PHEAR, J.) held that the suit was not barred; that the cause of action to A accrued when he obtained back the property at the auction-sale; and that during the period of encroachment the cause of action did not arise to B and pass from B to A during the time the patni lasted, the patni entirely disappearing in the superior title of zamindar vendee. Held by the Appellate Court, in confirmation of the view of PHEAR, J., that the cause of action to A, who was a purchaser of an estate free from incumbrances against C, who was a trespasser, and had encroached on B, the defaulter, must be taken to accrue at the same time as his, A's, right to turn out under-tenants of the defaulter,—viz., from the time of the purchase of the tenure of the defaulter; and the fact that A was both talukhdar and purchaser did not prevent him from exercising the same rights as any other purchaser would be entitled to. In July 1867 B purported to adopt a son D to A, and subsequently in September 1867 obtained a certificate under Act XL of 1858 In 1872 B obtained a loan from the plaintiff M of R9,000, and to secure its repayment executed a mortgage of seven mouzahs in favour of M as guardian of D The money was advanced and mortgage executed at the instigation of R and with his consent, and upon his representation that D was the duly adopted son of A, and it was admitted that the money was specifically advanced for, as well as applied towards, the payment of decrees obtained against A in his lifetime and against his estate after his death B died in 1878 On the 14th August 1880, M instituted a suit against D upon his mortgage, and in that suit he made S a party defendant as being the purchaser of the mortgagor's interest in one of the mouzahs included in his mortgage On the 25th June 1882, M obtained a decree, declaring that he was entitled to recover the amount due by sale of the mortgaged mouzahs. In the proceedings taken in execution of that decree M was opposed by L, who was afterwards held to be a benamidar for S, who claimed that he had, on the 8th November 1880 purchased five out of the seven mouzahs, at a sale in execution of certain decrees against R On the 29th February 1884 L's claim was allowed and on the 11th August 1884 M brought this suit against L, S, R, and D, and the decree holders in the suits against R, for a declaration of his right to follow the mortgaged property in the hands of S It was found as a fact that the adoption of D was invalid that the advance by M to B was justified by legal necessity, and that L was the benamidar of S It also appeared that M had himself become the purchaser of one of the mortgaged mouzahs The lower Court gave M a decree declaring him to be entitled to recover the full amount of the mortgage money from the five mouzahs in the hands of S L and S appealed, and M filed a cross appeal, alleging the adoption to be valid and binding on S It was contended that D had acquired an absolute title by more than twelve years' adverse possession from the date of his adoption in 1867 before the purchase by S in 1880 Held that, as B died within twelve years of the alleged adoption, although under art 118, sch II, Act XV of 1877 (which came into force before the adoption could become perfected by efflux of time), a suit for a declaration that an adoption was invalid should be brought within six years from the date when the adoption becomes known to the plaintiff, still having regard to the provisions of arts. 140 and 141, the next reversioner was not thereby prevented from suing to obtain possession within twelve years from the date of the widow's death or when the estate fell into possession, and therefore that S was not barred by limitation from disputing D's title LALA PARBHU LAL v. 3. ——— Adverse possession—Cultivated and uncultivated lands.—Ghatwals.—The owners of a patni of Bishenpore sued to set aside a survey award and alter a map (1855) which demarcated certain lands as cultivated and uncultivated belonging to Government, and in the possession of ghatwals. Certain ghatwali lands, part of the zamindari of Bishenpore, had been given up to the Government by the zamindars in 1802, and the ghatwals had since paid a quit-rent to Government for the same. The plaintiffs became purchasers of the patni in 1839 under a sale for arrears. They admitted that, as to the uncultivated lands, they had never been in actual possession or in the receipt of any rents since they purchased, but they alleged that, from that time, the ghatwals fraudulently or dishonestly refused to pay them rents in respect of the cultivated lands, as they had done to their predecessors; and that the ghatwals had encroached upon the uncultivated lands. The ghatwals, on the other hand, stated that they never had paid rent to the patnidar, and that the lands were all included within those for which they paid a quit-rent to Government. Held (LOCH, J., dissenting) that the ghatwals, if proved to have been the tenants of the plaintiffs or their predecessors, could not acquire a title against them by adverse possession of twelve years. Per PEACOCK, C.J.—The issues are: (1) whether the ghatwals paid rent for the cultivated lands to the patnidar; (2) whether the cultivated or uncultivated lands form part of the patni estate; (3) whether the ghatwals were in possession of the uncultivated lands from 1839, or for a period exceeding twelve years before the commencement of the suit; (4) whether they paid rent for the same to the patnidar. In March 1879 a suit was brought by the daughters of L to recover the properties formerly belonging to their father from the hands of certain vendees. Held that the suit by the reversioners was not barred under art. 141 of Act XV of 1877, there having been no possession adverse to the widow, by dispossession, for more than twelve years, the widow's cause of action having ceased when she entered into the ikrarnama in 1846, and gave up her right to the property; nor, under s. 2 of Act XV of 1877, could the right of the plaintiffs be said to be barred by any Act repealed thereby, inasmuch as art. 142 of Act IX of 1871 prescribes the same period of limitation as is prescribed in art. 141 of Act XV of 1877: and that although, under Act XIV of 1859, repealed by Act IX of 1871, it was decided in Nobin Chunder Chuckerbutty v. *Guru Persad Doss, B. The defence was that a suit, brought by the plaintiff's mother, in her lifetime, against the same defendant, for her share, had been dismissed by a final judgment on the ground of her claim having been barred by limitation. Held that the estate, which would have devolved on the plaintiff's mother as survivor of her sisters, was similar to the inheritance of a widow, the same result following the dismissal of the daughter's suit that ensued in regard to the decree adverse to the widow in Katama Natchiar v. *Raja of Shivagunga, 9 Moore's I. 29. ———— Suit to obtain a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid or never took place—Suit for possession of immoveable property.—Art. 118 of the Limitation Act applies only to suits where the relief claimed is purely for a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid or never in fact took place. Such a suit is distinct from a suit for possession of property, and the latter kind of suit cannot be held to be barred as a suit brought under art. 118, merely by reason of its raising a question of the validity of an adoption, but is separately provided for by art. 141. It is discretionary in a Court to grant relief by a declaration of a right, and consequently the fact that a person has not sued for a declaration should not be a bar to a suit for possession of property on any ground of limitation prescribed for the former. In a suit by a person who had objected to an attachment of immoveable property in execution of a decree, and whose objection had been disallowed, to set aside the order disallowing the objection, for removal of the attachment, and for possession of the property, the defendants, at whose instance the attachment had been made, set up a title based on the adoption of the judgment-debtor by the widow of the person whom the plaintiff claimed to succeed by right of inheritance. Held that the limitation applicable to the suit was art. 141 and not art. 118, of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), the suit being not to obtain any declaration that the alleged adoption was invalid, but for recovery of possession of immoveable property, for which there was a special limitation. By his will he bequeathed certain legacies and gave four immoveable properties to his widows for their lives. The rest of his estate and, on the death of his widows, these four properties also, he left to dharma. C died in 1871; N died in 1888. The plaintiff was the son of the testator's brother G, who died in 1884. In December 1888 he filed this suit, claiming to be entitled, as heir of his uncle the testator, to the said immoveable properties and to such portion of the moveable property as had not been disposed of by the widows. He contended that the bequest in the will to dharma was void, and that the residue consequently came to him as heir. The defendants (inter alia) pleaded limitation. Held that the bequest to dharma was void, and that there was an intestacy as regards the four immoveable properties after the widows' death; and as to the residue, that the suit was not barred by limitation. The article of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) applicable was art. 141. Under that article, the plaintiff had twelve years from the death of N, which took place in 1888. Act XV of 1877 (Sreenath Kur v. Prosunno Kumar Ghose, I. L. R., 9 Calc., 934, referred to); but s. 2 of the Act of 1877 would make the old law applicable in respect of the claim to the moiety covered by the kobala by K to G, there being no collusion of the widow as regards that kobala, and more than twelve years having elapsed between the death of K in 1860 and the coming into operation of Act IX of 1871 in April 1873. (Drobomoyi Gupta v. Davis, I. L. R., 14 Calc., 323, referred to.) In the present case, however, the possession held by the heir of G was not adverse to the widow in the sense of its being obtained against her will, and there was every reason to think that it was obtained in collusion with her; the reversioner's claim was therefore not barred by limitation. Nobin Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Guru-persad Doss, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 1008: 9 W. R., 505, referred to. (4) As regards the moiety covered by the hebas, the widow, when she came into possession, was the heir of K, and she could not by any act or declaration of her own while retaining possession of her husband's estate give her possession or estate a character different from that attaching to the possession or estate of a Hindu widow; the objection that she held as donee and adversely to the reversioner therefore failed, and the claim as regards this moiety also was not barred by limitation. Lachhan Kunwar v. *Manorath Ram, I. 38. ——— Limitation applicable to reversioner.—One C S died without issue on the 6th January 1869, leaving two widows, C and N, who thereupon took a widow's estate in such of his immoveable property as was not validly disposed of by him. By his will, dated the 5th January 1869, he appointed the defendant V and two others his executors and trustees. The two latter were dead at the date of this suit. By his will he left two immoveable properties to his wife C for life and two to his wife N, and the residue of his property he left to his trustees, directing them to apply the same in charity (dharam). The properties left to his widows were to revert on their death to the charity fund held by the said trustees. C died in 1871. N survived till 1888 and died in November of that year, leaving a will. The plaintiff was the nephew (brother's son) and heir of the testator, and he sued to have his rights in and to his uncle's estate ascertained. He contended that the bequests for dharam were void, and that the property bequeathed for that purpose was undisposed of. He claimed to be entitled to the whole of the testator's immoveable property, including that which had been devised to the widows for life. The defendant pleaded that he and his co-executors had held and dealt with the estate in accordance with the testator's will, and contended (inter alia) that the plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation. Held that, under art. 141 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), the plaintiff's claim to the immoveable properties left by the testator was not barred by limitation. Held by the Privy Council in appeal on the question of limitation that the suit was not barred. The limitation, if applicable to the moveables, would have been under art. 120, and to the immoveables under art. 141, of Act XV of 1877. Art. 144, which makes the period of limitation commence from the date when the possession of the defendant is adverse to the plaintiff, does not apply where the suit is otherwise specially provided for, and therefore had no application here. At the same time s. 28 of the Act, as to the extinction of a right by the effect of limitation running against the widows, if it had done so, would not have been applicable to the plaintiff, whose right was not derived from or through the widows, but was derived through their husband on the death of the surviving widow. 39. ——— Suit by reversioner to recover possession of immoveable property alienated by intermediate female heir—Limitation Act (XIV of 1859), s. 1—Limitation Act (IX of 1871), art. 142.—A female heir in possession of immoveable property for her life can, without legal necessity, make a valid alienation of her life estate, but the possession of the alienee will not, under ordinary circumstances, be adverse to the reversioner, whose cause of action for possession of the said property will not accrue until the death of the female heir, or of the last of such heirs if more than one. One P, a separated Hindu, died about 1822, leaving two widows, H and A, and three daughters, R, J, and D. The widows took possession of the immoveable property of P, and some time before 1857 H, the survivor of them, sold a certain village to one H P. H died in 1857. The three daughters next succeeded to the estate of P, and the last of them died in 1890 without having made any attempt to interfere with the possession of the alienee. In 1894 the two sons of R sued for possession of the property which had been sold by H. Held that the suit was within time. Per BURKITT, J.—Decrees affecting immoveable property obtained against a female heir in respect of the subject-matter of the inheritance (if obtained without fraud or collusion or the like) are binding on the reversioner. An alienation made by a female heir in possession is good against her for her life, but is not necessarily binding on the reversioner, to whom, if it be invalid, a cause of action accrues on the death of the female heir. Where property, the estate in which has descended to a female heir, never reaches her hands, but is held adversely to her by a stranger, the cause of action for a suit for the recovery of the property accrues at the commencement of the adverse possession by the stranger, and a suit to enforce that cause of action will be barred, both against the female heir and against the reversioner, after the expiration of the statutory period of limitation counting from the commencement of the adverse possession, the stranger having after the expiration of that period acquired an absolute indefeasible title to the property. 10. ——————— Suit for possession—Illegal resumption by Government.—The plaintiff was possessed of an estate situate on the bank of a river, and of certain chur lands which had accreted thereto. The Collector took possession of the chur lands in 1818, upon the default of the proprietor to appear to answer a claim made by Government to assess the chur land. In 1824 a suit was filed by Government under Regulation II of 1819 for the resumption of these lands, the Government officers, however, continuing to hold possession and collect the rents. In 1847 the Collector, in conformity with a general order under Act IX of 1847, "for the abatement of all suits for the resumption of alluvial lands then pending," struck off the suit and restored the lands to the possession of the zamindar. The proprietor claimed the wasilat enjoyed by the Government during his dispossession; and the Government again dispossessed him, under the assumption that the lands were an island in the river, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to them as an accretion. The plaintiff having brought a suit in 1854 to establish his right to the lands in question,—Held that the statute of limitation was no answer to the suit, because the pendency of the suit for the resumption and assessment of the lands between 1824 and 1848 prevented the proprietor from commencing a suit during that period, and that during such period the limitation did not run; and, further, after that period the necessity for a suit was obviated by the restoration of the lands to the proprietor. Held also that a fresh cause of action accrued under the second ouster. The plaintiff urged that a fresh cause of action arose in consequence of some proceedings of the Government by which they made a new grant of the villages to the second defendant at an increased revenue. Held that such grant would not give a new cause of action, and could not affect the time when the only cause of action arose to the plaintiff. The Courts below decided in favour of the sons of the wife first married. As to one of the properties, they concurred in finding the facts entitling these sons alone, and the committee preferred not to depart from the general rule as to concurrent decisions on fact. As to the other property, both the Courts found that there had been a transfer from the name of the original benamidar into the name of the wife first married; but, whereas the first Court found that this change was intended to give her the beneficial interest, which thenceforth belonged to her, and to her sons after her, the Appellate Court found that the transfer was simply from one benamidar to another, although after the death of the mother the property had been treated as that of her sons. Accordingly, as to this the evidence was considered, and their Lordships inclined to the view taken by the first Court. However, the title not having been clearly proved, they preferred to rest their decision on the possession found. The claimants, and their father before them, having together been out of possession for more than twelve years before action brought, limitation was an absolute bar. the suit was not barred. The necessity of impugning the sale of 1863 to the second defendant arose from the second defendant's resisting the plaintiff's claim to redeem the mortgage. Held also that the second defendant, having entered into possession as mortgagee, could not afterwards set up an adverse possession as owner so as to defeat the plaintiff's right to redeem. This share she sold as if she had held an absolute interest, and the purchaser's name was entered, instead of hers, in the revenue records; but no change of possession took place till her death. To a suit brought by the cousin's heirs to recover the property purchased from the widow, more than twelve years after the sale, but less than twelve years after the widow's death, the defence was limitation under Act IX of 1871, sch. II, cl. 144, commencing from the date of the sale, there having been, it was alleged, "a breach of condition or forfeiture" within the meaning of that clause. By the terms of the arrangement contained in a solehnama, the widow was to have no power to alienate, and after her death her share was to belong to the cousin. Held that these terms prohibited only such an alienation by the widow as would prevent the cousin's succeeding after her death, and the alienation made was good for the widow's lifetime. There was no condition against such an alienation; and if there had been, there was neither any rule of law, nor anything in the words used in the solehnama, attaching forfeiture to the breach of such a condition. Held accordingly that art. 144 did not apply, and the suit was not barred by limitation. out of the "kherij jamabandi parbhare," to be levied from certain mehals and forts mentioned in the sanad. The allowances were paid till the death of the plaintiff's father on the 26th December 1859, when the Collector of Thana stopped them. On the 23rd December 1870, the plaintiffs sued to establish their right to the grant and to recover six years' arrears of the allowances. The defendant pleaded that the suit was barred by the law of Limitation. The question for consideration was whether the suit was governed by cl. 12 or cl. 16 of s. 1 of the Limitation Act (XIV of 1859). Held (per SARGENT, J.) that the grant in question was of the nature of immoveable property, and that the suit therefore fell within the provisions of cl. 12 of s. 1 of the Limitation Act (XIV of 1859). In using the expression "subject of the suit" in the rule laid down by the Privy Council in the Toda Giras case (Fatesangji v. Desai Kallianrayaji, L. R., 1 I. A., 34), their Lordships intended to include in it all the facts which determine the nature of the plaintiff's claim, and not merely of the allowance itself, and to confine the application of Hindu law to those cases in which the "subject of the suit" has such a distinctive Hindu character as that only Hindu law and usage can be legitimately invoked to determine its quality and nature. It is the fixed and permanent character of an allowance from whatever source derived, which by Hindu law entitles it to rank with immoveables. Here the grant, from the object which it had in view, was to be deemed to be one in perpetuity, and the fund out of which this perpetual allowance was to be paid was derived from a permanent source. It had therefore all the characteristics of permanency and durability which were essential to bring it, according to Hindu law, within the term "immoveable property." Held (per MELVILL, J.) that the allowance in question was not immoveable property, and that the suit therefore did not come within the provisions of cl. 12 of s. 1 of the Limitation Act (XIV of 1859). From a consideration of the judgment of the Privy Council in Fatesangji v. Desai Kallianrayaji, L. R., 1 I. A., 34, it would appear that the rule which their Lordships intended to lay down is this, viz., that, whenever it is possible to do so, the terms "immoveable property" and "interest in immoveable property" in Act XIV of 1859 must be interpreted, on general principles of construction, with reference to the nature of the thing sued for, and not to the status, race, character, or religion of the parties to the suit; but that in exceptional cases, in which the thing sued for is of such a special and exceptional character that its nature cannot be determined without reference to the special and peculiar law of a particular sect or class, in such cases, and in such cases only, the law of such sect or class may properly be referred to as furnishing a guide to the determination of the question. The Privy Council has thus laid down a rule and an exception, and the question in every case must be whether the rule or the exception ... The rule is that the terms "immoveable property" are ... terest in immoveable ... ly land and houses, and such other things as are physically incapable of being moved, but also such incorporeal hereditaments as issue out of, or are connected with, immoveable property properly so called, and which therefore savour of the realty, e.g., rights of common, rights of way, and other profits in alieno solo, rents, pensions, and annuities secured upon land,—all these clearly constitute an interest in immoveable property. Pensions and annuities not secured upon land, houses, or the like, as clearly do not constitute such an interest. When a classification can thus be made, it ought to be so made without reference to the character of the party claiming the right. But there may be cases in which the test prescribed by the rule fails, or is very difficult of application, and then will come in the operation of the exception to the rule, and it may become the duty of the Court to seek for guidance in some arbitrary definition contained in the religious law of the claimant, e.g., in the instance of an hereditary office in a Hindu community incapable of being held by any person not a Hindu. The claim now in question is a claim to an annuity granted by a Hindu sovereign to a Hindu temple. The annuity is not made a charge upon land, and it is not therefore, according to general principles of construction, immoveable property. That being so, it is not necessary to go further. 49. ——— Landlord and tenant—Suit for possession—Cause of action.—The plaintiff stated that in the year 1862 he purchased a talukh in which some of the defendants then held an ijara for a term of years expiring in 1868. The talukh had previously been a khas mehal in the possession of the Government, and was bought by the plaintiff at an auction-sale held by the Collector. The plaintiff also stated that the ijaradar defendants, in collusion with the other defendants, had continued in possession of the lands held in ijara after the term of the ijara had expired, and had refused to give up possession thereof to the plaintiff. The Judge of the lower Appellate Court found that the defendants (other than the ijaradars) had been in possession previously to the sale in 1862, and he also found that there was no evidence to support the charge of collusion with the ijaradar defendants. He therefore dismissed the suit (which was brought in 1880) on the ground of limitation. Held, on second appeal, that the plaintiff's cause of action arose on the expiration of the ijara, and that the suit, whether governed by art. 139 or 144 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), was not barred on the ground of limitation. Woomesh Chunder Goopto v. *Raj Narain Roy, 10 W. On the 18th March 1879 a suit for khas possession was alleged to belong in equal undivided shares to his stanom and that of the defendant and to be in the occupation of tenants. The cause of action was stated to have arisen in 1881 when partition was demanded by the Zamorin and refused by the defendant. In some instances the tenants in occupation represented the family, a member of which was at one time admitted by the Zamorin under a demise or kanom, and had attorned to the defendant; in other instances they were shown to have been admitted by the defendant on paying off the former tenant who had been admitted by the Zamorin. In all these instances the defendant intended the tenant who attorned to him to hold as his tenant to the exclusion of any claim by the Zamorin, but it was not shown that the Zamorin had any notice of such attempted usurpation on the part of the defendant. And on these facts the defence of limitation was raised on the ground that the land had been held for more than twelve years adversely to the Zamorin. Held (1) that Limitation Act, sch. II, art. 144, and not art. 142, was applicable to the suit, and that in the first class of cases referred to above, the tenancy under the Zamorin had not been determined, and that in the second class there had been no ouster of the Zamorin, and that consequently the suit was not barred by limitation. 73. ———— Adverse possession—Suit to recover possession of property sold at execution sale.—The plaintiff and two other members of his family, M and S, held a zamindari in the following shares, viz.,—the plaintiff ten annas, M two annas, and S four annas. Having first held the land ijmali, or joint, they agreed, in the year 1839, to effect a batwara, or private partition, and of this the result was, that parcels of land representing his ten annas share were allotted to the plaintiff, and other parcels representing their shares, which together made six annas, were allotted to M and S, who held jointly. M died in 1842, and his share came to the plaintiff. The four annas share of S was sold in execution of a decree against him in 1856, and the purchaser of it, not accepting the fact of partition, sued both S and the plaintiff in 1858 to have it declared that there had been no partition, and for a declaration of his right to possession of a four annas share of the whole estate. A decree was made to that effect in 1860, and in 1863 an appeal by S alone against this decree was dismissed by the High Court. The purchaser's heirs, he having died, obtained possession of land representing the four annas share under the decree of 1860. S then set up a title to hold part of the lands allotted under the batwara of 1839 to the six annas share on the ground that they were lakhiraj lands, and distinct from the revenue-paying villages in which his interest had passed under the execution sale. The plaintiff sued, in September 1873, the defendant, who had purchased this last alleged interest of S at another sale in execution of a decree against him, claiming that the partition having been set aside and a four

That decree was founded on a deed purporting to be a deed of conditional sale, dated the 24th December 1853, executed by the plaintiff in favour of the defendant. The plaintiff alleged that the deed was executed in order to protect the property against the claims of plaintiff's son, and the plaintiff sought to set it aside on account of defendant's breach of an agreement, dated the 16th January 1856, whereby the defendant stipulated that plaintiff's possession should not be disturbed. The defendant, inter alia, pleaded the bar of limitation against plaintiff's suit. Held that the suit was not barred by limitation, as plaintiff's cause of action only arose when defendant first practically disavowed the trust by seeking more than nominal execution of decree. 111. ——— Cause of action—Suit for possession and declaration of right to participate in permanent settlement of a mehal resumed under Beng. Reg. II of 1819.—Chur land was held by the proprietors of the adjoining estate. The chur was resumed by Government in 1835, and declared to be liable to assessment under Regulation II of 1819. The recorded proprietors of the adjoining permanently-settled estate, to which the chur was a contiguous accretion, refused to make a permanent settlement with Government at the rent demanded. The chur was then held khas by Government for some time and subsequently leased out for temporary periods to strangers. In these temporary leases Government reserved the proprietor's rights to come in and take a permanent settlement on the expiry of the temporary settlements, and also reserved an allowance of ten per cent. on the rent as malikana on their account, which sum had been kept in deposit in the Collectorate treasury. In 1867 Government made a permanent settlement with the defendant, one of the recorded proprietors of the contiguous estate, of the entire chur and refused the application of other shareholders in the estate to be joined in the settlement. The Collector, at the request of the defendants, applied the deposit in his treasury in satisfaction of the Government revenue. An unsuccessful shareholder brought a civil suit against the defendant for possession and declaration of his right to participate in the settlement. Held that the suit was not barred, as the period of limitation commenced from the date of the settlement with the defendant. On that date the vendor was not in possession of the property, although his title to it had been adjudged by a decree against which an appeal was pending. The conveyance did not contain any express promise or undertaking on the vendor's part to put the purchasers into possession. On the 5th October 1877 the purchasers sued the vendor for the possession of the property, stating that "possession was agreed to be delivered on the receipt of possession by the vendor," and that the cause of action was that the vendor had not put them into possession. Held that the suit was not one for the specific performance of a contract to deliver possession, to which art. 113 of sch. In 1883, the mortgagee brought a suit against D to obtain possession under his mortgage. Held, with reference to a plea of adverse possession for more than twelve years set up by the defendant, that the position of a person who purchased property by asserting a right of pre-emption was not analogous to that of an auction-purchaser in execution of a decree, but that such person merely took the place of the original purchaser and entered into the same contract of sale with the vendor that the purchaser was making. Within twelve years after the registration, the adopted son of the minor brother brought several suits against the purchasers to set aside the sales and recover back his share of the property, alleging that the two elder brothers had made the sale fraudulently and illegally to satisfy personal debts of their own. Held that a suit of this nature was not a suit to "set aside an order of a Civil Court" under art. 15, sch. In 1859 R alone redeemed the property and mortgaged it again to a third person. In 1882 the heirs of D and A brought a suit to redeem the whole of the property, or their portions of it. The defence to the suit was that it was barred by limitation, being brought more than twelve years after R had redeemed the property, and R's possession subsequently to such redemption having been adverse to the plaintiffs and their predecessors in title. Held that the suit was not barred by limitation. When R redeemed the property, he held it, as regards his co-sharers' interests in it, as alienor, and as such his possession was not adverse to them. It did not contradict, but rather implied and preserved, their ultimate proprietary right. In the case of a co-sharer holding after redemption, limitation is computed only from the date when the possession becomes adverse by the assertion of an exclusive title and submission to the right thus set up, in analogy to the provision which bars an excluded sharer generally after the lapse of twelve years from the time when he becomes aware of his exclusion. As long as possession can be referred to a right consistent with the subsistence of an ownership in being at its commencement, so long must the possession be referred to that right rather than to a right which contradicts the ownership. The first was redeemed by the father of defendant No. 1 alone in 1868; the second was redeemed by the defendant No. 1 more than twelve years before the suit. The parties were Mahomedans, and the plaintiff had a brother and three sisters, only one of whom (defendant No. 2) was a party to the suit. Defendant No. 1 contended that the suit was defective for want of parties, and that it was time-barred. Held that the plaintiff's brother and sisters ought to have been joined as co-plaintiffs, the defendant No. 1's possession after redemption not being adverse to them. If it was adverse at all, it was adverse to the whole of the plaintiff's branch of the family, so as to bar the right of the group altogether. In 1865 proceedings were taken by the tenants to obtain kabuliats on the footing of those documents which proceedings came to an end in 1868 In 1873 J and P instituted suits against the tenants, alleging the amulnama and dowl to be forgeries, and seeking to enhance the rents payable to them as well as to have it declared that R's acts did not bind them In these suits it was found that J and P had all along been aware of the claim made by the tenants that they held a permanent tenure, and the suits were dismissed on the ground that it was too late for J and P, after the lapse of twelve years from R's death, to raise the question In 1884 D, a receiver, instituted a suit in the names of the grandsons to eject the tenants on amongst other grounds that the grandsons reversioners were not bound by R's acts and that the jungleburi tenure was not binding on them, that the tenants were middlemen and had no right of occupancy; that at all events the plaintiffs were entitled to rent on the area of land then held by the defendants, as there had been large accretions to the amount covered by the amulnama and dowl The defendants amongst other things pleaded limitation Held that the suit was barred by limitation Adverse possession began to run on R's death (as J and P, who represented the estate, were then well aware that the tenants claimed to hold the lands under a permanent lease, and though J and P received rent, the possession of the tenants was adverse to them), and more than twelve years elapsed before Act IX of 1871 came into force, and therefore the defendants had then obtained a good title by adverse possession as against all the reversioners which could not be defeated by the provisions of the subsequent Limitation Acts of 1871 and 1877. On appeal by the defendants to the High Court,—Held, confirming the decree of the lower Courts, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the declaratory decree and to the injunction prayed for. Although the management of the vatan was vested by the sanad in the defendants and their heirs in perpetuity under the title of gomastas, nevertheless the remuneration attached to the office by Y was in derogation of his successor's rights, and was therefore, at any rate in the absence of proof of custom, invalid against them. Held also that, assuming the grant by Y to be invalid as against his successor, adverse possession would only run against the plaintiffs from the time of his death in 1871, and the present suit, having been filed within twelve years from that date, was not barred. The attachment remained in force till 1865, when Government finally decided that the inam property, with the exception of a certain portion, should be restored to those from whose possession it had been taken in 1852. Thereupon D, the successor in interest of A, applied to the Collector to be restored to possession. The Collector refused. D therefore sued him for arrears of the mokasa amals and obtained a decree in 1868. Thereafter D did not receive any payment from the Government treasury. In 1883 D filed the present suit against Government to recover possession of the inam lands together with arrears of the amals. Held also that, even if the suit were cognizable by the Civil Courts, it would be barred by limitation. The plaintiff's right to the periodical payments was barred by a total discontinuance of them for more than twelve years before the institution of the suit, notwithstanding his decree for the amals in 1868, which might establish his right to them in that particular year. Held further that the claim to the lands was also time-barred, the Collector's possession being that of an adverse holder since 1865, when the attachment was ordered to be withdrawn. The land could not properly be said to be in custodia legis, Government having taken possession of it in its own right, and not on behalf of any rival claimants thereto. Rao Karan Singh v. Baker Ali Khan, L. The plaintiff sued to oust the defendants from a certain piece of land attached to the temple, alleging that the defendants had erected shops on the land, and appropriated the rents to their own use, although it had been already decided in a suit between the parties that the land was always to be kept open and unoccupied for the use of the temple. The shavaks contended that they had been in exclusive and uninterrupted possession of the land in dispute for more than twelve years, and that by reason of such user they had acquired a quasi-proprietary title at least as against the manager of the temple. They therefore pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation. Held that the defendants had not by occupation and user acquired any title as against the plaintiff, who was the manager of the temple estate. They had come into occupation originally as servants and representatives of the deity, and during their occupation they could not by a wish change the nature of their possession. Both they and the plaintiff held the land for the same deity, and their rights could not be adverse to each other so as to give rise to a title by prescription. The only question then was as to which of them was the proper representative of the deity for the particular purpose of this suit, and that question had already been decided in a former suit in favour of the plaintiff. The mortgagor died in 1857, leaving a minor son, to whom, during the events that followed, the mortgage was unknown, and whose attempts to establish an inherited right to the mortgaged ilaka against the talukhdar were ineffectual whilst that ignorance lasted. The confiscation of 1858 had at one time swept away all rights, whether of the talukhdar, who was mortgagee, or of the mortgagor's heir, to redeem, or of any under-proprietors on the ilaka. This effect was thus counteracted. In the settlement of 1859-60, adjustments were made of the ownership of property, and in this case settlement was made with the talukhdar of his larger talukhdari estate, in which the mortgaged ilaka was at the same time incorrectly included as part. The right of redemption was restored by Act XIII of 1866, the mortgagor's heir being, however, unaware of his title to redeem any mortgage. Under-proprietary rights were restored by order of Government in 1859. Such rights were, with a sub-settlement, decreed by a Settlement Court on the 31st July 1866, in one of the villages of the mortgaged ilaka, in favour of a claimant, through whom the defendants in this suit now made title. In 1881, the mortgagor's heir, having by that time discovered the existence of the mortgage of 1854, sued the heir of the mortgagee to enforce the right to redeem. her, held, adversely to the heirs, by the widow of another co-parcener.—The plaintiffs were in the line of the heirs of an ancestor from whom, through his daughter, their grandmother, they were descendants in the third generation. In 1888 they sued the defendants, who were in possession, to recover what had been part of the family estate, alleging title according to the Mitakshara. A question whether the plaintiffs were not barred by limitation depended on whether the now disputed part of the family property had not been from the year 1843 in the adverse possession of the widow of one of their great uncles. This widow, after transferring that part of the property to a person through whom the defendants made title, died in 1886. She was the widow of the elder of two brothers, the last co-parceners of the family, who, being sons of the said ancestor, had at one time held the family estate. This elder brother, her husband, died in 1826. His younger brother survived him, and, having taken the whole estate by survivorship, died in 1833, leaving a widow, who died in 1843. The latter widow, having inherited the estate from her husband for her life-estate, there being no co-parcener left, gave a share of her inheritance to the abovementioned widow of the elder brother. So assigned, the property remained, with the addition in 1843 of the share which the younger brother's widow had kept for herself, in the possession of the other widow, the one first abovementioned. After many years, this widow transferred it to her own brother, of whom the present defendants were the heirs and representatives. It was decided below that it had not been in the right of a Hindu widow taking by inheritance from her husband that the elder brother's widow had obtained, and had dealt with, the property. A widow's estate for life never constituted a possession adverse to the reversionary heir, but here the widow, through whom the defendants claimed, had been from 1843 in adverse possession for more than twelve years. The suit was therefore barred under the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). This judgment was affirmed by their Lordships. MAHABIR PERSHAD v. ADHIKARI KOER . . . . I. L. R., 23 Calc., 942

144. ———— Purchase by conditional sale—Vendor remaining in possession as tenant holding over—Possession not shown to be adverse. —In 1866 the plaintiff bought the lands in suit by conditional sale-deed, repayable in ten years, from a third party who, under the same document, became his tenant of the said lands. Before the expiration of the ten years the vendor died, and his widow sold her right in the lands and gave possession to G, the transferor of the second defendant. On the expiration of the ten years, the sale to plaintiff became absolute, and G continued to hold over after the expiry of the lease, but there was no evidence to show that G's possession ever became hostile to plaintiff. Held that the fact that plaintiff's title ripened into full ownership on the expiration of the ten years provided by the sale-deed did not alter the character of the tenure of G, that his possession never became hostile to plaintiff; that G acknowledged the plaintiff's title in his sale-deed dated 1881 to the second defendant; and that the suit was not barred. The tenant denied the liability to pay enhanced rent, and, stating that he held the land on payment of Government assessment only, refused to quit. The inamdar, more than twelve years after the date mentioned in the notice, sued the tenant to recover enhanced rent. Held that the plaintiff's (inamdar's) right to enhance the rent and to recover the land in default of payment of such rent was barred by limitation, the tenant, so far as the right was concerned, having been holding adversely to him for more than twelve years. Held also that s. 23 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) had no application to the case. transfer, it was contended that the office and title were held in successive life-estates. If that contention had been right, the period of limitation would have commenced at the death of the plaintiff's father. The Judicial Committee were of opinion that it must be assumed that the origin of the endowment was by gift from the founder, and that, in accordance with the ruling in *Juttendromohun Tagore v. It also contained the following clause: "We will redeem the mortgaged property on the day on which we shall pay the amount of the principal and the amount of the interest that may be found due on making up the account." In 1886 the plaintiff sued the defendants to recover by sale of the property the sum of R250 as principal and interest due on the bond. The suit, in the absence of acknowledgment made within sixty years satisfying the requirements of the law of limitation for extension of that period, was barred on the 17th October 1848, by the effect of Act XIV of 1859, s. 1, cl. 15, which barred the suit after the 1st January 1862. Afterwards, by the effect of Act IX of 1871, s. 29, the right of property in the mortgagor was extinguished. In none of the documentary evidence adduced by the plaintiffs was there shown to have been made during the sixty years from the date of the mortgage onwards any written acknowledgment satisfying the requirements of the above cl. 15, and thereby giving ground for computing limitation from the date of such acknowledgment. Nor did the fact that a lease was made on the 8th January 1872 of some of the mortgaged property by one of the then mortgagees to one of the mortgagors, the lessor describing himself as usufructuary mortgagee, preclude the defendants from asserting their true title. The description neither estopped the alleged mortgagee from denying that he was in that character at the time of this suit, nor was it a representation which required that he should make it good. It was no essential part of a contract between these parties, and it did not affect the issue now raised. The judgment in Citizens Bank of Louisiana v. *First National Bank of New Orleans, L. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Such period begins to run from the date when the original mortgage was redeemable, and not from the date of its redemption by the aforesaid co-mortgagor. In 1828 one of several co-mortgagors redeemed an usufructuary mortgage executed in 1822 and obtained possession. The other mortgagors brought a suit against the heir of the redeeming mortgagors in 1886 for redemption of their shares in the mortgaged property. Held that the limitation applicable to the suit was that provided by art. 148, sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877); that time ran, not from the date of the redemption in 1828, but from the time when it would have run against the original mortgagee if he had been a defendant, i.e., the date of the original mortgage of 1822; and that the suit was therefore barred by limitation. Nura Bibi v. *Jagat Narain, I. 20. ———— Limitation Act (IX of 1871), s. 148—Acknowledgment of title by one of several mortgagees as agent for the others—Acknowledgment by one of several heirs of the mortgagee—Redemption, Suit for.—Under art. 148 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1871), an acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title by one of several mortgagees as agent for the others is wholly ineffectual, and does not bind the rest. So, too, is an acknowledgment by one of several heirs of the original mortgagee without effect. The expression "some persons claiming under him" in art. 148 of the Act means some person claiming under him the entirety of the mortgagee's rights. The property in dispute was mortgaged by H B to the firm of K B in 1816. In 1830 J, one of the sons and heirs of K, who was then manager of the firm, on behalf of the whole family, sub-mortgaged the property in dispute to a third party, under a bond which recited the original mortgage by H B to K. In 1885 the defendant, who was a descendant of K, redeemed the sub-mortgage effected by J. In 1887 the plaintiff, having purchased the equity of redemption from H B's descendants, filed the present suit for redemption of the mortgage of 1816. The plaintiff relied on the acknowledgment made by J in 1830 as giving a fresh starting point to limitation. Held that the suit was barred by limitation. The acknowledgment by J, whether as manager of the firm or as one of the heirs of the original mortgagee, was not sufficient under art. 148 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1871). Art. 148, and not art. 132, applies to such a suit; but no provision of limitation is made by the article for the payment of interest on the sum due to the mortgagee. The judgment-debtor applied unsuccessfully to have the sale set aside for irregularity. He had applied, before the sale took place, to stay the sale on the ground that the right to apply for execution was barred. This application was dismissed, but was allowed on appeal. It did not appear that the auction-purchaser was a party to the proceeding, or that he was cognizant of the application. Two years from the date of the sale, and one and a half years from its confirmation, the judgment-debtor on a summary application obtained an order setting aside the sale and putting the auction-purchaser out of possession. Held that the order was erroneous, the Judge having no power, after the sale had been confirmed, to set aside the sale by a summary order, and that under art. 165 of Act XV of 1877 the application for such an order was barred. An order for delivery of possession was made; but a third party having obstructed, the order was returned unexecuted. No further proceedings were taken by the agent. The applicant, having come of age, applied for delivery of possession within three years from the date of his attaining majority, but more than thirty days after the date of the obstruction and more than thirty days after he came of age. The Subordinate Judge rejected the application as barred, being of opinion that the omission to apply, within thirty days from the date of the obstruction, on the part of the applicant's agent, as well as the applicant's omission to do so within a similar period after he came of age, barred the applicant whose remedy lay in a fresh suit. Held by the High Court that the application was rightly rejected. It was virtually an attempt to renew the old proceedings, and was barred by art 167 of sch II of the Limitation Act. ——— and art. 178—Substitution of the heirs of deceased defendant—Civil Procedure Code, 1889, ss. 368, 372—Substitution of parties.—After the institution of a suit for dissolution of a partnership, two of the defendants died. More than a year after their death, the plaintiffs applied to have the legal representatives of the deceased entered on the record. The Subordinate Judge granted this application, holding that the case was governed by s. 372 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), and that the application was therefore within time under art. 178 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held that the case was governed by s. 368, and not s. 372, of the Civil Procedure Code. The application for substitution of the heirs of the deceased defendants ought to have been made within six months, as provided by art. 175C of the Limitation Act and was barred unless the delay was sufficiently explained. 35. ———— Application for resale in execution of decree—Continuous proceedings.—Upon an application made on the 28th August 1891, for execution of a mortgage decree, the mortgaged property was sold, and the judgment-debtors purchased it benami at a low price. Thereupon the decree-holders made an application, on the 12th November 1891, asking the Court to set aside the benami purchase and resell the property. The first Court found that the purchase was not benami, and confirmed the sale on the 12th April 1892, but the lower Appellate Court came to a contrary conclusion, and set aside the sale on the 22nd July 1892. The High Court, in second appeal, accepted the finding of the Appellate Court as regards the purchase being benami, but upheld the sale with the remark that the said property and any other property of the debtors might be sold in satisfaction of the mortgage-debt. This judgment was passed on the 4th August 1893. On an application for execution made on the 3rd December 1894, an objection was raised on the ground of limitation. Held that the application of the 3rd December 1894 might be regarded as a continuation of the application of the 12th November 1891, for resale of the property; and as the decree-holders were precluded by the first Court's finding of the 12th April 1892, from asking for sale until it was reversed by the lower Appellate Court on the 22nd July 1892, and finally by the High Court on the 4th August 1893, the application was in time under art. 178, sch. 47. ———— Application for execution of decree.—An application for execution of a decree, made on the 29th May 1874, having been rejected, an appeal was preferred to the High Court, which reversed the order of the lower Court. The property of the judgment-debtor had been attached previously to the application for execution, and part of it was afterwards sold on the 6th September 1875. A subsequent application to have a further portion of the attached property sold was rejected on the 17th September 1875, on the ground that not only part of the property, but the whole of it might have been sold on the 6th September. There being nothing to show that the attachment had ever been withdrawn on the 31st December 1877, the judgment-creditor applied that the property of his debtor might be sold in execution of the decree. Held that nothing had been done by the judgment-creditor since his application for execution, of the 29th May 1874, "to enforce the decree or kept it in force" (as defined by the Full Bench decision in Chunder Coomer Roy v. *Bhogobutty Prosunno Roy, 1 C. The property was attached, but the sale was delayed by various causes until the 5th February 1876, when it was ordered to take place on the 18th March 1877. Meanwhile P brought a suit against J, and on 14th March 1876 he obtained an injunction restraining J from proceeding, pendente lite, to the sale of the attached property. J appealed against the order granting the injunction, which, however, was confirmed on the 26th June 1878. Meanwhile, on the 22nd January 1877, J had died, and thereupon the proceedings in the matter of the injunction as well as in P's suit were carried on by G as his representative. On the 19th January 1880, P's suit was dismissed, and with it the injunction of the 14th March 1876 fell to the ground. On the 5th February 1880, G applied to have his name substituted for that of J in the application for execution of the 16th September 1869, and to proceed with the case; and on the 19th February 1880 this application was granted, and an order made that execution should be proceeded with on J's application of September 1869. K, as representing the firm of M R, appealed. Held that G was entitled to execution. Where an application for execution has been made and granted, but the right to execute has been subsequently suspended by an injunction or other obstacle, the decree-holder may apply for a revival of the proceedings within three years from the date on which the right to apply accrues, viz., the date on which the injunction or other obstacle is removed (art. 178 of sch. II of Act XV of 1877). Where a decree-holder, whose right of execution has been thus temporarily suspended, dies, his representative has the same rights as he had himself to apply for and obtain a revival of the proceedings. It was contended in the above case that G had no right to apply for a revival of proceedings, unless his name was substituted on the record as J's representative; that as his right to apply for such substitution accrued immediately upon J's death, which had happened more than three years previously, so much of his application of 3rd February 1880 as related to the substitution of names was barred by art. 178 of sch. II of Act XV of 1877; and that consequently the other portion of his application which related to execution was necessarily inadmissible, inasmuch as it depended upon the substitution of G's name, which it was too late to effect. Held that, under the circumstances of the case, G's right to apply for the entry of his name in the place of that of J could not be regarded as having accrued immediately upon J's death. At that time J's application for execution, being suspended by the injunction, was to all intents and purposes non-existent. It could not be revived until the injunction was removed. During the continuance of the injunction, an application by G for the entry of his name could not have been entertained by the Court, inasmuch as J's application for execution was in abeyance and would never be revived at all in the event of P succeeding in his suit; and even if P failed, it might also happen that J's application would not be revived in favour of G, for

Art. 178, sch. II, Limitation Act (XV of 1877), must be construed with reference to the wording of the other articles, and can relate only to applications ejusdem generis. A suit was instituted for possession of certain land on which stood a factory. In proof of the claim, the plaintiffs filed in Court a sarkhat or lease which was pronounced by the Munsif to be a forgery. Plaintiffs appealed up to the High Court, where, on the 24th June 1886, the Munsif's decree was affirmed. Defendants then applied to the Munsif for sanction to prosecute the plaintiffs for the offence of using a forged document knowing the same to be forged. The Munsif refused to sanction the prosecution prayed for; but on application to the Sessions Judge such sanction was granted. On application to revise the Sessions Judge's order granting sanction, it was contended that, after the lapse of nearly three years, sanction to prosecute should not have been granted. Held that there is no fixed period of limitation for making application for sanction under s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code. 10. ———— Act IX of 1871, s. 1—Execution of decree in suit instituted before 1st April 1873.—An application for execution of a decree is an application in the suit in which that decree has been obtained. From this, and from the enactment in s. 1 of Act IX of 1871 that nothing contained in s. 2, or in Part II of that Act, shall apply to suits instituted before the 1st April 1873, it follows that nothing contained in sch. II of that Act extended to an application for execution of a decree in a suit instituted before that date. No such application was barred by s. 20 of Act XIV of 1859, if made within three years from the date of a proceeding within the meaning of that section. Although the execution of a decree may have been actuallly barred by time at the date of an application made for its execution, yet, if an order for such execution has been regularly made by a competent Court, having jurisdiction to try whether it was barred by time or not, such order, although erroneous, must, if unreversed, be treated as valid. On the 28th March 1881 a further application for execution of the decree was made. Held that the deposit of R2 as nilamee fees on the 8th July 1878 was a step in aid of execution of a decree, and that the application of the 28th March 1881, being within three years from the date of the deposit, was not barred by limitation. Quære—Whether, inasmuch as Act IX of 1871 is repealed by Act XV of 1877, and the latter Act contains no provision similar to that contained in s. 1 of Act IX of 1871, Act XIV of 1859 can be said to have been repealed in respect of suits instituted before the 1st of April 1873. He first applied for its execution in 1874, and his application was disposed of on the ground that the requisite Court-fee had not been paid. His next application was in 1876, and it was disposed of because no property could be found to satisfy the decree. His third application, made on the 10th of March 1879, was one asking merely that the decree might be kept alive. He now applied for the fourth time on the 26th of November 1881, and sought execution of the decree. Held that the law of limitation applicable to proceedings in execution is not the law under which the suit was instituted, but the law in force at the date of the application for execution, in absence of a legislative provision to the contrary (such as that contained in s. 1 of Act IX of 1871). The law of limitation therefore to be applied to the application of the 10th March 1879 was Act XV of 1877; and, inasmuch as that application did not ask for any step to be taken towards executing the decree, it was not in accordance with art. 179, sch. of the Vadagalai sect residing in a certain village were plaintiffs, and various members of the Tengalai sect residing in the same village were defendants, it was held that an image of a priest revered by the latter sect was not entitled to a place in a certain temple of the village, or to procession in the streets of the village; and it was directed that, if the defendants continued to make the image an object of public worship, it should be removed. In 1888 various members of the Vadagalai sect, asserting that the members of the Tengalai sect had acted in contravention of the decree in the above suit, filed an execution-petition therein, praying that various members of the Tengalai sect be arrested, and "that the image of their priest, which they attempt to worship publicly, be removed until they obey the terms of the decree." It appeared that in 1868 the District Magistrate had granted an application to restrain the Tengalais from acting contrary to the above decree. This darkhast was opposed by a third party, who was in possession of the property. The decree-holder thereupon applied to the Court to have the obstruction removed. This application was registered under s. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), as a suit between the decree-holder as plaintiff and the party who offered the obstruction as a defendant. On the 22nd January 1891, the decree-holder withdrew this latter suit. Thereupon his darkhast of the 7th March 1889 was struck off the file. On the 12th November 1892, he presented a second darkhast for execution. Held that the second darkhast was barred by limitation. The decree-holder having failed to remove the obstruction under s. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the second darkhast could not be treated as a continuance or revival of the first. Kalyanbhai v. *Ghanashamlal, I. 39. ———— Suit to set aside an order in a claim case—Continuation of previous application.—Upon an application for execution, dated the 13th March 1891, the judgment-debtor's property having been attached, a claim was preferred by a third party and allowed. The decree-holder brought a suit for a declaration that the property belonged to the judgment-debtor, and the suit was decreed. The decree-holder thereupon made an application for execution on the 16th July 1894, more than three years after his previous application. Held that the order in the claim case operated as a temporary bar to the execution proceedings, and it was not until the removal of that bar by a suit which the decree-holder was compelled to institute that he was placed in a position to proceed with the execution. The present application, made subsequently to the removal of the bar, should be treated as a continuation of the previous application which was admittedly in time; and the execution was not barred by limitation. Ragunandun Pershad v. *Bhugoo Lall, I. Subsequently he sued K on a bond which she had personally executed in his favour, and obtained a decree. On the 7th September 1875 he applied for execution of both these decrees, and S's landed estate, which stood recorded in K's name, was attached. This estate was sold on the 20th February 1877, being put up for sale in one lot, in satisfaction of both decrees, in accordance with an application made by G on the 16th February, and was purchased by G for the amount of the decrees. This sale was subsequently confirmed, and on the 10th December 1877, satisfaction of the decrees was entered up, and the execution proceedings struck off the file. Subsequently three of the heirs of S in one case, and two in another, instituted suits against G claiming to recover from him such portion of the proceeds of the sale of S's property as had been appropriated to the discharge of G's decree against S, and such heirs obtained decrees for certain sums, which G was obliged to pay. G thereupon, on the 16th May 1879, applied for execution of his decree against S. Held that such application was not one in continuation of that made on the 7th September 1875, but was a fresh application, and the application made by G on the 16th February 1877 was not one for a step in aid of execution within the meaning of art. 179, sch. The attachment was disputed, and ultimately, on the 16th July 1875, was raised. In the same year the appellant brought a suit for a declaration that the property in question was liable to attachment, which was finally rejected on the 8th July 1880. On the 30th November following, the appellant applied for the arrest of the respondent. The lower Court rejected the application as not being made within three years of the decree, as provided by Act XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 179. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the execution process last applied for was distinct in its nature from, and in no way a continuance or revival of, the previous proceedings in execution, and was therefore made too late, more than three years having elapsed since the passing of the decree. Where an appeal had been perferred to Her Majesty in Council from a decree of the High Court reversing the decree of the Court of first instance, and the High Court's decree was affirmed by an order of Her Majesty in Council dated the 15th February 1873, and an application for execution for the High Court's decree was made on the 17th November 1875, more than three years after the date of the decree, but within that period of the order of Her Majesty in Council,—Held that, under art. 167 of sch. The Appellate Court affirmed such decree on the 20th November 1877. On the 23rd September 1880 the holder of such decree applied for execution against B. Held that, so far as B was concerned, limitation should be computed from the date of such decree, and not from the date of the decree of the Appellate Court, and such application was therefore barred by limitation. 74.———— Appeal by some only and not all of the defendants—Amendment of decree—Review of judgment.—On the 7th July 1864 a District Court gave the plaintiff in a suit a decree against all the defendants, including B. All the defendants appealed to the Sudder Court from such decree, except B. The Sudder Court, on the 6th March 1865, set aside such decree and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed to Her Majesty in Council from the Sudder Court's decree, all the defendants except B being respondents to this appeal. Her Majesty in Council, on the 17th March 1869, made a decree reversing the Sudder Court's decree and restoring that of the District Court. On the 9th October 1869 the plaintiff applied for execution of the District Court's decree, and such decree was under execution up to July 1872. On the 9th October 1874 the plaintiff applied for amendment of such decree in certain respects, it being incapable of execution in those respects. B was a party to this proceeding. On the 16th August 1876 such decree was amended; and the plaintiff subsequently applied for its execution as amended against all the defendants. Held that the application of the 9th October 1869 was within time, computing from the date of the decree of Her Majesty in Council. Chedoo Lal v. *Nand Coomar Lal, 6 W. The plaintiff appealed as to the $\frac{7}{72}$ share only He made all the defendants respondents to the appeal, but the name of the first defendant was afterwards struck out, as he could not be served with notice His interests, however, were identical with those of defendants Nos 3 to 7 On the 30th July 1892 the plaintiff's appeal was dismissed On the 3rd July 1895 the plaintiff applied for execution of the original decree. The defendants contended that, as the appeal related only to that part of the decree which related to the $\frac{7}{72}$ share of the second defendant, the rest of the decree was unaffected by the appeal, and that consequently the plaintiff's application for execution of that decree was barred under art 179 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), not having been made within three years from the 26th June 1891 Held that the application was not barred The date of the appellate decree, and not that of the original decree, was the date from which limitation began to run. Per PARSONS, J—The word "appeal" in art 179 does not mean only an appeal against the whole decree and by which the whole decree is imperilled, it means any appeal by any party Per RANADE, J—Except in the case where a nominally single decree awards separate reliefs against separate defendants, the words of art 179 must be construed in their natural sense as permitting an extension of limitation where an appeal is preferred and is not withdrawn ABDUL RAHIMAN v MAIDIN SAIBA

The Appellate Court, on the 18th September 1878, reversed the order of the first Court, and directed that the partition of the property

On the 30th November 1891, the plaintiff appealed as to the balance of his claim; but the appeal was dismissed by the District Court on the 1st June in 1892 and by the High Court on the 31st May 1894. On an application, on the 1st June 1895, by the assignee of the original decree-holder, to execute the said decree, an objection was raised by the judgment-debtor that execution was barred by lapse of time. Held that art. 179, sch. II, cl. (2), of the Limitation Act applied to the case, the period of limitation ran from the date of the final decree of the Appellate Court, and the application for execution, being within three years from that date, was within time. Sakhalchand Rikhawdas v. *Velchand Gujar, I. Against that decree all the defendants except defendant No. 1 appealed, and on 2nd July 1887 so much of the decree was reversed as made the appealing defendants liable for damages, but was affirmed in all other respects. A second appeal by the plaintiff from the decree of the Appellate Court was dismissed by the High Court on 9th July 1888. An application for execution of the decree was made by the plaintiff on 7th July 1891, within three years from the date of the final decree dated 9th July 1888. Defendant No. 1 objected that limitation as against him would run from 21st May 1886, there being no appeal by or against him from the decree of that date. Held that limitation against defendant No. 1 would run from date of decree in appeal, therefore the application for execution was not barred by limitation. Gunga Mooye v. *Shib Sunker, 3 C. 82. ———— Ex-parte decree—Application to set decree aside—Appeal from order rejecting application—Subsequent application for execution of decree more than three years after date of decree.—The plaintiff obtained an ex-parte decree against the defendant on the 16th March 1886. The defendant applied to have the decree set aside. His application was finally rejected by the Appellate Court on 5th March 1887. The decree-holder presented a darkhast for execution of the decree on 24th September 1889. Held that the darkhast was time-barred under art. 179, cl. 2, of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). The appeal referred to in that clause is clearly an appeal from the decree or order sought to be executed, and not an appeal from an order of the Court refusing to set it aside. The unsuccessful attempts made by the defendants to set aside the ex-parte decree could not have the effect of extending the period prescribed by law for execution of the decree. 83. ———— Execution of decree—Appeal by plaintiff against part of decree making all defendants respondents—Execution of part of decree not appealed against.—On the 23rd March 1886 the plaintiff obtained a decree in the Court of first instance against five defendants, declaring his right to certain specific immoveable property, which was, however, modified on an appeal preferred by the defendants, the decree of the lower Appellate Court giving the plaintiff a decree for only two-thirds of the property claimed, and dismissing his suit in respect of the remaining one-third in favour of defendants Nos. 2 and 4. The lower Appellate Court's decree was dated the 13th July 1886. Against that decree plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court, making all the defendants respondents, which appeal was, however, dismissed on the 16th June 1887. The plaintiff on the 13th June 1890 applied for execution of the decree in his favour in respect of the two-thirds of the property held to belong to him, and defendants Nos. 1 and 5 objected on the ground that the right to execution was barred, limitation running from the 13th July 1886, the date of the lower Appellate Court's decree in the plaintiff's favour. Held that limitation ran from the 16th June 1887, and that the application was not therefore barred. All the defendants were parties to the second appeal, and the Court to which the application was made for execution was not bound, before allowing execution, to go into all the circumstances of that appeal and consider whether the decree of the lower Appellate Court in favour of the plaintiff for the two-thirds of the property was or was not practically secure; the High Court had all the parties before it, and, if it had been right to do so, might have altered the decree against any of them. Quære—Whether under such circumstances the Legislature could have intended the Court executing a decree to go into questions so complicated as to whether in such a case the whole decree was or might have been or become imperilled in the Court of Appeal, and whether the plain words of art. 179 might not be followed with less of possible inconvenience and complexity, even though in some cases it might result in execution of a decree going against a defendant a little more than three years after such decree was practically secure against him. Nundun Lall v. *Rai Joykishen, I. decree for land against four defendants, a compromise was made between the plaintiff and the third defendant The first and fourth had acknowledged the plaintiff's right. The second and third had defended the suit, and the decree had been made and affirmed on appeal to the High Court, jointly and severally against the first three and conditionally against the fourth An application by the second and third defendants for leave to appeal to Her Majesty was withdrawn, the two parties to the compromise having obtained an order for amendment of the decree in its terms For the execution of the decree against the three defendants, other than the third, as to the proportionate part of the property sued for, and not the subject of the compromise, the decree holder afterwards obtained an order This order was reversed by the High Court Hence this appeal Held that the order directing the amendment of the decree in the terms of the compromise was beyond the powers of the High Court, and was without operation either in favour of or against those defendants who had not been parties to the petition for that amendment Held also on the decree holder's petition for execution of the decree that the period of limitation commenced from the date of the primary, and not of the amended, decree of the High Court Execution was therefore barred by limitation Instead of attempting the alteration in the decree, the High Court could properly have made the compromise a rule of Court, and have stayed all proceedings against the defendant who was a party to it, except for the purpose of enforcing it against him. On the 13th September 1881 the legal representative of the deceased decree-holder, who had meantime died, applied, with reference to the order of the Appellate Court dated the 18th September 1878, to have lots drawn in accordance with that order. Held, on the question whether this application was barred by limitation, that, if it were regarded as nothing more than an application for execution of the original decree, it might be barred, inasmuch as it had been made more than three years after the date of the last application, and it was doubtful whether the 2nd clause in the 3rd column of art. 179, sch. II of Act XV of 1877, would apply, since the appeal there referred to is probably an appeal from the decree or order of which execution is being taken, referred to in the first clause of that article, and not an appeal in course of execution of that decree or order; that, however, the order of the Appellate Court, dated the 18th September 1878 was itself of the nature of a decree and capable of execution, and for the execution of which an application could be made to which that article would apply; that the application in question should be regarded as one for execution of that order; and that therefore, so regarding, it was within time. 91. ———— Execution of decree.—Art. 179, cl. (2), of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) must be construed as intended to apply without any exceptions to decrees from which an appeal has been lodged by any of the parties to the original proceedings, and should certainly be applied to cases where the whole decree was imperilled by the appeal. A suit for pre-emption was decreed against the vendors, the purchaser, and another set of pre-emptors in March 1882. The last-mentioned defendants alone appealed, and their appeal was dismissed in May 1882. In May 1885 the decree-holders applied for execution of the decree. The application was objected to by the purchaser as barred by limitation, having been filed more than three years from the passing of the decree, and it was contended that art. 179, cl. This order was upheld on appeal in March 1885. While the appeal was pending, the decree-holder in May 1884 applied to the Court of first instance to amend the decree under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, and in December 1884 the application was granted. In April 1885 an application was made for execution of the amended decree, the decree-holder contending that limitation should be calculated from the date of the amendment, and that art. 178 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) applied to the case. Held that art. 179, and not art. 178, was applicable; that the order rejecting the application of the 19th February 1884 became final on being upheld on appeal; that the amendment could not revive the decree or furnish a fresh starting-point of limitation; and that the application was therefore time-barred. Mangal Persad Dichit v.

The prayer was for issue of notice on the judgment-debtor for delivery of possession, for attachment and sale of certain immoveable properties, for realization of costs and damages decreed. Notice under s. 248 of the Code of Civil Procedure was issued on the judgment-debtors on 8th September 1891. The judgment-debtors objected that, as the application did not contain the right number of suit and date of decree, it was not in accordance with law, and as no other application had been made within three years from date of decree, the execution was barred by limitation. Held that material defects only could vitiate an application, and as the defects in the present application for execution were not material, it was not barred by limitation. Asgar Ali v. *Troilokya Nath Ghose, I. That decree was set aside, but another decree was passed in his favour on the 21st of September 1886. The decree-holder made several applications to execute the decree, but in each described the decree as of the 25th November 1885. On the third application the judgment-debtor objected that the application was time-barred. In December 1880 the first application for execution was made. Through mistake execution was sought against C herself as 'widow of B,' and not as guardian of the minor N. That application was granted, and certain property belonging to the minor was attached. On the 29th November 1883 the second application for execution was made against the minor as represented by his guardian, C. The present application for execution was made on the 3rd December 1884. This application was rejected as time-barred by the District Court on appeal, on the ground that the first application, having been made against a wrong person, could not be taken into account; that therefore it could not keep the decree alive, and that the present application was barred. Held, reversing the decision of the lower Court, that the decree-holder ought not to be deprived of the fruit of his decree on account of a technical defect in his application of 1880. 171. ——— Application for relief outside the decree—"Step in aid of execution."—The application for execution contemplated in clause (4) of art. 179 of sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) must be one made in accordance with law, and asking to obtain some relief given by the decree, and to obtain it in the mode that the law permits. A decree provided that the defendant should pay the plaintiff R156 within one month, and that, on receipt of this sum, the plaintiff should execute a deed of sale to the defendant. The decree was dated 29th January 1881. The first application for execution was made on the 24th January 1884, but dismissed for plaintiff's default. The plaintiff made a second application, dated 22nd January 1887, praying to be put in possession of a certain house which was not awarded by the decree. This application was rejected. On the 23rd June 1887 the plaintiff made a third application for execution of the decree. Held that this application was barred by limitation, having been made more than three years after the date of the first application. The intermediate application was not an application for execution, nor a step in aid of execution, of the decree, inasmuch as it asked for what the decree did not give. It could not therefore keep the decree alive under art. 179, sch. II of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). PANDARINATH BAPUJI v. LILACHAND HATIBHAI

Whenever it is desirable for a Magistrate to view the place at which an occurrence, the subject-matter of a judicial investigation before him, has taken place, he should be careful to confine himself to such a view of the place as to enable him to understand the evidence placed before him, and should take care that no information reaches him with reference to the occurrence which he has to investigate beyond what he acquires by that view, and if the place of the occurrence be in dispute, he would be wise in postponing his visit till all the evidence has been recorded, if under such circumstance he feels disposed to visit it at all. But where a local enquiry by a Magistrate takes the form of an investigation into the occurrence on the site of the occurrence instead of in his own Court, and he takes evidence on the spot, such evidence should not be recorded unless it is protected by all the safeguards by which evidence on which a Judge may act is protected by law. The guardian of such a lunatic's person is, in matters connected with the guardianship, subordinate to the District Court which appointed him. A guardian, having obtained leave from the District Judge to take the lunatic out of the jurisdiction for a specified time, was, at the expiration of that time, ordered to return with the lunatic to his residence within the local jurisdiction. He failed to comply with the order. Without further notice, the District Judge, by certain orders which he gave, by letter and telegram, through the manager of the lunatic's estate, suspended the guardian from his office, and directed him to make over the custody of the lunatic to the manager. The guardian made over the custody accordingly and then applied to the High Court, under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside those orders and restore the custody of the lunatic to him at Calcutta (outside the jurisdiction of the Court to which the lunatic was subject). Subsequent to the institution of the suit, B was adjudged to be of unsound mind under Act XXXV of 1858, and A was appointed a manager of the lunatic's estate. Held that A had no right to sue, as next friend of the lunatic, under ch. XXXI of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). The provisions of that chapter apply only in cases where there has been an adjudication of lunacy under Act XXXV of 1858 previously to the institution of the suit. Held also that, independently of the provisions of ch. XXXI of the Code of Civil Procedure, on principles of equity, A had no right to sue in respect of the immoveable property of a lunatic. Held further that the adjudication of lunacy under Act XXXV of 1858 and A's appointment as manager of the lunatic's estate subsequent to the institution of the suit did not cure the original invalidity of his proceedings in the suit. V of 1804—Estates of lunatics subject to Mofussil Courts—Act XXXV of 1858—Code of Civil Procedure, s. 464.*—A Jain, who was subject to the Aliyasantana law, made a will, whereby he disposed of the property of his family in favour of certain persons, and died. The plaintiff, a female, was the sole surviving member of the testator's family, but it was admitted that she was, and for more than fifty years had been, a lunatic, though she had not been declared to be so under Act XXXV of 1858: it appeared that her lunacy was not congenital. She sued, by the Collector of South Canara, the Agent for the Court of Wards. Held (1) that the plaintiff was not excluded from inheritance by reason of lunacy under Aliyasantana law, and the will in favour of the defendants was invalid; (2) that the Court of Wards had power to take cognizance of the plaintiff's case under Madras Regulation V of 1804; (3) that although the Court of Wards should ordinarily obtain a declaration under Act XXXV of 1858 in cases where the lunacy of a ward is open to question, their failure to do so in the present case was not fatal to the suit; (4) that Civil Procedure Code, s. 464, was accordingly applicable to the case; (5) that the appointment of the Collector as guardian to the plaintiff was legal and valid. In deciding what was the extent of the property which the plaintiff was entitled to inherit under the above rulings, certain documents adduced as evidencing partition of the family property were held to evidence merely arrangements for separate enjoyment. The manager of the lunatic's estate is the only person who can institute such a suit. The word "guardian" in s. 440 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) as amended by Act VIII of 1890, when applied to a lunatic, means the manager of his estate. When the plaint was actually filed, K's name was struck out by the pleader and N. Subsequently his name was restored on his own application, but the period of limitation prescribed for the suit had then elapsed. The first Court held that under s. 7 of the Limitation Act the plaintiff's claim was not barred. On appeal the Judge dismissed the suit, holding that the order of the first Court restoring K's name was bad, and that the suit was time-barred at the date of that order. On second appeal,—Held, reversing the decree, that the pleader and N acted beyond their authority in striking out K's name, and that therefore the restoration of his name must relate back to the filing of the suit, which was therefore not barred. Quære—Whether a person of unsound mind, but not adjudged to be so under Act XXXV of 1858, can in this country sue by his next friend. The Municipality, having resolved that a portion of the land was required for widening a public lane, ordered the applicant to abstain from building on it, and granted a license for a building to be erected on the remaining portion. The landowner, however, erected a building upon the whole of the land. The Municipal Council then called upon her to demolish the building erected on the portion of the land which had not been licensed. This notice was not complied with. The landowner was then prosecuted and convicted under ss. 180, 263, and 264 of the Act. Held that neither of the above-mentioned orders of the Municipal Council were legal, and consequently that no offence had been committed by the landowner. Semble—Madras Act IV of 1884, s. 264, does not empower a Magistrate to impose a fine prospectively in respect of the period during which a person convicted of the offence of omitting to comply with a notice to execute any work may continue to leave such work unexecuted. A Forest Settlement Officer has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit in which such a claim is made, and such a suit brought by discharged forest karnams is barred by s. 4 of the Pensions Act. A Forest Settlement Officer is a "Civil Court" for the purposes of the Pensions Act. If a Court of limited jurisdiction exceeds its powers and adjudicates on a claim over which it has no jurisdiction, the Court (if any) which exercises appellate jurisdiction over it is bound to entertain an appeal preferred against the lower Court's decision, and to correct the error. A Court of competent appellate jurisdiction in such a case is not bound by an order made without jurisdiction by a Collector on an appeal to him in the same suit. (iii) of s. 64 of the Local Boards Act (Madras), 1884. The landholder distrained on the tenant's property in respect of the whole amount of local cess payable in respect of the land, contending that it should be calculated on the rent value, which was admittedly R710. It was found that under a custom subsisting in the district the whole amount of the local cess was payable by the tenant. Held that, having regard to s. 73 of the said Act, such a custom must be unreasonable and invalid. The words "favourable rent" in s. 64, sub-s. (iii), of the Act mean rent which, at the time of the assessment being fixed, is favourable as compared with the ordinary rent of similar lands in the vicinity, and has nothing to do with the question whether the rent, as fixed at the time when the lease was granted, was favourable or unfavourable. The owner, who was a potter and cultivator by occupation, was in the village at the time. He did not pay the tax. A warrant of distress was issued, the house-register not having been completely filled up, and a bucket and spade belonging to the defaulter were attached. The defaulter successfully resisted the distraint. Held that the provisions of the Act had been sufficiently complied with as regards the preliminary steps for making the demand and the service of notice, and the fact that the spade and the bucket were protected from attachment under s. 94 did not justify the resistance, and accordingly that the defaulter was guilty of offences under Penal Code, ss. 186 and 353. ——— s. 192, Case referred under—Right of Municipal Commissioners to levy water-tax—Condition precedent—Independent power—Construction of statutes.—The Madras Municipal Act is not a " private " Act. When a public body is entrusted by the Legislature with the duty of making public improvements, and powers are entrusted to it for such purpose, those powers will not be subject to a restrictive construction, though they interfere with private rights. A statute is not to be construed like a contract. The power to impose a tax is not contractual and needs no correlative right. An equitable construction is not permissible in a taxing statute where it is possible to adhere to the words of the statute. B resided within the City of Madras and occupied premises within a division or district of the city in which no water had been introduced by the Municipal Commissioners. The Commissioners levied a water-tax on B in respect of his premises. B appealed under s. 189 to the President and two Commissioners, who decided that he was liable to pay the tax. On a case stated to the High Court it was held by INNES, J., and MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J. (KERNAN, J., dissenting), that upon the true construction of the Act (V of 1878) the right of the Commissioners to levy the water-tax was independent of the duty imposed upon the Commissioners to supply water. No appeal was allowed by the Act against the President's decision. Held, in a suit by the Municipal Commissioners to recover from the defendants the cost of draining and cleansing a tank, that it was not open to the defendants to prove that the tank was not likely to prove injurious to the health of the neighbourhood. ——— s. 433—Water rate—Liability of Commissioners to a suit for compensation for not supplying water and collecting rate.—By the provisions of the City of Madras Municipal Act, 1878, if a water rate is levied by the Commissioners, they are bound to supply water for house service to every rate-payer who desires and provides the necessary works to connect his premises with the main, which ought to be within 150 yards of his premises, and the rate-payers are bound to pay water-rate whether or not they avail themselves of the privilege of house service. If the Commissioners do not perform this duty, the rate-payer has a remedy by action and may recover compensation, either under the provisions of s. 433 (which provides that a person aggrieved by the failure of the Commissioners to do their duty may bring his action, and the Court may either direct the duty to be performed "or make such order as to the Court may seem fit") or under those of the Statute of Westminster. Semble—If the Court does not order the execution of the works under s. 433, the only other order it could make would be an order for reasonable compensation. The Legislature intended the water rate to be a payment for a benefit conferred, and the tax should not be levied till water can be supplied. If in part of the city the Commissioners are able to supply water and desire to obtain at once a return for their works, they should apply to the Government to exempt the rest of the city from the operation of the Act. This sanad followed almost verbatim the language of Regulation XXV of 1802, s. 4, and where it referred to "lands paying a small quit-rent," added "which quit-rent unchangeable by you is included in the assets of your zamindari" The suit was brought to recover arrears of jodi or quit-rent accrued due on an agraharam village in the zamindari. The defendants, who were the agraharamdars, had divided the village and held it in separate shares. They pleaded that they were not liable to pay jodi in excess of the rate fixed by the Inam Commissioner and specified in the inam title-deed granted by him for the village in 1869. Held (1) that the decision of the Inam Commissioner did not affect the zamindar's claim, and that the question to be determined was what was the jodi payable in respect of the village at the time of the permanent settlement on which the peishcush of the zamindari was fixed; (2) that the defendants were jointly and severally liable for the amount that should be found due to the zamindar. On its appearing that R6 per patti was the recognized rate from 1832 to 1879, and that there was no evidence to show the agraharamdars had ever paid any other rate, or had paid R6 under coercion, the Court presumed that that was the rate at the time of the Permanent Settlement. andlord to enforce acceptance by his tenants of pottahs tendered by him for the current Fasli, it was pleaded that the pottahs were improper in that they did not comprise certain land of which the tenants were in possession and in which they claimed permanent occupancy rights, and also in that they contained various terms which the plaintiff was not entitled to impose on the defendants, providing (inter aliâ) (1) that interest should be payable on the several instalments of rent as they became due; (2) that the defendant should not fell certain trees except for agricultural purposes; (3) that the defendants should not reap their crops without previously obtaining the plaintiff's permission; (4) that on a change made without the plaintiff's permission from dry to wet cultivation, the tenancy should be forfeited in case of default made by the defendants in paying the amount of Government assessment, and also an undetermined sum then to become payable by the defendants to the plaintiff in addition to the rent. The defendants failed to prove the permanent occupancy rights claimed over the land not comprised in the pottahs, and it appeared that they had held leases from the plaintiff for the land in question for a period of three years and had held over after the expiry of the leases without the permission and contrary to the wishes of the landlord; and it further appeared that the provision as to trees did not extend to shrubs, etc., and had been an accepted term in the pottahs issued for ten years. The Revenue Court modified the terms of the pottahs and passed decrees that the pottahs as modified be accepted, against which some only of the defendants appealed, and the District Judge on appeal introduced further modifications into the pottahs. Held (1) that the District Judge had no jurisdiction under Civil Procedure Code, s. 544, to introduce further modifications into the pottahs in favour of the defendants who had not appealed according to the opinion formed by him in appeals preferred by the defendants in other suits; (2) that the defendants were not entitled to have the pottahs modified by enlarging the extent of the land comprised in them, or by the cancellation of the provisions as to interest and as to felling trees; (3) that the defendants were entitled to have the pottahs modified by the cancellation of the provision as to reaping crops and of the provision for forfeiture. 14. ——— ——— and s. 9—Condition of pottah—Established rates of rent—Rent in kind.—The zamindar of Vallur sued certain raiyats in his pergunnah of Gudur to enforce the acceptance of pottahs providing, among other conditions, that the raiyats should relinquish their holdings at the end of the term unless fresh pottahs were tendered to them, that they should pay half the cost of repairs by a cess proportioned to the wet rate, that if they irrigated dry land they should pay a wet rate to the zamindar, as well as the water rate due to Government, that they should not cut crops without permission, and should supply grass and vegetables to the zamindar's servants. It appeared that in 1853 the pergunnah in question was surrendered to Government, who restored it subject to the payment of a newly-assessed peishcush in 1862, a date when the present defendants were already in occupation of their respective holdings. In the interval, Government collected village rents in money. The pergunnah was not surveyed, and a money assessment fixed prior to 1859. The District Judge expunged the conditions in the pottah above referred to, and held that the zamindar was entitled to collect, by way of rent from the raiyats respectively, the quota of the village rents which each raiyat paid in 1861. He found, however, that there was no contract, express or implied, as to the rent to be paid; and that prior to 1851 the raiyats held their lands under the zamindar on the sharing system, and that for the first year after the restoration of the pergunnah the arrangement enforced by Government had remained in force, but that from 1863 to 1870 the sharing system was in force, and varam was paid by the raiyats, after which for five years individual money rents were collected, and then there were two leases with money rents each for a period of five years. Held (1) that the conditions in the pottah above referred to were unenforceable and had been rightly expunged; (2) that the plaintiff's rights were not limited by the rates of rent paid to Government in 1861, but that the rent should be discharged in kind according to the established rate of varam in the village; (3) that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the raiyats half the water-tax payable on the poramboke lands irrigated from the Kistna anicut. The defendants having refused to restore the property, the plaintiff brought this suit under Madras Act VIII of 1865 to recover the value of the produce. Held that such wrongful withholding of the property, being an act in direct disregard and defiance of the Act, did not constitute a cause of action triable by a summary suit under that Act. 17. — ———— Enhanced rent on irrigated land—Sanction by Collector of enhanced rent—Customary contribution to a temple—Implied contract—Landlord and tenant.—A zamindar tendered to raiyats on his estate pottahs providing (inter alia) for the payment of (1) certain fees to a Hindu temple, (2) rent in which the land assessment was consolidated with a water-cess in respect of certain land irrigated under the Kistna anicut. There was nothing to show that the former of these items constituted a charge on the land and the latter had not been sanctioned by the Collector under the Madras Rent Recovery Act, s. 11, but it was found as a payment which the zamindar could compel a raiyat to make, and consequently that the pottah tendered to him was an improper pottah; (2) that the finding as to the existence of an implied contract to pay the second of the above items was a correct finding, in accordance with the ruling in *Venkatagopal v. 19. — ———— Enhanced rent on irrigated land—Sanction granted by Head Assistant Collector—Customary rent—Implied contract—Restraint on building—Landlord and tenant.—A Head Assistant Collector is competent to grant a sanction for the enhancement of rent under the Madras Rent Recovery Act, s. 11. The granting of such sanction is a judicial and not a merely administrative act, and such sanction should not be granted without first giving notice to both the landlord and the tenant and hearing and considering the contentions of both parties. In a suit by the landlord to enforce the exchange of a pottah and muchalka the tenant objected to the rate of rent imposed on part of the land, which was dry land converted into wet. Held that the finding of the lower Appellate Court that there was an implied contract to pay rent at such rate was not open to any legal objection. It appeared that the pottah tendered contained a stipulation for the payment of rent at a special rate for garden (jarib) lands watered by wells which had been constructed by the raiyat at his own cost and also comprised a stipulation that the raiyat should not build on his holding. The Court of first appeal held that the special rate of rent above referred to was customary, and had been followed for many years. Held that there was no ground for interference on second appeal with the lower Appellate Court's decision regarding the former of the stipulations above referred to, but that the latter should be so modified as to prevent the raiyat only from raising any building incompatible with an agricultural holding. 20. Implied contract as to rent—Land irrigated under Kistna anicut—Collector's sanction to increase of rent.—Land in a zamindari in the Kistna delta was newly irrigated from anicut channels. The zamindar tendered pottahs at wet rates. Held (1) that the zamindar was not entitled to levy increased rates without the Collector's sanction under s. 11 of Madras Act VIII of 1865, although he had expended money on the channels, (2) that payment for five years of such wet rates under a five years' lease did not imply a contract to continue such payments; (3) that a stipulation in the previous lease binding the tenants to pay such increased rates in case of future irrigation did not bind the tenants after the term of that lease expired. The fact that the tenants have paid rent at such a rate for six years is not sufficient to establish an implied covenant to continue to do so. On the 13th of March thirteen raiyats presented a joint petition to the Head Assistant Collector complaining of the landlord's acts. This petition was referred to the Tehsildar for report, and not treated as a plaint under Act VIII of 1865 (Madras); but subsequently, having been brought before the Deputy Collector for orders, it was treated as a joint plaint under the said Act, and the petitioners were directed by that officer each to file a separate plaint. Thirteen plaints were accordingly filed on the 27th of May. Held that under s. 50 of the Act, which allows irregular plaints to be amended at the discretion of the Collector, the petition of the 13th March, which contained all the necessary allegations, could be treated as a plaint capable of amendment; and that the order of the Deputy Collector directing the petitioners to file separate suits was an amendment within the meaning of that section. Held also that by the provisions of s. 69, which provides that substantial justice shall not be defeated by want of form or irregularity in procedure, the said order, even if irregular, having done substantial justice, ought not to be set aside. II, III (7)—Power to commit for trial—Case triable by Court of Session and Magistrate of the first class—Discharge of accused.*—A complaint of an offence made punishable by s. 392 of the Penal Code was brought in the Court of a Magistrate of the second class, who had been invested with the powers described in s. 206 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The Magistrate passed an order directing that the enquiry should be held in his Court, and accordingly an inquiry was held under the provisions of Ch. XVIII of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the accused was discharged. Held that powers conferred under s. 206 of the Criminal Procedure Code convey authority to carry into effect any of the provisions of Ch. XVIII of the Code; that the procedure to be adopted under Ch. XVIII is not confined to cases exclusively triable by a Court of Session, but is also applicable to cases which, in the opinion of the Magistrate concerned, ought to be tried by such Court; that the order of the Magistrate in the present case, directing enquiry to be held in his Court, must be taken to mean that, in his opinion, the case referred to was one which ought to be tried by a Court of Session; and that his order discharging the accused was therefore legal. On the 6th September the powers of a Magistrate of the first class were conferred on the Magistrate by an order of Government, which was communicated to him on the 8th September. On the 9th September, the case for the prosecution having closed, the Magistrate framed charges against each of the accused under ss. 323 and 325 of the Penal Code, recorded the statements of the accused and the evidence for the defence, and, on the 10th September, convicted the accused of all the charges, passing upon each of them, in respect of each charge, sentences which he could pass as a Magistrate of the first class, but could not have passed as a Magistrate of the second class. On appeal, the Sessions Judge, on the ground that the prisoners had committed the offence described in s. 148 of the Penal Code, held that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were illegal, as being inconsistent which the provisions of s. 71, paras. 2 and 4, and he accordingly reduced the sentences of imprisonment which the Magistrate had passed to the maximum of imprisonment which the Magistrate could have inflicted under s. 148. Held by the Full Bench (PETHERAM, C.J., and BRODHURST, J., dissenting) that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were legal Per OLDFIELD, MAHMOOD, and DUTHOIT, JJ., that, with reference to the terms of s. 39 of the Criminal Procedure Code, a Magistrate of the second class who has begun a trial as such and continued it in the same capacity up to the passing of sentence, and who, prior to passing sentence, has been invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class, is competent to pass sentence in the case as a Magistrate of the first class. Per PETHERAM, C.J., that a case must be taken to be tried upon the day the trial commences; that, for all the purposes of the trial, the Magistrate in this case retained the status of a Magistrate of the second class, and that he was therefore not competent to pass sentence as a Magistrate of the first class. Per BRODHURST, J., that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were, as a whole, illegal; that if he had convicted the accused under s. 48 of the Penal Code, his order would, under the circumstances, have been legal. 153. ———— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 8—Act XVI of 1874—Special and local laws.—Madras Act III of 1865 declared every Magistrate in the Madras Presidency authorized to take cognizance of every offence committed against any special or local law then in force in the said Presidency, notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in any Act or Regulation then existing, and also of any offence against any special or local law which might thereafter be passed, unless such law should make the offences to which it might refer punishable by some other authorities therein specially mentioned. The effect of this Act was to remove the restrictions imposed by special or local laws theretofore passed, and to enable Magistrates within the limits of their ordinary powers to deal with offences punishable under any such special or local law, notwithstanding the special or local law indicated a particular tribunal as alone competent to try such offences, and to confer upon them jurisdiction also in the case of any special or local laws that might be passed after the enactment of Act III of 1865, unless jurisdiction was in any such later law specially conferred upon some other authority. S. 8 of the subsequent enactment, Act X of 1872 (the Criminal Procedure Code), limited the jurisdiction of Subordinate Magistrates over offences punishable under special and local laws, a third class Magistrate's jurisdiction being restricted to the trial of offences punishable under such laws with less than one year's imprisonment, while a second class Magistrate's jurisdiction was similarly restricted to the trial of offences punishable with less than three years' imprisonment. Act XVI of 1874, while repealing Act III of 1865, left unaffected the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Magistrate under that Act so far as it still remained in existence as limited by the provisions of s. 8 of Act X of 1872 (Criminal Procedure Code). 11. —————— Acknowledgment of children as sons.—The acknowledgment and recognition of children by a Mahomedan as his sons, giving them the status of sons capable of inheriting as being of legitimate birth, may, without proof of his express acknowledgment of them, be inferred from his treatment of such children, provided that certain conditions negativing this relationship are absent. The question whether such acknowledgment should be presumed or not, depends on the circumstances of each particular case. Ashrufooddowlah Ahmed Hossein Khan v. *Hyder Hossein Khan, 11 Moore's I. 12. —————— Presumption of marriage.—According to Mahomedan law, mere continued cohabitation without proof of marriage or of acknowledgment is not sufficient to raise such a legal presumption of marriage as to legitimise the offspring. Marriage and acknowledgment may be presumed, but the presumption must be one of fact, and, as such, subject to the application of the ordinary rules of evidence. A subsequent marriage, so far from raising the presumption of a prior marriage, primâ facie at least excludes that presumption. ASHRUFOODDOWLAH AHMED HOSSEIN v. HYDER HOSSEIN KHAN [7 W. R., P. 13. —————— Illegitimacy of birth—Insufficiency of father's acknowledgment without intention to legitimate—Marriage, Validity of.—On the question of the legitimacy of a son born to a Mahomedan by a Burmese woman, the question did not arise on this appeal whether the father could have entered into a valid marriage with the mother without her having relinquished Buddhism. The Court below found against her alleged conversion to the Mahomedan religion, and also found upon the facts that no marriage of the parents as distinguished from concubinage had taken place. The latter finding was affirmed. As to the question whether the son born to them had been legitimated by the father's acknowledgment of him, it was held that under the Mahomedan law the legitimation of a son, born out of legal wedlock, may be effected by the force of his father's acknowledgment of his being of legitimate birth; but that a mere recognition of sonship is insufficient to effect it. Acknowledgment in the sense meant by that law is required, viz., of antecedent right, and not a mere recognition of paternity. Ashrufooddowla Ahmed Hossein v. Hyder Hossein Khan, 11 Moore's I. A., 94; Muhammad Azmat Ali Khan v. Lalli Begum, I. L. R., 8 Calc., 422; and Sadakat Hossein v. Mahomed Yusuf, I. L. R., 10 Calc., 663, referred to. In a suit for possession, by right of inheritance, of a share of the property of a deceased Mahomedan by a person alleging himself to be a son of the deceased, the defendants pleaded that the plaintiff was not a son, but a step-son, having been born of the deceased's wife before her marriage. The plaintiff filed certain letters and other documents in which the deceased in express terms referred to him as his son; and he contended that these references amounted to acknowledgments of him as a son made by the deceased, which, under the Mahomedan law, entitled him to inherit as a legitimate son. Held by PETHERAM, C.J. (BRODHURST, J., dissenting), that the acknowledgment by the deceased of the plaintiff as his son in fact conferred upon the latter the status of a legitimate son capable of inheriting the deceased's estate, although the evidence showed that the deceased never treated him as a legitimate son, or intended to give him the status of legitimacy. Held by BRODHURST, J., contra, that the documents above referred to did not show more than that the deceased regarded the plaintiff as his step-son; that the plaintiff was never called his son except by courtesy and in the sense in which a European would ordinarily describe his step-son as his son; and that there was no sufficient evidence of the acknowledgment from which an inference was fairly to be deduced that the deceased ever intended to recognize the plaintiff and give him the status of a son capable of inheriting. Sadakat Hossein v.

Nor was it in itself such an important departure from the custom of Sunnis as that it would disqualify the imam for officiating in a musjid where those ceremonies had not previously been used Nor did the introduction of (a) and of (b) justify a section of the worshippers in setting up another leader of prayer at the same time that prayer was being conducted by the duly authorized imam On the lower Appellate Court's findings of fact there was nothing in the constitution of the mosque which prohibited the adoption of (a) and (b), and those findings were conclusive For the purpose, however, of considering the case from other points of view, their Lordships examined the whole of the evidence, and they agreed with the Subordinate Judge that there was no evidence showing that the mosque was not intended for the worship of all Sunnis or for all Mahomedans. Nor was there any rule of law that when public worship had been performed in a certain way for twenty years, there could not be any variation, however slight, from that way The question in each case of dispute must be as to the magnitude and importance of the alleged departure There had not been produced any text to show that a follower of Abu Hanifa would do wrong in following a practice recommended by others of the four imams Nor was there any usage having the force of law among Sunni communities, forbidding the introduction of (a) and (b) into ceremonial prayer as shown by the evidence of learned Mahomedans and by proof of their actual practice The judgments in *Empress v. 12. ——— Inheritance —Devolution not suspended till payment of deceased ancestor's debts. A creditor of A, a deceased Mahomedan, under a hypothecation bond, obtained a decree on the 20th December 1876 for recovery of the debt by enforcement of lien against M, one of A's heirs, who alone was in possession of the estate; and, in execution of the decree, the whole estate was sold by auction on the 21st March 1878, and purchased by the decree-holder himself. J, another of A's heirs, was not a party to these proceedings. On J's death, her son and heir, A H, conveyed to M A the rights and interests inherited by him from his mother,—namely, her share in A's estate. The purchaser of the share thereupon brought a suit against the decree-holder for its recovery. Held that, immediately upon the death of A, the share of his estate claimed in the suit devolved upon J; that she being no party to the decree of the 20th December 1876, her share in the property could not be affected by that decree, nor by the execution-sale of the 21st March 1878; that upon her death that share devolved upon her son, who conveyed his rights to the plaintiff; that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover possession of the share which he has purchased, but that he could not do so without payment to the defendant of his proportionate share of the debts of A, which were paid off from the proceeds of the auction sale of the 21st March 1878 Jafri Begum v. *Amir Muhammad Khan, I. It was not disputed that the debt would have been barred by limitation but for a part payment made by C, and endorsed by him on the back of the roka. D, E, and F were no parties to such payment, and it was found not to have been made with their consent. The first Court, considering that collusion existed between A and C, and having regard to the fact that C did not dispute his liability, gave A a decree for the full amount of the debt against C without finding whether the roka was genuine or not, and held that the shares of D, E, and F in B's estate were not liable for any portion of the debt. A accepted this decision and did not appeal. C appealed on the ground that he could only, under the Mahomedan law, be held liable for a part of the debt in proportion to the amount of B's estate which had come into his hands. The lower Appellate Court decided in C's favour, and varied the decree by directing that A was only entitled to recover two-fifths of the debt from C, that being the amount of C's share. D, E, and F were not made parties to that appeal. A then preferred a special appeal to the High Court, making D, E, and F parties. Held that, under the circumstances of the case, and having regard to the rule of Mahomedan law, A was not entitled to a decree against C for more than two-fifths of the debt. Held further that, applying the principle of justice, equity, and good conscience to the case, inasmuch as A was a Hindu, it would not, under the circumstances of the case, be equitable to hold C liable for the whole of the debt. Both the lower Courts found that no divorce had taken place upon the following facts. Defendant went to Trichinopoly leaving his wife at Tinnevelly. While at Trichinopoly, he received letters from Tinnevelly informing him that his wife was leading an immoral life. He therefore went before the Town Kazi of Trichinopoly, made a written declaration in the shape of a letter to plaintiff to the effect that he had divorced her, and repeated the divorce three times successively before the Town Kazi of Trichinopoly. Defendant directed also that the letter of divorce should be sent to the plaintiff, but there was no evidence of her having received it. Held, upon special appeal, that it was clear upon the authorities that there had been a valid divorce. 1. ———— Validity of divorce—Release of dower by wife—Evidence of divorce —According to the Mahomedan law, the non payment by the wife of the consideration for a divorce does not invalidate the divorce. The divorce is the sole act of the husband though granted at the instance of the wife, and purchased by her The kholanamah, or the deed securing to the husband the stipulated consideration, does not constitute the divorce, but assumes and is founded upon it The divorce is created by the husband's repudiation of the wife and the consequent separation The husband having distinctly alleged a divorce by khola and relied on two instruments —one an ibranamah (or deed of voluntary release by the wife of her denmohr or dowry) to which there was no satisfactory proof that she ever gave her assent with a knowledge of its contents and a kholanamah (surrendering the wife's settlement) obtained from her mother by means of cruelty and ill usage practised on her daughter to confirm the ibranamah —Held that instruments so obtained could have no legal effect when used as a defence against the wife's claim to her dowry. A Mahomedan widow is entitled to a lien for whatever dower remains due to her, although there may be a dispute as to what is the amount actually due, having reference to the amount originally filed as dower, or to the amount satisfied by payments. An heir to a share of the estate is not entitled to recover possession from the widow so long as any portion of the dower remains unsatisfied, nor can he be entitled to mesne profits, but his proper course is to bring a suit for an account of what is due as dower, and to pray that in satisfaction of that amount he may be put into possession of his share of the estate. 14. ——————— Suit for restitution of conjugal rights—Custom—Prompt and deferred dower.—When a Mahomedan sues his wife for restitution of conjugal rights, such suit is to be determined with reference to Mahomedan law, and not with reference to the general law of contract. Under Mahomedan law, if a wife's dower is "prompt," she [illegible] her dower and only demands it when he sues, and notwithstanding also that she and her husband may have already cohabited with consent since their marriage. When at the time of marriage the payment of dower has not been stipulated to be "deferred," payment of a portion of the dower must be considered "prompt." The amount of such portion is to be determined with reference to custom. Where there is no custom, it must be determined by the Court with reference to the status of the wife and the amount of the dower. Where a Court, following this rule, determined that one-fifth only of a dower of R5,000 not stipulated to be "deferred" must be considered "prompt," inasmuch as the wife had been a prostitute and came of a family of prostitutes, it exercised its discretion soundly. ceases to exist after consummation, unless at such time she is a minor, or insane or has been forced, in which case her father may refuse to surrender her until payment. It cannot in any case be pleaded so as to defeat altogether the suit for restitution of conjugal rights, which is maintainable upon the refusal of either party to cohabit with the other; and it can only operate in modification of the decree for restitution by rendering its enforcement conditional upon payment of so much of the dower as may be regarded as prompt, in accordance with the principle recognized by Courts of equity under the general category of compensation or lien, when pleaded by a defendant in resistance or modification of the plaintiff's claim. *Buzloor Ruheem v. not maintainable, as the plaintiff had not paid her dower debt. The plaintiff thereupon deposited the whole of the dower debt in Court. It appeared that the defendant's dower had been fixed without any specification as to whether it was to be wholly or partly prompt. It also appeared that she had attained majority before the marriage, and that she had cohabited with the plaintiff for three months after marriage, and there was no evidence that she had ever demanded payment of her dower before the suit was filed, or that she had refused cohabitation on the ground of non-payment. Besides the plea already mentioned she also relied upon allegations of divorce and cruelty, but these allegations were found to be untrue. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, holding that, inasmuch as the plaintiff had not paid the dower-debt at the time when he brought his suit, he had no cause of action under the provisions of the Mahomedan law. Held by the Full Bench that the lower Appellate Court's view of the Mahomedan law relating to conjugal rights and the husband's obligation to pay dower was erroneous; and that the plaintiff under the circumstances of the case, had a right to maintain the suit. 12. ———— Grant to grantees and their aulad va ahfad—Meaning of the word "ahfad"—Wukf—Tavlyat and sajjadanashin, Right of females to hold the offices of.—A certain village was granted by the Mogul Government in inam to two persons and their "aulad va ahfad" for the maintenance of a durga (mausoleum) of a pír (saint). The plaintiff and the defendant were the descendants of the original grantees. In 1878 the plaintiff sued the defendant for the recovery of the profits of a one-fourth share in the inam, claiming to be entitled thereto through his mother and grandmother, who was the daughter of the son of the great-grandson of one of the two original grantees. It was contended (inter alia) for the defendant that the expression "aulad va ahfad" used in the grant would include only the lineal male descendants, and not the plaintiff, who claimed through females, who were incapable of performing the spiritual offices connected with the mausoleum. The Court of first instance dismissed the plaintiff's claim. He appealed and the lower Appellate Court allowed his claim to the extent of one-eighth share. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court,—Held, confirming the decision of the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiff was entitled to share both in the offices of the durga and the endowment. The term "ahfad," being a term of the largest and most general signification, includes the descendants of females as well as of males. The primary object of the grant was to provide for the tavlyat and the office of sajjadanashin of a mausoleum of the saint, and with that view to supply the means for the maintenance of the persons who should perform the offices, as well as for the ordinary expenses of keeping up the mausoleum. A female could not be the sajjadanashin, whose duties were of a strictly spiritual nature requiring peculiar personal qualifications so as to exclude female descendants from participating in the endowment; but it would not follow that males. who established their descent from the propositus through females should be excluded. Had the intention of the grant in the present case been to limit the class of descendants exclusively to persons claiming through males, the expression "aulad dar aulad" would have been used, instead of the general expression "aulad va ahfad." Hussain Beebee v. Hussain Sherif, 4 Mad., 23, and Mujavar Ibrambibi v. *Mujavar Hussain Sherif, I. charity.—M, the father of the three defendants, executed an instrument purporting to be a wukfnama in favour of his heirs and descendants, generation after generation. The office of mutwalli he reserved for himself for life, and, in the event of his death, he appointed his wife and youngest son E mutwallis, with certain powers of delegation, upon the following conditions: The said mutwallis, having received the annual income of the property and having defrayed the expenses of repairs and the taxes, etc., were to divide the balance into four equal shares, and to make over one share to his son S and his descendant after descendant for their expenses; one share, in like manner, to his son H; one share, in like manner, to his son E; and as to the remaining share, to pay one-half thereof to his wife, A, for expenses, and one-half thereof to his sister, for expenses. The deed then proceeded: "If any one from among my heirs and (? or descendant after descendant should die, then the said mutwallis shall make his or her funeral outlays according to our custom and usage; and as to what may remain as a balance, they shall duly distribute and give the same to my heirs and descendants according to the Book of God." Further as follows: "May God forbid it! If from among my heirs and descendants there shall be left no one surviving, then, as regards the income of the whole of the property endowed for religious and charitable purposes, the same for the sake of God, is duly to be distributed and given to Mahomedan fakirs and indigent people." Then followed a direction that the property was not to be sold or mortgaged. On the 25th February 1883 the first two defendants mortgaged the properties comprised in the wukfnama to the plaintiff for R3,000. The plaintiff brought the present suit against the said two defendants to enforce the mortgage. The third defendant was made a defendant at his own request, and alleged that the mortgage had been made without his consent. He submitted whether, having regard to the terms of the deed, the plaintiff had any claim as mortgagee; and he contended that in no case could the mortgage operate, except against the shares of the first two defendants. The plaintiff contended that the wukfnama was invalid, and that upon the death of M the property comprised in it devolved upon his three sons as his heirs, and also that, assuming the wukfnama to be valid, the first two defendants took an estate of inheritance under it, which they were at liberty to aliene and mortgage. Held, following Fatmabibi v. Advocate-General of Bombay, I. L. R., 6 Bom., 42, that the deed of the 17th May 1871 was valid as a wukfnama. Semble—That the mortgaged property being wukf, the plaintiff acquired no right under his mortgage, which would extend beyond the lifetime of his mortgagors. In such property no one has any interest as the heir of the appropriator. It is neither the subject of ownership nor inheritable, but each object of the charity who brings himself or herself within the terms of the endowment is entitled to receive the benefit which the founder has marked out for him. 17. ——— Wukf—Settlement in favour of the settlor's family without any ultimate trust for charity—Document not establishing a trust for a religious or charitable purpose.—A Mahomedan cannot settle his property in wukf on his own descendants in perpetuity without making an express provision for its ultimate devolution to a charitable or religious object. A Mahomedan executed a deed, called a wukfnama, by which he settled his property in wukf on his two wives and daughters and their descendants in perpetuity. For the management and devolution of this property he laid down the following rules: (1) that if one of the aulad (or daughters) of either wife died, the share of that person should go to the wife and the survivors of her aulad; that after the death of a wife her share should go to her surviving aulad; that if a wife and her aulad ceased to exist, their share should go to the other wife and her aulad; that on the failure of aulad and aflad of both wives, the next of kin of the settlor should receive the property; and he added that in this way the management should go on from generation to generation; (2) that neither of the said two wives nor any one of the aulad of the wives should alienate by sale, gift, or mortgage either their shares or any part of the property. A portion of this property, consisting of two nafars, was set apart for such purposes as the building of his own tomb, the saying of prayers, the recitation of the Koran, etc.; and he directed that in case the produce of the two nafars proved insufficient for these purposes, his wives and daughters and their descendants should contribute out of the property settled in wukf on them. Held that, with the exception of the two nafars set apart for religious purposes, the rest of the settlement was not a valid wukf, as it was solely for the benefit of the settlor's family, and contained no express provision for the ultimate devolution of the property to any religious or charitable object. Held on appeal by the Privy Council, affirming the above decision, that the instrument could neither be maintained as establishing a wukf, nor as a settlement: also that it could not be supported as a will, not having been validated by consent of heirs, as to two-thirds of the succession; and that, even if it could have been dealt with as a will, the above provision would have been void. A wukfnama, to be valid, must be a substantial dedication of property to a religious or charitable purpose at some time or other. Mahomed Ahsanulla Chowdhry v. *Amarchand Kundu, L. R., 17 I. Where the proposed object of the endowment is one which is directly contrary to the public law of the State, the above rule does not apply. By an indenture of voluntary settlement, dated 10th March 1866, F, a Mahomedan girl of the age of fourteen, conveyed certain immoveable property in the Island of Bombay to trustees upon trust—(1) During her life-time to pay the rents and profits to her for her sole and separate use without power of anticipation. (2) After her death to pay the rents and profits to her children and descendants as she might by deed or will appoint. In default of appointment the trustees were to pay life-allowances to such descendants at their discretion. The rents and profits only were to be thus distributed among such descendants for ever, the corpus of the property being kept intact. (3) In case there should be no such descendants or in the event of failure of such descendants, the rents and profits were to be expended on charitable purposes, such as expenses of poor pilgrims going to Mecca, building musjids, funeral and marriage expenses of poor people, sinking wells or tanks, or in such other manner as the trustees should think fit. Shortly after the execution of the settlement the trustees took possession of the property, and for fifteen years continued to pay the rents and profits to the settlor. The settlor was married in 18[illegible] to H, and there was issue of the marriage only one son, who died in 1872 an infant under the age of five years. H died in 1872, and the settlor remained a widow. In 1881 she became desirous of revoking the above settlement, and under s. 527 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) she stated a case for the opinion of the Court, contending that she could lawfully revoke the trusts declared by the said indenture, that if she could not revoke, then that the trust therein declared in favour of charity was void for remoteness; and generally that she was, under the circumstances, entitled to have the property reconveyed to her by the surviving trustee. Held that the settlement was irrevocable. The dedication, having been once made, could not be recalled. The interposed private interests, which might or might not endure, did not avoid the ultimate charitable trust. According to the same law, the death of the wukif before actual delivery of possession of the appropriated property by him to the mutwalli or the beneficiaries of the trust renders the wukf null and void ab initio. Consequently, where the wukif dies, as mentioned above, before actual delivery of possession of the appropriated property, the consent of his heirs to the testamentary wukf cannot validate such wukf. AMEER ALI, J.—The disposition in question, viewed according to the Mahomedan law, which supplies ample safeguards against fraud, created a valid endowment. There is a consensus of opinion among Mahomedan lawyers of every school and sect that wukfs on children, kindred, or neighbours in perpetuity are valid. To hold that a wukf, the benefaction of which is bestowed wholly or in part on the wukif's family and descendants, is invalid, would have the effect of abrogating an important branch of the Mahomedan law. A wukf is a permanent benefaction for the good of God's creatures. The wukif may bestow the usufruct, but not the property, upon whomsoever he chooses, and in any manner whatever, only it must endure for ever. If he bestows the usufruct in the first instance upon those whose maintenance is obligatory on him, or if he gives it to his descendants so long as they exist, to prevent their falling into indigence, it is a pious act, even more pious than giving to the general body of the poor. When a wukf is created constituting the family or descendants of the wukif the recipients of the charity so long as they exist, the poor are expressly or impliedly brought in to impart permanency to the endowment. Though it was not impossible that a document creating a wukf might contain provision also for the family of the settlor, the dedication to charitable uses being postponed, yet here there was not even an ultimate dedication of property, with the intention apparently of preserving the estate in perpetuity intact under the headship of the property to charitable uses, but the object of the executant was evidently merely the maintenance of the family estates and of the dignity of the riasat. Mahomed Ahsanulla Chowdhry v. *Amarchand Kundu, I. According to the same law, the death of the wukif before actual delivery of possession of the appropriated property by him to the mutwalli or the beneficiaries of the trust renders the wukf null and void ab initio. Consequently, where the wukif dies, as mentioned above, before actual delivery of possession of the appropriated property, the consent of his heirs to the testamentary wukf cannot validate such wukf. The lower Appellate Court held that the deed created a valid endowment to the extent of R75 per annum only, and that, subject to such charge, the properties were alienable. Held by the majority of the Full Bench (PETHERAM, C.J., TREVELYAN and GHOSE, JJ.; AMEER ALI, J., dissenting) upon the construction of the deed and upon the authority of Mahomed Ahsanulla Chowdhry v. *Amarchand Kundu, I. AMEER ALI, J.—The disposition in question, viewed according to the Mahomedan law, which supplies ample safeguards against fraud, created a valid endowment. There is a consensus of opinion among Mahomedan lawyers of every school and sect that wukfs on children, kindred, or neighbours, in perpetuity are valid. To hold that a wukf, the benefaction of which is bestowed wholly or in part on the wukif's family and descendants, is invalid, would have the effect of abrogating an important branch of the Mahomedan law. A wukf is a permanent benefaction for the good of God's creatures. The wukif may bestow the usufruct, but not the property, upon whomsoever he chooses, and in any manner whatever, only it must endure for ever. If he bestows the usufruct in the first instance upon those whose maintenance is obligatory on him, or if he gives it to his descendants so long as they exist, to prevent their falling into indigence, it is a pious act, even more pious than giving to the general body of the poor. When a wukf is created constituting the family or descendants of the wukif the recipients of the charity so long as they exist, the poor are expressly or impliedly brought in to impart permanency to the endowment. The administration of the mosque and its property was carried on under rules which had been drawn up and approved in the year 1834 at a special general meeting of the jamat convened for the purpose in the course of a suit which had been filed in the Supreme Court against the then mushavirs of the mosque. That suit was referred to the master to make certain inquiries, and in his report these rules were set out in full. His report was confirmed by the Court. The rules provided that the mosque and its property should be managed by the kazi of Bombay and ten mushavirs, and that a nazir should be appointed by them, and be subject to their control. The rules also prescribed the various duties of the kazi, mushavirs, and nazir, and declared that the power of filling up vacancies should be exercised by the kazi and mushavirs collectively or by the kazi and an absolute majority of the mushavirs. In 1834, and for many years subsequently, there was, as there had always been, a "Kazi of Bombay" appointed under a sanad from Government. He held the appointment for life, and the office was not hereditary. In 1866 the then kazi of Bombay died, but in consequence of the provisions of Act II of 1864 and Bombay Act IV of 1864 the Government made no new appointment, and the office lapsed. One M, however, assumed the office and was generally accepted by the community as kazi of Bombay. He died in 1878, and upon his death rival claimants sought the office of kazi of Bombay. The mushavirs were then advised that they could not select one of the rival kazis to fill the office of kazi of Bombay under the rules, and they therefore continued to manage the mosque without a kazi in violation of the rules of 1834. Two of the mushavirs (now relators) were of opinion that one of the rival applicants for the position should be appointed kazi, and as their wishes were not acceded to, they ceased to attend the board, and as far as possible while retaining their offices, they thwarted the action of the other mushavirs. Subsequently in 1878 other vacancies occurred in the board. In 1888 the number of mushavirs was reduced to six, and two of them (the relators), as above stated, took no part in the administration, so that the management was left in the hands of the first four defendants. In 1891 four new mushavirs (defendants Nos. 6 to 9) were elected, and in that year the Advocate General at the relation of the two dissatisfied mushavirs filed this suit against the mushavirs. The former nazir of the musjid was also made a defendant (No. 5). He had held the office of nazir from 1879 to 1891, when he resigned. The plaint set forth the irregularities which had taken place in the management in 1878, and prayed for the removal of the defendants (other than defendant No. 5) from the position of directors or mushavirs, and for an account against all the defendants, and for a scheme, etc. The following were the principal charges made against the defendants in the plaint and at the hearing:—(1) The neglect to take steps to supply the place of the kazi and the failure to keep up the proper number of the mushavirs. Held, as to this, that subsequently to 1878 the mushavirs had no authority under the rules of 1834 to fill up vacancies as they occurred or to carry on the government of the musjid. Since that year the mushavirs were a provisional committee of management, kept up from time to time by co-optation, tacitly permitted by the jamat to manage the affairs of the musjid until the original constitution could be restored or legally changed, that original constitution being for the time in abeyance. (2) The improper appointment in 1879 of one C (defendant No. 5) as nazir. Held that the mushavirs incurred no liability and deserved no censure for so doing. (3) The neglect to call for an annual account of the income and expenditure of the mosque under rule 6. Held that this charge was not proved. (4) The neglect to purchase properties with the surplus income of the mosque as required by rule 4. Upon this point it was contended that the defendants should be charged with interest on the uninvested funds, so as to make up for the loss of rents which would have been recovered if properties had been purchased. In answer to this claim, it was argued (a) that, under the circumstances, the mushavirs had no power to expend the funds of the mosque in purchasing property; and (b) that the claim was barred by limitation. Held that the claim fell within art. 120 of the schedule to the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and was barred except as to six years prior to the filing of the suit, but even as to this period the Court refused to order accounts to be taken against the defendants. There had been no dishonesty or improper dealing with the funds of the mosque. The highest at which the case could be put was that there had been error of judgment. In this the community had acquiesced. Moreover, the position of the parties had changed. Some of the mushavirs were dead, others had resigned, and were not defendants to the suit, and it would be difficult to enforce contribution against them. The Court was further of opinion that, in any case, it was very doubtful whether a provisional committee like the mushavirs would have been justified in assuming the power of purchasing property. possession as manager by plaintiff herself and other widows of the plaintiff's deceased father-in-law, all which widows had some interests in the land under various deeds by which additions had been made to the original endowment; and defendant further pleaded that, under the original deed of appointment, plaintiff's husband could not alienate the property, and that plaintiff's possession would be a virtual alienation; and also that plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation, and that she could not hold the land without the sanction of the Government under Act XX of 1863.—Held that, although plaintiff's original appointment by her late husband during his lifetime was unauthorized, yet, as alienation in such a case would mean alienation of the subject of the endowment rather than its transfer to plaintiff, whose possession was not an adverse possession, plaintiff's possession did not defeat the purposes of the original appropriator, and could not be regarded as an alienation; and that in these circumstances, even though the property were wukf, there could be no defect in plaintiff's title. An appropriator of land to special purposes can, under Mahomedan law, confer the office of superintendent on another at any time. It was found in this case that defendant, as a descendant of the original appropriator, had succeeded to other properties which were quite distinct from the land in suit. 42. ———— Sajjadanashin, khilafat, and mutwalli, Offices of—Primogeniture, Custom of—Eldest son's right to hold the offices—Wukf, Inheritance to—Predecessor in the office to appoint his successor, Right of.—About three hundred and fifty years ago one S, the ancestor of the parties to the suit, came to Surat and settled there and became the pirmushid (religious preceptor) of the Mahomedan community at that place. During his lifetime, as well as after his death, moveable and immoveable property was from time to time dedicated to the religious office he and, after his decease, one or other of his descendants successively occupied. The plaintiff was the eldest, and the first defendant the second, son of H, the last incumbent of the said office. In 1865 H, being ill, executed a tauliyatnama appointing the plaintiff his executor and successor. Subsequently H, having recovered, cancelled the same and appointed the first defendant his successor by three successive tauliyatnamas, the last being dated 3rd September 1881, a few days before H's death. The first defendant accordingly entered into possession and management of the office of sajjadanashin (or priest) and khilafat (deputy), and assumed the position of mutwalli (or manager) of the wukf property of the family. In 1882 the plaintiff brought the present suit to have it declared that on him, as the eldest son, had devolved the office of sajjadanashin and khilafat held by the family, and not on his younger brother, the defendant, and that he alone was entitled, as mutwalli, to take possession of and manage the wukf property. The plaintiff relied, firstly, on the appointment made by his father in 1865, and, secondly, on the fact of his being the eldest son of the last incumbent, to whom, he maintained, both by law and custom belonged the succession to the offices in question so long, at least, as such eldest son was in other respects a fit and proper person to succeed, which in his own case was not contested. The defendant denied that either by law or custom was the eldest son, as such, entitled to succeed, and relied on the fact of his appointment by his father. Held that the plaintiff had made out no case of a right to succeed his father in the offices in question. Not under the deed of appointment, because that was made by his father when he believed he was dying, and was subsequently on recovery cancelled, and was therefore inoperative, on similar principles to these which apply to the case of a donatio mortis causâ; nor, secondly, under the general Mahomedan law, because that law is strongly against attaching any right of inheritance to an endowment; nor, thirdly, by reason of any custom, because no such custom as that contended for was established on the evidence. The evidence went to show that the eldest son did not uniformly succeed, and that, even when he succeeded, he did so by right of appointment, and not by right of primogeniture. The Court therefore directed an account against them of the rents actually received, or which but for their wilful default or neglect, they might have received from the bill collectors (6) Their neglect in allowing arrears of rent to accumulate and to be lost to the musjid Held it was not the duty of the mushavirs to look into the account of each individual tenant Under the rules the nazir, and not the mushavirs, was entrusted with the collection of rents and it was his duty to see that the rents were not allowed to fall unduly into arrear It was not shown that, except at an exceptional time when the nazir was ill, the rents were so much in arrear as to call for the active interference of the mushavirs or that the musjid had suffered undue loss under this head The Court therefore refused relief on this charge (7) The non-payment into the bank of sums in the hands of the nazir when they exceeded R500 Held that the spirit of the rules had been complied with and no loss had been shown Defendant No 5 as above stated had acted as nazir of the musjid from 1879 to July 1891, when he resigned Under the rules (see rules 2 and 7), he was appointed by the directors and was under their orders and was removeable at their pleasure It was contended at the hearing that he was not a proper party to the suit being merely the agent or servant of the directors and not a trustee Held that he was properly made a defendant. law, essential to the completion of the gift, but no such delivery or transfer had been effected. Held that the deed of gift was not a good assignment in law of the interest of the plaintiff, who was not a party thereto, and the defendant could take nothing more than the donor's own interest. Held that whatever might be the Mahomedan law apart from the Pensions Act, under s. 7 of the Act, the pension or any interest in it was capable of being alienated by way of gift, the subject of the gift being not the cash, but the right to have the pension paid. Held that there was no force in the contention that the gift became void because the right was not divided, inasmuch as in the case of a right to receive a pension the rights of the individuals who are the heirs became at once divided and separate at the death of the sole owner; and in this case the shares were definite and ascertained and required no further separation than was already effected upon the sole owner's death. Held that the rule of the Mahomedan law as to the invalidity of gifts purporting to pass more than the donor was entitled to, was based upon the principle of "musha" or undivided part, and had no application to cases where the donor's interest itself was separate; and that even if it were the strict Mahomedan law that where a man having a definite ascertained interest in a pension, and intending at any rate to pass his interest to his wife, purporting to give her more than he was entitled to, he failed to give her any interest at all, s. 24 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act (VI of 1871) did not make it obligatory to apply the strict Mahomedan law as to gifts in transactions of modern times. Held that although, according to the Mahomedan law, possession was necessary to perfect a gift where the nature of the transaction was such that possession was possible, possession of a right to receive pension could only be given by handing over the documents of the title connected with the pension or assigning the right to receive the pension; that the gift in this case was perfect as soon as the deed was executed and handed over with the other papers to the donee; and that the mutation of names was merely a thing which would follow on the perfection of the title, and did not in itself go to make or form part of the title. Possession once taken under a gift is not invalidated, as regards its effect in supporting the gift, by any subsequent change of possession. The subject of the gift was shares in revenue-paying villages, with land, houses, and moveables. Of the greater portion of this property the donor, a mother giving them to her daughter, had only so far possession that she was in receipt of the rents and profits. In the deed of gift she declared (thereby making an admission whereby her heir and all claiming through him were bound) that she had made the donee, her daughter, possessor of all the properties; and she directed that the gift should be carried into effect by the daughter's husband, who was manager of estates on behalf of both mother and daughter before them. Held, in a suit for the possession of the property, on a sale by the heir of the donor, brought by the vendees against him, and joining as defendants the heirs of the daughter then deceased, that sufficient possession had been taken on behalf of the daughter to render the gift effectual, and to defeat the claim as against her heirs. 51. ————Donor remaining in possession—Deed of gift—Consideration.—The policy of the Mahomedan law is to prevent a testator interfering by will with the course of the devolution of property according to law among his heirs. But a holder of property may defeat the policy of the law by giving in his lifetime the whole, or any part, of his property to one of his heirs, provided he complies with certain forms. This may be done by a deed of gift without consideration, or by deed of gift for consideration. A conveyance by deed of gift without consideration is invalid, unless accompanied by delivery of the thing given, so far as it admits of delivery. In the case of a gift for consideration, the delivery of possession is not necessary for its validity, and no question arises as to the adequacy of the consideration; but there must be an actual payment of the consideration by the donee, and a bonâ fide intention on the part of the donor to divest himself in præsenti of the property, and to confer it on the donee. of the donor, and also (as the donor and donee were both Mahomedans) against subsequent purchasers for valuable consideration from the donor; but that defendant had never had possession of the title-deeds of Nos. 2, 5, and 6, so that the suit could not be maintained as regards them. Under Mahomedan law, "in the instance of a wife who may give a house to her husband, the gift will be good, although she continue to occupy it along with her husband and keep all her property therein, because the wife and her property are both in the legal possession of the husband. So also it has been held by some that, if a father transfer his house to his minor son, himself continuing to occupy it and to keep his property therein, the gift is valid, on the principle that the father in retaining possession is acting as agent for his son, according to which doctrine his possession is equivalent to that of his son." Reason requires that the same principle should be applied to the case of a gift by husband to wife. The wife may, according to Mahomedan law, hold property independent of her husband, and as a husband may make a valid gift to his wife, it can only be necessary that the gift should be accompanied with such a change of possession as the subject is capable of, and as is consistent with the continuance of the relation of husband and wife. For the management and devolution of this property he laid down the following rules: (1) that if one of the aulad (or daughters) of either wife died, the share of that person should go to the wife and the survivors of her aulad; that after the death of a wife her share should go to her surviving aulad; that if a wife and her aulad ceased to exist, their share should go to the other wife and her aulad; that on the failure of aulad and aflad of both wives, the next of kin of the settlor should receive the property; and he added that in this way the management should go on from generation to generation; (2) that neither of the said two wives nor any one of the aulad of the wives should alienate by sale, gift or mortgage either their shares or any part of the property. Held that the settlement was invalid as a deed of gift to the settlor's next of kin after the determination of the life-estates granted to his wives and daughters; first because the donor had not parted with possession of the property till his death, and, secondly, because the grant of a life-estate is quite inconsistent with the Mahomedan law, the grantee in such a case taking an absolute estate. That property had been sold to the defendants y the heirs of M during the minority of the plaintiff's husband, his elder brother acting for him in the transaction. It was proved that the sale of the property to the defendants had been approved of by H, who was the agent of the Governor of Bombay at S, and the representative of the ruling authority in the management of M's estate. The plaintiff contended that, according to Mahomedan law, it was not competent for the elder brother of a minor, as guardian, to alienate a minor's property. Held that the sanction of the ruling power constituted a sufficient authority for the act of the guardian, provided that the transaction was one which, according to Mahomedan law, a duly constituted guardian might have entered into on behalf of his ward. That law permits a guardian to sell the immoveable property of his ward, when the late incumbent died in debt, or when the sale of such property is necessary for the maintenance of the minor. There was no evidence that the plaintiff had satisfied the requirements of the Mahomedan law as to immediate and confirmatory demands, or that there was any custom which absolved him from compliance with those requirements, or that he was at any time willing to pay the actual contract price. Held that in the absence of evidence of any special custom different from, or not co-extensive with, the Mahomedan law of pre-emption, that law must be applied to the case, and that, under the circumstances above stated, the suit failed and must be dismissed. Fakir Rawot v. Emambakhsh, B. The principle of the law of pre-emption is, that the pre-emptor should assert his right as soon as he has heard of the sale; that he should demand his right from the vendor or purchaser, or on the ground, in the presence of witnesses; and this assertion and demand may be simultaneous; but if they are not, the pre-emptor, when he makes the demand, is required to make a declaration before witnesses that he asserted his right when first he heard of the sale. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887), s. 37—Pre-emption on basis of contract or custom.—In a suit for pre-emption based on the wajib-ul-urz of a village, the plaintiff pre-emptor did not ask for a declaration that he was entitled to be treated as a purchaser from the date of the sale to the vendees-defendants, nor that he was entitled to the rents and profits as from the date of the sale, nor did he ask for mesne profits. The decree in his favour did not grant him any such relief. The wajib-ul-urz was silent as to whether the purchaser or the pre-emptor was entitled to the profits accruing subsequently to the date of the sale being avoided. Held by the Full Bench that the decree merely avoided the sale and divested the original owners of all interest in the property as from the date when the decree became final by the payment, in accordance with its terms, by the pre-emptor of the pre-emptive price decreed, and vested in the pre-emptor the rights of ownership from that date, and his rights were not postponed until he had obtained possession of the property. Held that the profits of the property which accrued between the date of the sale and the date when the pre-emptor, in accordance with the decree, paid the decreed pre-emptive price, belonged not to the pre-emptor, nor to the original vendor, but to the original vendees. Held by MAHMOOD, J., that the vendees-defendants were entitled to the profits accruing up to the date when the pre-emptor acquired possession of the property in accordance with the terms of the decree. Observations by MAHMOOD, J., upon the texts of the Mahomedan law applicable to the case by way of analogy; upon the contention that there is a Hindu law of pre-emption applicable to Hindus, under s. 37 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887); and upon the relation of the Mahomedan law to cases in which pre-emption is claimed on the basis of contract or custom embodied in the wajib-ul-urz of a village. MAHOMEDAN LAW—PRESUMPTION OF DEATH.

1. ———— Missing person—Evidence Act, I of 1872, s. 108—Act VI of 1871, s. 24.—The rule contained in s. 108 of the Evidence Act governs the case of a Mahomedan who has been missing for more than seven years, when the question of his death arises in cases to which, under the provisions of s. 24 of Act VI of 1871 (Bengal Civil Courts Act), the Mahomedan law is applicable. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The rule of the Mahomedan law that a missing person is to be regarded as alive till the lapse of ninety years from the date of his birth, is, according to the most authoritative texts of the Mahomedan law itself, a rule of evidence and not of "succession, inheritance, marriage, or caste, or any religious usage or institution," within the meaning of s. 24 of Act VI of 1871. MAZHAR ALI v. BUDH SINGH [I. L. R., 7 All., 297

2. ———— Right of inheritance.—Held that, as under the Mahomedan law a missing person is considered "defunct" as regards others' property, and cannot inherit from others during the period allowed for his reappearance, the plaintiff, his son, and nearest relative of the widow, was entitled to get the money claimed, it being compensation for land which had been found to belong to her exclusively, and not as having descended from her husband. IMAM ALI KHAN v. ABDUL ALI KHAN [2 Agra, 28

3. ———— Position of, as to inheritance during absence—Person in unlawful possession—Legal heir.—Held that, assuming the Mahomedan law to provide that the share of a missing person, which has devolved on him during his absence, is to be reserved or held in suspense until the expiration of the term after which he is to be regarded as dead, a claimant who had no title whatsoever to possession could not benefit by such provision of Mahomedan law in face of the person who would be the legal heir failing the missing person, and the possession of such unlawful holder can be disturbed by such legal heir. 4. ———— Alienation by heirs of—Right of alienee.—In a suit to recover possession of a share of landed property, where plaintiff claimed on the ground of purchase from the heirs of the proprietor, who had been missing for many years, and in which the defendant set up a mokurari, and pleaded that as ninety years had not elapsed since the disappearance of the proprietor the property could not, under Mahomedan law, be inherited by his heirs, and the alienation by them was therefore invalid,—Held that, as plaintiff had been found in possession under the conveyance from the heirs, who did not dispute his title, the defendant, a stranger, who had failed to prove either title or possession under the mokurari which he set up, was not in a position to advance the plea in question. Held that ninety years is the least period within which, according to Mahomedan law, the estate of a missing person can be alienated by his heirs. 5 ———— Alienation of property by his heirs—Claim of other heirs—A claim by the wife and daughters of a missing person to obtain possession of the shares to which the missing person would have been entitled in the estate of two brothers and a sister on surviving them, was rightly dismissed, under Mahomedan law, on the ground that the death of the missing person was not proved, and ninety years had not elapsed from his birth. A sale of the shares by R, the brother of the missing person, who was in possession, was properly declared null and void. 25. ——————— Administration of the estate of a Shiah Mahomedan under his will—Alleged gift—Claims as between his childless widow and the estate—Right of childless widow to maintenance—Legacies chargeable on one-third only of the estate—Commission to executor.—A Mahomedan of the Shiah sect, dying without issue, left a widow. She as his childless widow was entitled to one-fourth of his estate other than land. In the administration of his estate the following matters arose and were decided. The handing over, with formal words of gift by the testator to the widow, of deposit receipts, with intent afterwards to transfer the money into her name at the bank, which transfer was not effected, would not constitute a gift. A commission of three per cent. on the proceeds of the sale of the testator's property, directed by his will, was bequeathed to the executor. This was by way of remuneration, but was in no sense a debt. As a legacy, it was payable only out of one-third of the estate which passed by the will. A Mahomedan widow is not entitled to maintenance out of the estate of her late husband, in addition to what she is entitled to by inheritance or under his will. Hedaya, Book IV, Ch. 15, s. 3, Mohomedan law, Imamia, by N. E. Baillie, p. 170, referred to. No contract could be implied that this widow should pay an occupation rent on account of her having continued to occupy a house belonging to the testator's estate, for eleven months after his death. Her occupation was referable to her position, and no notice was given to her that rent would be charged. A Mahomedan childless widow is not by Shiah law entitled to share in the value of land forming the site of buildings that belonged to her husband's estate. Her one-fourth includes, as was admitted, a share in the proceeds of sale of the buildings. The text quoted in Book VII, C. IV, p. 293, of Baillie's Mahomedan Law, Imamia, is not to be construed as referring only to agricultural land. AGA MAHOMED JAFFER BINDANIM v. KOOLSOM BIBEE. 22. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, s. 488—Question to be determined under that section—Maintenance of wife—Wife's right to separate maintenance.—Before a Magistrate makes an order under s. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), he must find that the complainant is the wife of the person from whom she claims maintenance, and that he has either neglected or refused to maintain her. The complainant claimed maintenance from her husband, G, under s. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. In the course of the proceedings, G pleaded that his marriage with the complainant was not valid according to Hindu law, but offered to maintain her in his house, as he had hitherto done. This offer was not accepted. The Magistrate held that the offer was not one within the meaning of s. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, because G denied the validity of his marriage with the complainant, and refused to keep her with him as his wife. Held that there is no authority for the proposition that the words "as his wife" should be read into s. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Marakkal v. Kandappa Goundan, *I. The husband did not refuse to maintain his wife, but the petitioner refused to live with him, as he kept a concubine. Held that the word "adultery" in s. 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code must, by virtue of s. 4 of the Code, be construed with reference to the definition of the term in s. 497 of the Penal Code. Consequently a husband's immorality, which does not amount to "adultery" or involve the degradation of a married woman being brought into the society of a concubine, is not sufficient ground for a wife's refusal to live with her husband. An offer to maintain a wife must be an offer to maintain with the consideration due to her position as a wife. Marakkal v. Kandappa, I. L. R., 6 Mad., 371, cited. Per BEST, J.—It is very doubtful if the framers of s. 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure intended the word "adultery" as used therein to have the limited meaning given to it in the Penal Code. The wrong done to the wife is in no way affected by the circumstance of her husband's concubine being married or unmarried, or, in case of her being married, whether it is with or without her husband's consent or collusion that she is living in such concubinage. In face, however, of s. 4 of the Criminal Procedure Code, no other interpretation of the term "adultery" is possible than the limited interpretation contained in the Penal Code. But it is different as regards the appointment of the guardian of the person The Act provides, in terms for such an appointment being made, and no certificate of appointment is contemplated by the Act on the language of which it is plain that the appointment of a guardian of the person is complete on the order of the Court being made appointing him The plaintiff's mother G died in 1866 possessed of property which she had inherited from her husband The plaintiff who was born in 1858 was then a minor of the age of eight years In 1867 the plaintiff's maternal grandfather obtained a certificate of administration On his death an order of Court was made on the 21st March 18 3, appointing the nazir of the Court administrator of the property and the plaintiff's mother in law the guardian of the person of the plaintiff but no fresh certificate of administration was granted In 1880 the plaintiff brought the present suit against the defendants to recover from them the property left by her mother The defendants contended (inter alia) that the plaintiff had attained her majority in 1874 when she arrived at the age of sixteen, and that the suit was therefore barred by limitation The plaintiff on the other hand contended that the Indian Majority Act (IX of 1875) was applicable, and that under its provisions she did not attain majority until she was twenty-one i e, until the year 1879, and that the present suit was therefore in time Held that the suit was not barred by limitation The Indian Majority Act (IX of 1875) was applicable (except so far as its operation was excluded by s 2) inasmuch as there was a guardian of the person of the plaintiff in existence both when she arrived at the age of sixteen and also when she was eighteen and therefore the period of minority for her was extended to twenty-one years of age Quære—Whether the fact that a guardian has been at one time appointed is sufficient to bring the case within s. 3 of the Indian Majority Act (IX of 1875) so as to extend the period of minority to the age of twenty-one The intention of the Legislature to be gathered from s. 3 would appear to be to extend minority to twenty-one years of age in cases where, at the time the minor reaches the age of eighteen his person or property is in the hands of a guardian YEKNATH v WARUBAI

It was subsequently dishonoured, and a suit was then brought by the bank which had cashed the cheque, to recover the amount from the indorser and drawer. The former alleged that the drawer had requested him to sign his name to the cheque, saying that it was a mere matter of form, and he would not be liable for the amount, and that the bank would only cash the cheque when indorsed by him; and in consequence he consented to indorse it, but that he did so without any intention of incurring liability as indorser; that he received no consideration, and that his indorsement was in blank, and not in favour of the bank, and was converted into a special indorsement without his knowledge and consent. The Court held that, at the time of indorsement, the indorser was a minor under English law, and dismissed the suit on the ground of minority. Held that, if the Court was satisfied of the fact of the defendant's minority, it should have complied with the provisions of s. 443 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that, assuming the indorser to have been sui juris, the indorsement, taken in conjunction with the facts proved, established a contract by which the indorser was bound to pay the cheque. Per STRAIGHT, Offg. C.J., and DUTHOIT, J., that it was by no means clear or certain that there was any rule of international law recognizing the lex loci contractus as governing the capacity of the person to contract, but that, assuming such a rule to be established, the specific limitation of the Majority Act (IX of 875) to "domiciled persons" necessarily excluded its application to European British subjects not domiciled in British India; that s. 11 of the Contract Act must be interpreted as declaring that the capacity of a person in point of age to enter into a binding contract was to be determined by his own personal law, wherever such law was to be found; that this rule was not affected by the Majority Act, so far as concerned persons temporarily residing, but not domiciled in British India, whose contractual capacity was still left to be governed by the personal law of their personal domicile; and that such law in the case of European British subjects was the common law of England, which recognized twenty-one as the age of majority. Per OLDFIELD, J., that by the rule of the jus gentium, as hitherto understood and recognized in England, the lex loci would govern in respect to the capacity to contract, but that in framing the Indian Majority Act, which was the lex loci on the subject in India, the Legislature would appear not to have adopted that rule, but, by limiting the operation of the Act to persons domiciled in British India, to have intentionally excluded from its operation persons not domiciled there, and to have left such persons to be governed by the law of their domicile. Per BRODHURST, J., that Act IX of 1875 was intended by the Legislature to be applicable, and in fact was applicable, only to European British subjects domiciled in those parts of India referred to in s. 1, and that to any other European British subject whose domicile was in England, but who was temporarily residing in any part of India above alluded to, the privileges and disabilities of minority attached until he had attained the age of twenty-one years. MALABAR LAW—ADOPTION

1. ——— Adoption by the last member of a Nambudri illom. In a suit for a declaration that the members of the Nambudri illom to which the plaintiffs belonged were the sole heirs and successors of an illom known as Kiluvapura, of which the natural line had become extinct and for possession of certain land which had formed part of its property, the defendants were the karnavan and manager of the plaintiffs' illom and the members of another illom. It was found on the evidence that the plaintiffs' karnavan had been adopted into the Kiluvapura illom and that subsequently that illom and the plaintiffs' had been amalgamated under a karar executed by, among others, the wife of the last male member of the Kiluvapura illom and that she had died before this suit. Held that the adoption of the plaintiffs' karnavan was valid even assuming that no datta homam was performed and the last male member of the Kiluvapura illom had died after merely indicating him as his heir and that the widow adopted him in the Dwayamushyayana form, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree as prayed. 2. ——— Adoption by the karnavan of a Marumakkatayam tarwad — Want of consent by the rest of the tarwad. A tarwad in Malabar subject to Marumakkatayam law was reduced in number to two persons, viz., the karnavan and his younger brother, the plaintiff. They quarrelled, and the former without the consent of the latter adopted as members of the tarwad his son and daughter and her children. On his death the plaintiff sued for possession of the tarwad property and for a declaration that the adoptions were invalid. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief asked for. 30. ——— Suit to set aside decree and recover lands sold under it.—In suits by a branch karnavan of a Malabar tarwad to recover certain lands belonging to his branch tarwad, which had been mortgaged by a former branch karnavan, the plea was that the plaintiff had no right to sue without the authority of the senior member of the family, the velia kaimal. Upon an issue sent down (in special appeal) by the High Court, it was found by the Civil Judge that there was no binding and peculiar custom in the family depriving the senior member of all management of the property, and vesting it in the branch karnavans. Upon the final hearing it was contended that the contrary had been so irrevocably fixed by judicial decision as to prevent the matter from being open to question, and that this finding was bad in law, as being opposed to binding decrees of competent Courts. Held by HOLLOWAY, J., (1) that there was nothing compelling the Court to decide, contrary to the plain rules of law, that this delegation was irrevocable; that perhaps it was not so even by the delegator, and still less was it so by his successors; (2) that the fact of the setting apart of santam property, if it was set apart, can make no difference, and as little can the circumstance of the income reserved; (3) that there was nothing to prevent the Court from deciding that the Civil Judge was right in saying that this was an ordinary Malabar tarwad; and (4) that the renunciation before the Sudder Court was not even irrevocable as against him who made it, and certainly could not have the effect of depriving the senior member, for all future time, of the rights which the law of the country conferred upon him, with the correlative duties upon his becoming senior. By SCOTLAND, C.J.—That the Court was not constrained to hold that the irrevocability of the arrangement effected in 966 by the former head of the family, as to the apportionment of the family property between two taverais, and the management of each taverai's allotment by its senior member, was a matter conclusively adjudicated in the course of the litigation, of which there was proof in the records; that such arrangement operated only as a personal renunciation and delegation of the rights of management possessed by the then head of the tarwad; and that, assuming it to have been irrevocable by him, it was not binding on the third defendant, admittedly the head of the family, by right of seniority. —Adverse possession—Limitation.—In 1851 the ejaman of an Aliyasantana family mortgaged family property to the ancestor of some of the defendants who and whose alienees were now in possession. The mortgagor died leaving, besides one brother, two sisters, each having a son—the family remaining undivided. In 1856 one of the sons, with the concurrence of his uncle and mother, conveyed the land to the mortgagee, but this transaction was not justified by any family necessity; and in 1857 the other son and his mother sold their undivided moiety to the plaintiff's predecessor in title. In a suit to redeem the mortgage of 1851, the plaintiff obtained a decree for redemption of a moiety of the mortgaged property. Held that, although it may have been supposed in 1857 that compulsory partition was permitted by the Aliyasantana law, yet as the right to the half share purported to be sold in 1857 had no legal existence, nothing could pass by that sale, and the suit should be dismissed. In 1882 a partition had been come to between the members of the tarwad under which the property in suit had been allotted to the plaintiff. Held that the state of things when the debt was contracted must be looked to, and at that time the karnavan was competent to bind all the members of the tarwad. It appeared that the alleged previous karnavan had died less than twelve years before the suit was filed, but more than twelve years before the joinder, as a supplemental defendant, of one to whom he had conveyed certain property by way of gift five years before his death. An issue was raised as to whether the rights of the parties were governed by Makkatayam or Marumakkatayam law, and an order of a District Munsif, reciting a petition to which the alleged previous karnavan was a party, was put in evidence to show that he had in a particular instance acted in the capacity of karnavan of a Marumakkatayam tarwad. Held (1) that on the allegations in the plaint the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the suit alone, and that the suit was not bad for multifariousness; (2) on the evidence, that the plaintiff had succeeded to the office of the previous karnavan as alleged, and that the previous karnavan had followed the Marumakkatayam rule, although it was shown that other members of the family had dealt with property, described as self-acquired, under the precepts of Mahomedan law. same day (the 24th) a letter signed by the Municipal Commissioner was delivered to the plaintiff, dated the 23rd March, informing him that a "fresh summons" had been issued against him for not complying with the requirements of the notice served on him. The Courts held that the non-appearance of the plaintiff on the 24th March was not caused by the receipt of this letter. On the 24th idem, in consequence of the non-appearance of the plaintiff in obedience to the summons, a warrant of arrest was issued against him. The date originally inserted in the warrant for the plaintiff's appearance before the Magistrate was the 7th April, but this date was subsequently altered to the 2nd June. There was no evidence as to how or by whom this alteration was made. The plaintiff, having heard on the 5th March of the issue of the warrant, appeared next day (the 26th) before the Magistrate and surrendered, showing to the Magistrate the defendant's letter of the 23rd March and explaining why he had not attended on the 24th. A note was made of his surrender, and he was told by the Magistrate to appear on the 7th April. The plaintiff, however, did not get the warrant cancelled. He stated that at the office of the Presidency Magistrate's Court he was informed that the warrant was with the Municipality, and that he then went away and did nothing more. On the 7th April the Municipal Engineer went to the plaintiff's premises, and pointed out the work that was to be done. He (the plaintiff alleged) told the plaintiff that he need not attend the Police Court that day, as he would get the hearing of the summons postponed for a fortnight. The plaintiff then instructed a plumber to do the requisite work, which was completed (as plaintiff alleged) on the 26th April, and was passed and approved by the Municipal authorities. The plaintiff swore that he attended the Police Court on the 21st April, but apparently did not bring his appearance to the notice of the Magistrate, as the Municipal officers had left the Court before he arrived. He further stated that he attended again on the 28th April, but was told by a Municipal inspector that he might go away, as the work was done. Another hearing was apparently fixed for the 19th May, but the case was again adjourned to the 2nd June. On the 31st May the plaintiff was arrested in execution of the warrant of the 24th March. The evidence was that on that morning, at 8 o'clock, a Municipal inspector, H, who was not called as a witness at the hearing, accompanied by a Police sepoy, went to the plaintiff's house and pointed out the plaintiff to the sepoy who arrested him and took him in custody to the police station and subsequently before the Magistrate. He was released on depositing R25 as security for appearing when required. On the 16th June the plaintiff again appeared in the Police Court, when the summons was withdrawn. The plaintiff claimed R10,000 as damages for malicious prosecution, wrongful arrest, and detention in custody and false imprisonment. The defendant denied that he had applied for or obtained the warrant for the plaintiff's arrest or that he or his servants had any- ... to do with the arrest or was responsible for it, ... -inspector who knew nothing of ... out the plaintiff to a police officer at the latter's request. He further denied that the proceedings were malicious and without reasonable and probable cause. The lower Court (STARLING, J.) held that the defendant was liable for the wrongful execution of the warrant against the plaintiff and awarded the latter R500. On appeal, —Held (affirming the decree of the lower Court) that the defendant was liable. On the 28th April, at any rate, the warrant in question was a spent warrant, and could not be properly executed, as it was, on the 31st May. As the warrant was issued by the Magistrate of his own accord, the defendant could not be liable for its execution (as shown by the case of West v. Smallwood, 3 M. & W., 418), unless he or his subordinates took an active part in executing it. The mere circumstance that the plaintiff was pointed out to the police officer who executed the warrant by a Municipal inspector might not of itself amount to taking an active part. But there were special circumstances which should be taken into consideration in conjunction with it. The length of time which elapsed before the warrant was executed, and the alteration of the date in the direction contained in the warrant as to taking bail, not explained in any way, and which could not have been made by th[e] police, pointed to the warrant having been, if not the actual keeping of the Municipal authorities, at a[ny] rate under their control, and to the police having b[een] set in motion by them. Under these circumstan[ces] it was incumbent on the defendant to give rebut[ting] evidence, and more especially to call the Muni[cipal] inspector to explain the circumstances under whi[ch he] pointed out the plaintiff to the police officer executed the warrant. By consent decrees were passed in these suits that, unless the opponent paid a certain sum of money to the applicant within two months, the latter should get possession. After the expiration of two months, the applicant, alleging that the money had not been paid as agreed, applied for execution of the decrees. The Mamlatdar found that the money had been tendered to the applicant, but had been wrongfully refused by him. He ordered execution to issue as to costs, but declined to make any order as to possession. The applicant thereupon applied to the High Court in its extraordinary jurisdiction, and alleged that the money had not been duly tendered. Held that the decrees were such as the Mamlatdar could not legally make under the provisions of the Mamlatdars' Courts Act (Bombay Act III of 1876), and the consent of parties could not give him power to do so. The plaintiff subsequently brought this suit in the Mamlatdar's Court to recover possession of the said land, alleging that the defendants, by taking cocoanuts from trees standing thereon, had dispossessed him of the said land otherwise than by due course of law. The Mamlatdar held that the plaintiff had been thereby dispossessed, and passed a decree ordering the defendants to deliver up possession of the land to the plaintiff, together with the trees growing thereon. Held that the Mamlatdar had no jurisdiction to pass the decree. The Civil Court had passed a decree giving the parties joint possession of the land, and the Mamlatdar had no jurisdiction to override that decision and to place the plaintiff in exclusive possession. By the decree of the Civil Court they were determined to be joint owners, and the remedy in case of unequal possession or taking of produce was a suit for an account or for partition. ——— "Houses"—"Premises."—The intention of Bombay Act III of 1876, as stated in the preamble, was not to abolish the old Mamlatdars' Courts and create new Courts under the same name, but was to bring into one consolidating and amending Act so much of the old law and such new law as appeared necessary for the continued regulation of the existing Courts The High Court is therefore not deprived of the powers of superintendence and revision which it exercised over the Mamlatdars' Courts previously to the passing of that Act Per PINHEY and F D MELVILL JJ—Under Bombay Act III of 1876, the Court of a Mamlatdar has for purposes of the Act, jurisdiction in a town or city situated within the ordinary limits of his talukh The word "premises" used in s. 4 of the Act includes "houses;" and the jurisdiction of the Mamlatdar's Court consequently extends over a house for purposes of the Act It being not denied that the city of Ahmedabad is within the limits of the Daskroi talukh the jurisdiction of the Court of the Daskroi Mamlatdar extends over a house in the city of Ahmedabad BAI JAMNA v BAI JADAV [I. Rights of widow under Mahomedan law—Divorce.*—In a suit to obtain a widow's share under Mahomedan law in the estate of the deceased, it was proved that the plaintiff and deceased had been married in 1855 as professed Christians in a church at Meerut; that subsequently, having reverted to Mahomedanism, they were married a second time according to Mahomedan law in nikah form, which second marriage had not been dissolved by a Mahomedan divorce. In 1886 the husband died, leaving a will excluding the wife from all participation in his estate. Held that the personal status of the deceased being at the time of his death that of a Mahomedan, and the plaintiff's personal status being that of his wife under the same law, she was entitled to a share in his estate, notwithstanding his will, which purported, but under Mahomedan law was inoperative, to exclude her. Quære—Whether in the case of spouses remaining domiciled in India, where religious creed affects the rights incidental to marriage, such as that of divorce, a change of religion made honestly after marriage with the assent of both spouses, without any intent to commit a fraud on the law, effects any change in those rights. 8. ———— Suit by wife for nullity of marriage—General and relative impotency — Impotency quoad hanc — Parsi Marriage Act (XV of 1865), s. 28.—In March 1882 the plaintiff and defendant, Parsis, were married according to the rites and ceremonies of their religion. In October 1882 the plaintiff attained puberty, and for seventeen months from that time she lived with the defendant in his parents' house; but there was no consummation of the marriage. There was no physical defect in either plaintiff or defendant, nor any unwillingness in the plaintiff to consummate the marriage; but the defendant had always entertained such hatred and disgust for the plaintiff as to result, in the opinion of the medical experts, in an incurable impotency in the defendant as regards the plaintiff. The delegates unanimously found, on the evidence, that the consummation of this marriage had from its commencement been impossible; because the defendant was, from a physical cause, namely, impotency as regards the plaintiff, unable to effect consummation. They also found that there was no collusion or connivance between the parties. Held on this finding that such impotency quoad the plaintiff must be regarded as one of the causes going to make consummation of a marriage impossible under s. 28 of Act XV of 1865, there being nothing in the Act to suggest a contrary opinion. The observations of DR. LUSHINGTON and of LORD WATSON in G v. M, L. R., 10 A. C., 171, as to impotency quoad hanc and practical impossiblity of consummation, approved and followed. S. v. 22. ———— Person in wrongful possession without knowledge of defect in his title.—Held, dissenting from a ruling of the late Sudder Court, that mesne profits are always recoverable from a person who has enjoyed them, even though he has been in bonâ fide possession without knowledge of the defect in his title. He would, if he bought with sufficient inquiry, have a remedy against his vendor. MUGUN CHUNDER CHUTTORAJ v. SURBESSUR CHUCKERBUTTY . 8 W. R., 479

23. ———— Person in possession apparently of right afterwards legally dispossessed.—Where a defendant had, with apparent right, occupied newly-formed lands from which the plaintiff ejected him by establishing in a civil suit his superior title, the defendant was held liable to account to the plaintiff for those profits which the defendant had derived from the lands, and which the plaintiff, if he had been in possession, would himself have received. SHURUTCHUNDER DEY SIRCAR v. JADUBNARAIN NUNDEE . . . . . 1 W. R., 90

26. ———— Possession taken by third party after suit.—About the time that judgment was given in plaintiff's favour for possession with wasilat, a third party, in satisfaction of some other claim against the defendant, attached and got possession of the land in dispute. A question consequently arose in executing plaintiff's decree as to the liability for wasilat of the year in which the defendant was put out of possession by the third party. Held that, as under s. 223, Code of Civil Procedure, plaintiff might have executed his decree by removal of the party who had got possession under a title created by defendant subsequent to the institution of the suit, he had the means of recovering possession while defendant had not. Under these circumstances, defendant could not be held liable for the profits. HARADHUN DUTT v. JOYKISTO BANERJEE [11 W. R., 444

29. ———— Joint liability—Wrong-doers not in possession.—The plaintiff purchased a house with land attached, and sub-let the property to his vendor, one of the defendants. The defendants having in collusion prevented his enjoying rent, he sued for rent, but on their intervention the suit was dismissed. He then brought a regular suit, and obtained a decree from the Civil Court for khas possession. 30. ———— Ijmali property where defendants have divided estate.—In a suit to recover possession of land from the ijmali enjoyment of which the plaintiff had been excluded by the joint action of all the defendants who had divided the property between themselves,—Held that the defendants were all equally responsible for the damage sustained by the plaintiff, and that none of them could restrict their liability for mesne profits to that portion only of which they were in possession. Held also that the plaintiff was entitled to obtain mesne profits up to such time as he should get real and substantial, and not merely formal, possession of the property at the hands of the defendants in execution of his decree. He was unable to obtain the rent dakhilas of tenants. He inquired as to the prevailing rates of rent for the land which he measured, and included in his estimate of the mesne profits rents which with ordinary diligence might have been obtained. Upon objections taken the questions arose: (1) whether the assessment should have proceeded only upon the rent actually realized, or the Ameen was right in taking the rent last mentioned into the account; (2) whether the evidence of the rent dakhilas was essential: (3) whether interest, not mentioned in the decree, should have been allowed; (4) whether or not evidence on the application of the objector should have been taken by the Court after return of the evidence taken in the locality by the Ameen together with his report. Held as to (1) that inclusion, in the assessment of mesne profits, of rents, which at the prevailing rates might have been received by ordinary diligence, was authorized by s. 211 of the Civil Procedure Code. As to (2), that the dakhilas were important evidence, but not essentially necessary. As to (3), that the expression "mesne profits" included, under s. 211, interest on them; but this could only be allowed for not more than three years from the decree, or until possession within that time. As to (4), the question must be decided on general principles in each case. In this instance judicial discretion had been rightly exercised in the Court executing the decree declining to take fresh evidence. GRISH CHUNDER LAHIRI v. SOSHI SHIKHARESWAR ROY . . . . I. L. Held (on appeal affirming the above decision)—S. 115 of the Evidence Act has no application to contracts by infants; but the term "person" in that section applies only to a person of full age and competent to enter into contracts. The words "person" and "party" in s. 64 of the Contract Act are interchangeable, and mean such a person as is referred to in s. 11 of that Act, i.e., a person competent to contract. A mortgagor employing an attorney, who also acts for the mortgagee in the mortgage transaction, must be taken to have notice of all facts brought to the knowledge of the attorney; and therefore, where the Court rescinded the contract of mortgage on the ground of the mortgagor's infancy and found that the attorney had notice of the infancy, or was put upon enquiry as to it,—Held (affirming the decision of JENKINS, J.) that the mortgagor was not entitled to compensation under the provisions of ss. 38 and 41 of the Specific Relief Act. Ganesh Lala v. *Bapu, I. The widow also signed kabuliats relating to both tenancies, agreeing, as mother of the minor, to pay the enhanced rent. Held that, as the patnidar was entitled to sue for enhancement, and it was not to be presumed that the mother held adversely to her son; also as she had come to what she believed to be, and was, a proper arrangement, the son, on his attaining full age and entering into possession of the tenancies, was bound by the kabuliats. On the 8th of March 1881 the Judge issued an ad interim injunction. When the application came on for hearing, it appeared that the marriage had taken place before the order of injunction had reached the parties. The District Judge found that, though the mother was entitled to the custody of the minor, yet the petitioner was entitled to give the minor in marriage in preference to the mother. that the marriage had not in fact been validly performed. On appeal to the High Court, it was contended that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to determine the right of any party to give an infant in marriage on an application under Act IX of 1861, or to grant an injunction; and it was also contended that the Magistrate was wrong in entering into the question of the factum of the marriage. Held that, under the provisions of Act IX of 1861, the District Judge had jurisdiction. Balmakund v. *Janki, I. consent—Beng. Reg. X of 1793—Manager of Court of Wards, Power of.—A decree-holder, who rests his case upon his decree having been made against a minor by consent, is under the necessity of proving that the consent was given by some one having authority to bind the minor thereby. In 1872, in the Settlement Court, a decree for land was made adversely to a minor, of whose persons, or for the suit, no guardian had been appointed. The minor's estate was under the charge of the Court of Wards, consisting, in the first instance, of the Deputy Commissioner of the district, who had appointed a manager of the estate. The mukhtear of the Court of Wards informed the Settlement Court that the manager consented to a decree, which was thereupon made in favour of the claimant. Held that there was no occasion to decide whether the minor was substantially a party to the suit in the Settlement Court, or whether his interests had not been prejudiced by his not having been impleaded through a guardian, or whether there had been fraud in the giving or alleging consent. But that the affirmative of the question whether the consent had been competently given on the minor's behalf was upon the defendant in the present suit, who had obtained the decree upon it. Their Lordships were of opinion that it had not been shown that the manager was authorized by the Court of Wards to give to the mukhtear authority to make the admission. It was not enough that the mukhtear was the mukhtear of the Court of Wards, and said that he had authority to admit the claimant's right. The decree of the Settlement Court was set aside on this last ground. The decision of the original Court in this suit, that the claimant in the settlement suit had not proved the title claimed by him, was also affirmed MUHAMMAD MUMTAZ ALI KHAN v. SHEO-RUTTANGIR . . 48. ———— Wrongful admission of title against a minor—Suppression of facts by a manager appointed by the Court of Wards—Order of Settlement Court cancelled.—At a settlement of a district in Oudh a sub-settlement was decreed in conformity with Act XXVI of 1866, which legalizes rules as to claims in respect of subordinate rights to land. The claimant alleged himself to be in virtue of a birt tenure held by him, under-proprietor of a village within the talukh of a talukhdar then a minor, whose estate was under charge of the Court of Wards, whose representative, the Deputy Commissioner of the district, had appointed a manager of the estate. This manager having reported favourably on the claim, the Deputy Commissioner sanctioned its admission; whereupon a decree for sub-settlement was made on the 30th June 1871. The present suit was brought by the talukhdar, after attaining full age, to have that decree set aside as having been obtained by fraud and collusion. That the manager was brother of the alleged birt-holder, and that he was family share-holder with him in the village, facts which the manager had suppressed, were facts proved in this suit. The defendants attempted, but failed, to establish by evidence the existence of the alleged birt. Held that the admission in the Settlement Court in 1871 was not binding on the plaintiff, and that, even assuming that the defendants' ancestor had been in some way in occupancy before 1857, the evidence was quite insufficient to show that a grant of a perpetual under-proprietary right had been obtained. The decree of the lower Appellate Court, cancelling the Settlement Court's order, was therefore upheld. RAM AUTAR v. MAHAMMAD MUMTAZ ALI

The mother had not taken out a certificate under Act XL of 1858, and no permission was recorded by the Court allowing the mother to defend on behalf of the infants, under the provisions of s. 3 of that Act. A decree was made in the suit, and in execution thereof certain property belonging to A and B was sold and purchased by X, the decree-holder. Subsequently on A's coming of age, A and B, by A as his next friend, instituted a suit against X and their mother to recover the property so purchased by X. Held that under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859 it was not necessary to formally record sanction to the mother to defend under s. 3 of Act XL of 1858; and that the fact of sanction having been given might be presumed by the Court, and that on the facts of the case such presumption was warranted. Held also that, though A and B were not properly described in the previous suit, it was a mere defect in form, and did not affect the merits of the case, being in accordance with the prevailing practice at the time when the suit was brought; and that there is no authority for saying that, when minors have been really sued, though in a wrong form, a decree against them would not be valid. 102. ——————— Guardian—Guardian of property—Guardian of person—Necessity for issue of certificate of administration in order to complete appointment of guardian of property.—The Bombay Minors Act (XX of 1864) does not, in terms, provide for the appointment of a guardian of the property of a minor, but only for the grant of a certificate of administration, so that, until the certificate is issued, there is no such appointment of the guardian of the property as will extend the age of the minority from eighteen to twenty-one. But it is different as regards the appointment of a guardian of the person. The Act provides, in terms, for such an appointment being made, and no certificate of appointment is contemplated by the Act, on the language of which it is plain that the appointment of a guardian of the person is complete on the order of the Court being made appointing him. The plaintiff's mother, G, died in 1866 possessed of property which she had inherited from her husband. The plaintiff, who was born in 1858, was then a minor of the age of eight years. In 1867 the plaintiff's maternal grandfather obtained a certificate of administration. On his death, an order of Court was made on the 21st March 1873, appointing the Nazir of the Court administrator of the property and the plaintiff's mother-in-law the guardian of the person of the plaintiff, but no fresh certificate of administration was granted. In 1880 the plaintiff brought the present suit against the defendants to recover from them the property left by her mother. The defendants contended (inter alia) that the plaintiff had attained her majority in 1874, when she arrived at the age of sixteen, and that the suit was therefore barred by limitation. The plaintiff, on the other hand, contended that the Indian Majority Act (IX of 1875) was applicable, and that, under its provisions, she did not attain majority until she was twenty-one, i.e., until the year 1879, and that the present suit was therefore in time. Held that the suit was not barred by limitation. The lower Courts dismissed the suit on the ground that separate causes of action, not between the same parties, had been included in one suit. The High Court reversed the decrees, of the lower Courts so far as they dismissed the suit against the heirs of the mortgagors and the mortgagee, and remanded the suit for trial, as since the heirs of the mortgagors were interested in the account which must have been taken in the suit, it was necessary to make them parties in order that they might be bound by it. There was nothing to show that such third person had any interest distinct from the first defendant. Held that there was no misjoinder. The principle laid down in the cases of Houghton v. Money, L. R., 2 Ch. App., 166, and Luchumsey Ookerda v. *Fazulla Cassumbhoy, I. L. The defendants claimed portions of the land under different titles and pleaded misjoinder. The Court, upon the Ameen's report, gave A the option to amend the plaint by withdrawing the suit against any particular sets of defendants. A elected to go to trial on the suit as brought. Held that, under the circumstances, it was necessary for the Court to adjudicate on the question of misjoinder. Held also that the plaintiff was not entitled to join in one suit all the persons, on the ground that they obstructed his possession, unless he was able to show that those persons acted in concert or under some common title. Held further that, having regard to the provisions of ss. 31 and 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, the proper order of the Court should have been to reject the plaint and not dismiss the suit on the ground of misjoinder. 20. ———————— Civil Procedure Code, s. 44, Rule (b).—An objection to the attachment and sale of certain immoveable property, raised by one who claimed to have purchased the same at a sale in execution of a prior decree, was disallowed on the ground that under the prior decree the rights of one only of the present judgment-debtors had been sold and purchased by the objector. In accordance with this order, two-thirds of the property under attachment were sold; and the objector thereupon brought a regular suit for a declaration of his right as a purchaser of the whole, property in execution of the prior decree. To this suit he impleaded as defendants the decree-holder and the judgment-debtors. The suit was decreed, and in the result the decree-holder alone was compelled to pay the whole of the costs. Subsequently he brought a suit for contribution in respect of these costs, making defendants to the suit (i) R, one of his co-defendants in the previous suit, personally and as heir of A, who was another of those co-defendants, (ii) N, and (iii) S, these two being sued in the character of heirs of A. Held, with reference to a plea of misjoinder within the terms of rule (b) of s. 44 of the Civil Procedure Code, that, even if there were misjoinder of parties, the first Court, having proceeded to trial of the suit, and not having rejected the plaint or returned it for amendment, or amended it, should have disposed of it upon the merits, and found what A's share in the amount paid by the plaintiff was, and whether assets to that amount had come to the hands of the defendants as her heirs. Right to refund—Civil Procedure Code, s. 583.—In a suit for rent, together with interest thereon, brought by a mortgagee against a tenant in occupation of the mortgage premises, one claiming title against the mortgagee was joined as second defendant. The suit was dismissed in the Court of first instance, but the Court of first appeal passed a decree as prayed in the plaint; and in execution the principal amount of the rent claimed, which had been paid into Court by the first defendant with the request that it should be paid out to the person entitled to it, was paid over to the plaintiff. The first defendant preferred a second appeal against the decree, so far as it awarded interest and costs: this second appeal was dismissed. The second defendant, however, preferred against the entire decree a second appeal, which was successful, that the High Court dismissed the suit throughout. He then applied to the Judge to have the money refunded to him. The Judge held the box to be his property, and directed repayment. Held that in making the order for repayment the Judge acted without jurisdiction, there being no provision in the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) under which it could be made. The proper course was to have taken steps under s. 278 of the Code to have the attachment on the property raised. 20. ——— Right to decree for sale of property—Suit for money charged on immoveable property.—The obligor of a bond for the payment of money gave the obligee a moiety of the profits of a certain mouzah up to the end of the current settlement and charged the other moiety of such profits with the payment of such money. It was also stipulated in such bond that the obligee should take the management of such mouzah, rendering accounts to the obligor, and that, if the obligor failed to pay such money when due, the obligee should remain in possession of the entire mouzah until payment of all that was due. The original obligor having died, his heir gave the obligee a second bond, in which he admitted the creation of the original charge and a certain further debt. A portion of such further debt he undertook to pay on a certain date, and he agreed that the balance due should be realized by the obligee from a moiety of the profits of the mouzah, according to the terms of the first bond, and that the mouzah should remain in the obligee's possession until the amounts due under both bonds were realized by him, and that he, the obligor, should have no power to sell, mortgage, or alienate the mouzah. Held in a suit by the obligee on the bonds that the bonds created a mortgage only of the profits of the mouzah and not of the mouzah itself, and accordingly that they did not entitle the obligee to a decree for the sale of the mouzah. Act (IV of 1882), s. 98.—Two out of three co-parceners executed in favour of a creditor in respect of land belonging to the co-parcenary an instrument which contained the following terms: "As we have received R500, you will, in lieu of the said amount and interest, enjoy the said property for three years by virtue of Arakattu otti . . . . on the condition that, on the expiry of the said three years, we should redeem the land without paying either principal or interest. You will, on the expiry of the said period, deliver possession of the said immoveable property without raising any objection." Before the expiration of the term the villages were taken in execution, and sold under a decree at the suit of a third party, and the lessee turned out of possession. Held that the lessee had no claim against the villages for the principal money, and that the sum of R1,000 was forfeited. The relief sought was in effect an injunction to restrain B from collecting the revenue of the zamindari. The defence set up by B in his answer was in substance that the lease was an executory contract, and being without consideration could not be enforced, and was, moreover, void for maintenance, by reason of a subsequent agreement for the advance of a sum of money to carry on a suit which had not been carried out. The Judge of the Civil Court adopted this view and held the lease void. The High Court of Madras on appeal treated the case as a suit for specific performance, and decreed execution of the lease. On appeal the Judicial Committee sustained the decree as to possession under the lease, but as it appeared from the

He then brought a suit against C to set aside the zur-i-peshgi lease and to obtain khas possession. Held that the covenant in the mortgage-bond merely created a personal liability between A and B, and that the sale under B's mortgage decree did not put an end to the zur-i-peshgi lease or affect the interests of the zur-i-peshgidar; that B's suit against C was wrong in form; and that his proper course was to sue to have his right declared to sell the property in satisfaction of his mortgage-debt, so as to give the zur-i-peshgidar an opportunity of redeeming. 58. ———————— Deed, Construction of—Bai-bil-wafa—Foreclosure in the Central Provinces.—By a bond, dated 10th February 1857, a certain village was mortgaged by one G to the appellants and their father as security for a loan; the bond providing that, "if I fail to pay the money as stipulated, I and my heirs shall, without objection, cause the settlement of the said village to be made with you." The interest of G in the village was described as that of a malguzar, and his proprietary right therein was declared by the revenue authorities shortly after the execution of the mortgage, but his payments of revenue being in arrear, the Board of Revenue granted a lease of the village for ten years to the appellants' father. The mortgagees in a suit on the bond obtained the following decree on 3rd November 1860: "As the defendant acknowledges the plaintiffs' claim, it is ordered that a decree be given to the plaintiffs for principal and interest and costs against the defendant and the mortgaged property." In proceedings in the Civil Court taken under this decree, the mortgagees asked for possession of the village, and obtained, on 17th July 1862, an order, in pursuance of which they were put in possession, an appeal by G being rejected. G took various steps to obtain possession of the mortgaged property, or a declaration of his proprietary interest therein, but failed in his endeavours, an application for a grant of the proprietary right in the village, and an appeal from an order cancelling his pottah, being rejected by the revenue authorities on 8th December 1864 and 27th July 1865, respectively; and on 12th August 1867 G conveyed the village by deed of sale to the respondent. In a suit brought by them to redeem the mortgage and obtain possession of the property,—Held that the effect of the bond was to create a simple mortgage, and not a conditional deed of sale; and that the proceedings taken under the decree of 3rd November 1860, and the order made therein of 17th July 1862, by virtue of which the mortgagees obtained possession of the mortgaged property, did not operate so as to extinguish the right of redemption. The other was an agreement by which the defendants covenanted, upon payment of a certain sum by a specified date, to reconvey the property sold by the first-mentioned deed. Held that evidence was admissible dehors the documents to show that the intention of the parties was not to effect an out-and-out sale with merely a right of re-purchase under certain conditions left in the vendor, but to constitute a mortgage by conditional sale or bai-bil-wafa. The mere fact of a deed of absolute sale being accompanied by another giving a right of re-purchase will not, for that reason alone, constitute the transaction one of mortgage, but the intention of the parties must be gathered from the terms of the deeds or from the surrounding circumstances or from both. Alderson v. White, 2 De G. & J., 105; Lincoln v. Wright, 4 De G. & J., 16; Bhagwan Sahai v. *Bhagwan Din, L. The plaintiff in a suit for pre-emption had, prior to the sale of the property claimed, executed a deed in respect of his share in the village in virtue of which he claimed the right to pre-empt, the material portion of which deed was as follows: "Thirdly, if I, the vendor, or the heirs of me, the vendor, Ali Jan, alias Ali Ahmed, should pay off the entire consideration money mentioned above on the Puranmashi of Jeth Sudi 1299 Fasli to the said purchaser, she should without any objection or hesitation receive the money, and, returning the property sold described above in the document to me, the vendor, revoke the sale." Held that this deed was a bai-bil-wafa or mortgage by conditional sale, and that, as the conditional sale had not become absolute at the time when the right of pre-emption accrued, the conditional vendor or mortgagor had still a subsisting right of pre-emption. Bhagwan Sahai v. *Bhagwan Din, I. the event of the property specified being destroyed or proving insufficient to satisfy the debt, the obligee might realize the amount from the obligor's person and other property. The decree directed the sale of the property as in the terms of an ordinary decree for the sale of mortgaged property. In 1885, before any steps had been taken in execution of the decree, the same property was sold in execution of a simple money-decree against the obligor, and the purchaser obtained possession. It was found as a fact that at the time of the sale the bond of October 1875 and the decree thereon of January 1883 were not notified, but through no fault of the obligee decree-holder, and that the purchaser was a bonâ fide transferee for value without notice of the bond and decree. Held that the words "arh" and "mustaghraq" used in the bond implied a power of sale in default and denoted a mortgage without possession: and the transaction, though entered into prior to the passing of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), must be regarded as amounting to a simple mortgage as defined in s. 58 (b) of that Act, and not as merely creating a charge as defined in s. 100; and that consequently the rights of the obligee must prevail over those of the subsequent bonâ fide purchaser for value without notice of the bond and the decree thereon. Held also by MAHMOOD, J., that the title of the judgment-debtor at the time of the sale in 1885 in execution of the simple money-decree was subject to the mortgage-decree of January 1883, and the purchaser at the sale could acquire no higher title than the judgment-debtor possessed, and was equally bound by the terms of the decree of January 1883 in respect of the property which he had purchased, and could not prevent the property being sold under that decree except by paying up the decretal money. Unnopoorna Dassee v. *Nufur Poddar, 21 W. One of the conditions inserted in the deed of mortgage was that, if "on the part of the mortgagor, or other persons, any kind of dispute or any interference or obstruction took place in obtaining of possession by the mortgagee of the mortgaged property," the mortgagee should be entitled to sue for the mortgage-money. Held that such condition contemplated the case of the mortgagor, in the first instance, in breach of the conditions of the mortgage, failing to deliver possession to the mortgagee or to secure his possession from any obstruction or disturbance by other persons, but not the case of the mortgagee being deprived of possession after it had been once obtained and secured, and therefore the mortgagee was not entitled by virtue of such condition to sue for the mortgage-money. Held further that, the mortgagee's case being that he had been deprived of possession of a part of the mortgaged property, he would be entitled to sue for the mortgage-money only if he had been deprived thereof by or in consequence of the wrongful act or default of the mortgagor, and not if he had been deprived thereof by or in consequence of the wrongful act or default of other persons; that the sale by the mortgagor was not a wrongful act, there being no condition against alienation, and the sale by a mortgagor of his equity of redemption not being rendered wrongful or unlawful by any rule of law, nor being in itself a wrongful act; that a wrongful act by the purchaser, though committed under colour of the purchase, could not be said to have taken place "in consequence of the wrongful act or default of the mortgagor;" and that therefore the mortgagee had no cause of action. —Bom. Reg. V of 1827, s. 15—Limitation for a suit to recover debt personally from the mortgagor where mortgage-deed contains no personal undertaking of repayment.—By a registered mortgage-deed, dated the 11th May 1876, the defendant mortgaged certain land with possession to the plaintiff for a term of five years, the mortgage-deed stipulating that the plaintiff was to enjoy the profits, pay the assessment for it, and restore it to the defendant on repayment of the debt. But no personal undertaking to pay was given by the defendant. The land was sold by the revenue authorities for arrears of assessment due from the defendant for certain other lands of the defendant. The plaintiff now sought to recover the debt personally from the defendant. The Court of first instance dismissed the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the failure on the part of the plaintiff to pay the arrears of assessment disentitled him to recover the debt from the defendant personally. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, who referred the case to the High Court. Held that the plaintiff was not bound to save the mortgaged property from claims under a paramount title, his liability being confined under the terms of the mortgage to the payment of assessment for the property mortgaged which he had duly discharged, and that the case did not fall under s. 15 of Regulation V of 1827. The mortgage consideration for the debt having failed, the debt was recoverable within three years—the registered mortgage-deed containing no personal undertaking by the defendant (mortgagor) to pay the loan. Under this arrangement, he built six shops in the new market-place. Subsequently, the mortgagor of one of the old shops claimed possession of one of the six new ones on payment of the mortgage-money and cost of constructing the shop. Held that the claim could not be allowed, inasmuch as it could be justified only by proof of an agreement binding upon the parties at the time when the transaction occurred that some specific one among the new shops should be substituted for the old one which was the subject of the mortgage, and it had not been found that any such agreement was made. ubsequent mortgagees—Delay in selling—Rescision of notice of sale—Suit by second mortgagee to revent sale—Offer to redeem joint mortgage—Right of mortgagee—Injunction to restrain sale.—Certain property was mortgaged to the defendants in 1885 for R60,000, and the mortgage-deed contained the usual power of sale on notice to the mortgagors or their assigns. The debt was not paid, and the defendants, on the 31st August 1891, gave notice of sale to the mortgagors, but did not then proceed further in the matter. Three days after this notice, viz., on the 3rd September 1891, the mortgagors mortgaged the property to the plaintiffs for R10,000. On the 18th November 1892 the plaintiffs by letter offered to transfer their mortgage to the defendants or to join with them in selling the property. In the event of their being unwilling to accept either of these proposals, the plaintiffs requested the defendants to render an account of the sum due to them in order that they (the plaintiffs) might, if so advised, redeem the defendants' mortgage. On the 3rd December 1892 the plaintiffs by letter enquired whether the defendants were willing to re-convey the mortgaged property on payment of a certain sum, which was less than the amount the defendants claimed, but they did not positively offer to pay the defendants either that amount or the amount which might be found to be due. In April 1893 the defendants advertised the property for sale on the 27th of that month without giving notice of sale to the plaintiffs, and on that day the plaintiffs filed a suit and obtained a rule, restraining the defendants from proceeding with the sale. In the argument of the rule it was contended for the plaintiffs, first, that the defendants had no power to sell, because their mortgage-deed required previous notice of sale to be given to the mortgagors or their assigns, and no such notice had been given to the plaintiffs who, as subsequent mortgagees, were assigns of the equity of redemption; secondly, that the notice of sale given to the mortgagors on the 31st August 1891 had been rescinded, and a fresh notice was therefore required; and, thirdly, that inasmuch as the plaintiffs were willing to redeem the defendants' mortgage, the sale should be restrained. Held (1) that notice to the plaintiffs was not necessary. Proper notice had been given to the mortgagors on the 31st August 1891, three days before the plaintiffs had acquired any interest in the equity of redemption. No further notice was required to be given to any person who at that time was not an assign, in order to enable the defendants to sell under that notice. An assign must take things in the state in which he finds them, and cannot claim to alter rights which have accrued before he has any authority to interfere; (2) that the notice of sale of the 31st August 1891 had not been rescinded by the defendants, who were not bound to give a fresh notice before the sale advertised to be held on the 27th April 1893. The mere fact of a long delay taking place between the maturing of the notice of sale and the actual sale does not make a fresh notice necessary; (3) that on the evidence it did not appear that the plaintiffs were able and willing to redeem the defendants' mortgage. The plaintiffs admittedly had not the money in hand, and the Court would not interfere with a mortgagee's right to sell on the mere chance of the plaintiffs being able to make arrangements to pay the amount due at some uncertain time. Where a mortgage-deed which gave the mortgagee a power of sale contained also a proviso that the remedies of the mortgagors, their heirs, administrators, and assigns in respect of any breach of the clauses or provisions (relating to such sale) or of any impropriety or irregularity whatever in any such sale should be in damages,—Held on the authority of Prichard v. *Wilson, 10 Jur., N. A mehta was accordingly appointed, who received the rents and profits of the village for a year or two, but afterwards permitted the mortgagors to receive them for four or five years. The respondent, who was one of the partners of the firm, did not execute the mortgage, but was cognizant afterwards of the execution of it, and he sued his co-partners, and obtained a decree for his share of the assets of the firm. In execution of his decree, an attachment issued against the estate. In a suit by the mortgagee for the removal of the attachment,—Held that the mortgage was valid up to the time of the notice of the respondent's claim (i.e., when he proceeded to enforce that claim by attachment and when he became in the situation of a second incumbrancer); and that, if after that time he permitted the mortgagors to receive any portion of the produce of the estate, he ought, with respect to the moneys so received, to be postponed to the subsequent incumbrancer. Having attached and sold all properties comprised in his decree situate within the jurisdiction of the B Court, A, under a certificate issued by such Court, obtained an order from the C Court attaching lands included in his decree situate in that district. D intervened, on the ground that he had purchased the same property in execution of another decree of the C Court against the same judgment debtor, and the property was released from attachment. A then sued D and the mortgagor to enforce his mortgage-lien against the property in the C district. Held that the B Court had jurisdiction to give A a decree for the amount of the mortgage-money and interest, though it had not power to enforce the decree against the property in the C district; that the only effect of the decree was to change the nature of the original debt, which was a bond-debt, into a judgment-debt for the mortgage-money and interest; and that, though A could not enforce his lien against the property in the C district under the decree of the B Court, yet, as that property had been sold to a third person, D, he was at liberty to sue D to establish his lien for the mortgage-debt and interest. the decree the property mortgaged to him was advertised for sale on the 20th November 1883. Meanwhile the plaintiff had taken the necessary proceedings to foreclose his conditional sale, and upon the 29th March 1883 the sale was foreclosed. On the 19th November 1883 plaintiff instituted this suit with the object of having it declared that defendant was not entitled to bring to sale the property mortgaged to him. Held that by the conditional sale which became absolute upon the 19th March 1883 the plaintiff acquired all the rights that subsisted under the two mortgages of the 10th October 1871 and 10th October 1872, and was entitled to press those securities in his aid as prior incumbrances to that of the defendant, for the purpose of stopping him from bringing the property to sale in execution of his decree before first recouping the plaintiff the amount which the latter found to satisfy and discharge those incumbrances. Held further that the only right which the defendant had to bring the property to sale was upon the strength of the decree obtained on the bond of 27th January 1874, for he had no right under the instrument in his favour of the 10th August 1878. The defendant should therefore only be permitted to bring the property to sale under his decree in respect of the mortgage of 27th January 1874, when he had satisfied and discharged the two mortgage-bonds held by the plaintiff of the 10th October 1871 and 10th October 1872. The words "immoveable property" in s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act denote, having regard to the definition of "immoveable property" in s. 2, cl. 5 of the General Clauses Consolidation Act (I of 1868), not only the property itself as distinguished from any equity of redemption which the mortgagor might possess in the property, but include the rights of the mortgagor in the property mortgaged at the time of the second mortgage, or in other words his equity of redemption in such property. A second mortgage therefore is, as well as a first mortgage, a mortgage of "specific immoveable property" under s. 58. The cases of Vencatachella Kandian v. *Panjana Dien, I. L. 146. ———————— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 354, 355, and 356—Insolvency—Receiver selling a mortgaged property of insolvent—Purchase at such sale.—By an order, dated the 8th July 1879, A was declared an insolvent under s. 351 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) and his property vested in the Receiver, who was ordered to convert it into money. Nine fields, which were part of A's property, had been mortgaged to the plaintiff, who was duly cited to appear and prove his debt. The plaintiff, however, failed to appear, and he was consequently omitted from the schedule of A's creditors. The Receiver sold one of the fields, which was purchased by A's undivided son G. At the sale the plaintiff gave notice of his claim as mortgagee. After paying off the debts of the scheduled creditors, the Receiver made over to A the residue of the purchase-money and the eight unsold fields. In 1881 the plaintiff sued A for possession of the mortgaged property, and on appeal obtained a decree. While that suit was pending, G sold to the defendant the field which he had purchased. In execution of his decree, the plaintiff recovered possession of the eight fields, but on attempting to get possession of the ninth field he was obstructed by the defendant, who was in possession, and he consequently brought this suit to recover it. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover it from the defendant. The only interest the insolvent had in the mortgaged premises was the equity of redemption, and this having vested in the Receiver under s. 364, he under s. 356 was directed to convert it into money. G therefore at the sale only purchased the equity of redemption in the one field; and the defendant, who now stood in G's shoes with notice of the plaintiff's claim, although he might possibly be entitled to redeem the whole nine fields comprised in the mortgage, was bound to deliver possession to the plaintiff (the mortgagee) until that was done. The mortgaged property could not be sold by the Receiver without the consent of the plaintiff (the mortgagee) or paying him off. S. 356 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) no doubt contemplates the payment of debts secured by mortgage out of the proceeds of the conversion of the insolvent's property in priority to the general creditors; but this must be taken in connection with s. 354, and must be understood as referring to those cases in which the mortgaged premises have been sold after coming to an understanding with the mortgagee. He must first surrender or restore the mortgage security and then urge what title he may have acquired by the purchase. The general rule is that a mortgagee has a right to insist that his security shall not be split up, but in the following cases there is no objection to do so and to rateably distribute the mortgage-debt :—(a) When the mortgagee does not insist on keeping the security entire. (b) When the original contract itself recites that the mortgagors join together in mortgaging their separate shares. (c) When the mortgagee has himself split up the security, e.g., when he buys a portion of the mortgaged estate. In this case he is estopped from seeking to throw the whole burden on that part of the property still mortgaged with him. In 1872 the plaintiffs' father (K) and brother (B) mortgaged seven lots of land with possession to the father of defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3. Four of these lots were subsequently sold to defendants Nos. 4 to 8, with the consent of the mortgagees, who continued in possession of the remaining three lots. In 1878, in execution of a decree, B's interest in these latter three lots was sold, and was purchased by defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3. In 1889 the defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3 sold these three lots to defendant No. 9. In 1881 the plaintiffs (sons and brothers of the original mortgagors) sued to redeem all the lands comprised in the mortgage of 1872. The first Court as to the first four lots held that defendants Nos. 4 to 8 had been in adverse possession of the first four lots for more than twelve years, and that as to them the suit was barred. As to the remaining three lots, it passed a decree for redemption of the plaintiffs' three-fourths share of the lands, and directed that on payment within six months by them of R500 to defendant No. 9 (who stood in the place of defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3), they should be put in possession of the lands jointly with defendant No. 9. In appeal the decree was confirmed as to the first four lots, but as to the remaining three lots, the Judge found that the mortgage debt had been paid, and that a sum of R348-5-0 was due from the mortgagees in possession (defendants Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 9) to the plaintiff. He therefore ordered payment of three-fourths of this amount by defendant No. 9 to plaintiffs, and directed that they should be put in possession of their three-fourths share of the lands jointly with defendant No. 9. On appeal to the High Court as to the right to redeem the said three lots,—Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem the whole of the said three lots which had been admittedly mortgaged in 1872 and not merely a three-fourths share therof, and were also entitled to the whole of the surplus sum of R348 found due by the mortgagees in possession. Held also that defendant No. 9, who had acquired from the mortgagees (defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3) the equity of redemption in part of the mortgaged property, was not entitled to possession of his share jointly with the plaintiffs. The mortgaged property should first be restored to the plaintiffs, and then defendant No. 9 might bring a separate suit for partition. NARAYAN v. GANPAT. GANPAT v. NARAYAN I. L. R., 21 Bom., 619

MAHMOOD, J., contra.—Inasmuch as a mortgagee cannot bring the mortgaged property to sale without the intervention of a Court, a private purchase by the mortgagee of the rights remaining to the mortgagor in such property, though it may be valid as against the mortgagor, can have no effect in defeating the rights of puisne and mesne incumbrancers. Moreover, where a second mortgage to a third party intervenes between the mortgage to and the purchase by the prior mortgagee of the rights of the mortgagor, such intermediate mortgage prevents the merger of the rights of the prior mortgagee as such with those which he might acquire by his purchase. The right of sale is an essential incident of a simple mortgage, and inheres as well in puisne and mesne as in prior mortgagees, subject to the rights of the prior mortgagees. The puisne or mesne mortgagee is not bound by the terms of the prior mortgage, or mortgages, but is entitled to bring the property mortgaged to sale, subject to such prior mortgage or mortgages. In February 1882 C obtained a decree on his mortgage : this decree was discharged by the sale of the land to D, who borrowed part of the purchase-money from the plaintiff, to whom he mortgaged it on the day of the sale. B subsequently obtained against D and the mortgagor's representative a decree on his mortgage, which comprised a declaration that the sale of 1882 was subject to his lien and brought the property to sale and became the purchaser in execution. The plaintiff now sued B and D on his mortgage. Held that the plaintiff's mortgage was entitled to priority over the mortgage of 10th February 1877 to the extent to which the loan secured thereby had gone to discharge the mortgage of 1876. 162. ———— Covenant that mortgagee be entitled to enter—Entry, Right of—Mortgage-deed in English form.—B executed a mortgage-deed in the English form in favour of the L Bank, containing amongst other covenants one providing that, upon default, the mortgagee would be entitled to enter into possession of the mortgaged properties. B died leaving a widow, a daughter and a sister S, his heirs. According to Mahomedan law, S was entitled to a six-annas share of the mortgaged properties. On the 9th of May 1872, after the mortgage-money became due, the L Bank brought a suit, and, on the 13th of July 1872, obtained a decree by consent. The existence or right of S to a share in the properties was not known to the Bank, and she was not made a party to that suit. The Bank, in execution of their decree, caused the mortgaged properties to be sold, and themselves purchased some of them. The sale-proceeds did not satisfy the entire claim. On the 1st of December 1875 S sold her share of six annas in the properties to R. In a suit by R against the purchaser of two of the mortgaged properties at the aforesaid sale it was held that the share of S in the estate of B did not pass to the purchasers, though the Bank purported to have brought the whole sixteen annas in the properties to sale. R then brought this suit for the recovery of possession of the six-annas share of the properties, purchased at the sale by the Bank themselves, and which was now in their possession. Held that under the covenant in the mortgage-deed above referred to, the Bank were entitled to remain in possession as mortgagees until the proportion of the debt which might legitimately be imposed upon the six-annas share of the properties in their hands was paid. 179. ——— Effect of assignment of judgment-debt—Sale on property on which there is a lien—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 270.—A simple decree for money upon a bond by which immoveable property is mortgaged carries with it a lien upon the property mortgaged, and that lien continues as an incident to the debt when it passes from a contract-debt into a judgment-debt, and it continues when such judgment-debt is subsequently assigned to a purchaser. An attachment under a money-decree on a mortgage-bond and a mortgage-lien cannot co-exist separately in the property hypothecated, and such an attachment must be treated when existing as an attachment for enforcing the lien. And if property subject to such lien is sold in execution of a decree while it is under attachment under the decree upon the mortgage-bond, the lien existing upon the property is transferred from the property to the purchase-money, and thereupon the property becomes thenceforth discharged from the lien. If after the rejection of a claim preferred by the mortgagee, or person claiming the lien, no regular suit is brought under s. 270 of Act VIII of 1859 to enforce the lien, that lien is lost, and the decree becomes thenceforth a mere money-decree discharged from any incidental lien. On the 11th June 1877 B obtained a decree on his mortgage which he assigned to the plaintiff, who in execution of the decree sold 6 annas of the mortgaged property and himself became the purchaser. On the 2nd August 1877 C obtained a decree upon his mortgage, and in execution thereof he sold the remaining 4 annas of the mokurari to the plaintiff. Two annas of the 10 annas share of the mokurari mortgaged to C being subject to the dar-mokurari lease to B, the plaintiff brought a suit for the rent of the remaining 8 annas, and in that suit the appellants, who were no parties to any of the previous suits, intervened, on the ground that the plaintiff was not entitled to the 1-anna share which had been purchased by their predecessor in title on the 14th December 1875. Held, reversing the decision of the Court below, that the plaintiff was not entitled as against the appellants to the 1-anna share, the subject of the sale of the 4th December 1875; but that, if the lower Court on remand should find the plaintiff to be in possession of such share, then a decree for rent should be passed in the plaintiff's favour, leaving the appellants to take any steps which they might be advised. Phool Chand v. *Kalian Dass, I. 197. ———— Purchase by mortgagee.—K D, a Hindu widow, by deed appointed R S to be her general mooktear, for the conduct of certain suits in her name which were pending in respect of the estate of her deceased husband. By this deed, dated September 25th, 1858, she covenanted to repay him, within two months of the successful termination of the suits, "all moneys properly disbursed by him on her account, etc.," and also to pay him an additional sum as remuneration to himself. R S entered on the conduct of her business, and advanced certain moneys on her account; and in October 1859 K D executed in his favour a second deed, by which she mortgaged to him her share in the estate of R H, deceased, which was in the hands of his executors, "and my decrees, 24 and 25, in the Zillah Court, and the decree in the Supreme Court, and the right and interest of all the said decrees and all other real and personal properties belonging to the said estate." By a decree of the High Court of 28th July 1862 in one of the suits brought by K D, the estate of R H was declared to consist of a share of a certain talukh, of a share of a house in Calcutta, and of a certain sum of money; and K D was declared to be entitled to one moiety thereof. K D afterwards obtained an order for possession, and held possession of the said talukh until August 1866. R S continued the conduct of K D's business, and advanced more money on her account, in respect of which, on May 31st, 1865, he brought a suit against her; and on September 21st, 1865, obtained a decree in his favour. Under this decree, he attached the right, title, and interest of K D in the estate of R H; and on 25th June 1866 it was put up for sale, and purchased by R S himself. In a suit brought by K D against R S among other things for an account, —Held that R S was a trustee for K D in respect of her share in the estate of R H, which he had purchased in execution of his decree. 198. ———— Lien of mortgagee on sale of right, title, and interest of mortgagor—Writ of fi. fa.—Purchase at Sheriff's sale at instance of mortgagee.—N, M, and G borrowed from B a sum of R12,000, to secure repayment of which they executed in her favour a joint and several bond in May 1863 for payment of the said sum with interest on the 6th May 1864, and also a warrant to confess judgment on the bond on the 27th April 1864. N, M, and G executed a mortgage, in the English form, of certain property to B, purporting to do so in pursuance of an agreement alleged to have been entered into between them and B at the time the money was advanced by B in 1863; but the evidence was not sufficient to show that such agreement had been entered into. Under a writ of fi. fa. issued previously to the mortgage of 1864,—viz., on the 23rd of March 1864,—in a suit against M and N, the Sheriff sold to A, on the 7th July 1864, the right, title, and interest of M and N in the mortgaged property. Assuming that an agreement to mortgage had been entered into in 1863, A had no notice of such agreement. After this a writ of fi. fa. was issued by the Sheriff, at the instance of B, in execution of a decree which B had caused to be entered upon the bond of May 1863; and under that writ the Sheriff, on the 22nd February 1866, sold the right, title, and interest of N, M, and G in the mortgaged property, and A became the purchaser. The purchase-money at this sale was paid to B, and A entered into possession of the property. In a suit by B against A and others on the mortgage of the 27th of April 1864, for foreclosure or sale of the property, the Court below (PHEAR, J.) held that the fi. fa. issued on the 23rd of March 1864, previously to the mortgage, must be taken to have operated against the share of M and N from the date when it was issued; that even if there was an agreement to mortgage, as alleged, then, although as against N, M, and G themselves, a Court of Equity would treat such agreement as equivalent to an actual mortgage, yet it would not do so as against a purchaser under the fi. fa. without notice; and that the sale of the 7th July 1864, therefore, passed the shares of M and N to A free of any rights or equities of B. Further, that the sale by the Sheriff of the 22nd February 1866, having been effected at the instance of B for the purpose of realizing the mortgage-debt, was operative, as between B and A, to pass to A the entire shares of N, M, and G in the property free of B's mortgage-lien. Held on appeal that, no agreement to mortgage being established, the sale by the Sheriff to A in 1864 overrode the mortgage to B, and passed to A the shares of M and N. Held further that the sale by the Sheriff in 1866 being of the right, title, and interest of N, M, and G, and made at the instance of B, without notice of her mortgage, and B having received the purchase-money, which would appear to have been estimated on the value of the unencumbered shares, and no objection having been made to the sale by the mortgagors, who had allowed A to hold unchallenged possession ever since, the entire equitable estate in the share of G must be taken to have passed to A. A mortgagee is not entitled by means of a money-decree obtained on a collateral security, such as a bond or covenant, to obtain a sale of the equity of redemption separately. To allow him to do so would deprive the mortgagor of a privilege which is an equitable incident of the contract of mortgage,—namely, a fair allowance of time to enable him to redeem the property. On 27th August 1867, he executed a similar instrument in favour of defendant No. 2 (G B) on a further loan. On 13th May 1867, he executed a second bond in favour of plaintiff for the amount (principal and interest) due under the first bond. On 29th May 1869, plaintiff obtained a decree against defendant No. 1 for the money due under the bond of 13th May 1867, and on 30th July 1870 defendant No. 2 (G B) also obtained a decree upon his bond against the said debtor. In execution of plaintiff's decree, the property was sold and purchased by decree-holder on 25th August 1870. After this, G B also executed his decree and attached the property, which, notwithstanding plaintiff's objection, was put up to sale and purchased by G B, who obtained possession. Plaintiff sued to have the sale to the latter set aside and his own purchase upheld. Held that plaintiff, on purchasing at the sale in execution, took subject to the defendant's security to this extent, that the defendant by paying off the prior debt might establish his own security. Held that the question whether plaintiff's first security was extinguished by his taking a second security, covering the original debt with interest, would depend upon the intention of the parties, which, in this case, was shown by the original bond having remained in the possession of the creditor. 209. ———— Extinction of charge—Intention of parties—Presumption.—Whether a mortgage, paid off, has been kept alive or extinguished, depends upon the intention of the parties; the mere fact that it has been paid off not deciding the question whether or not it has been extinguished. Express declaration of intention will cause either the one result or the other, and in the absence of such expression the intention may be inferred, either one way or the other. A lender of money upon a mortgage, which, however, having been made by a person not having authority to charge the greater part of the property included in it, was to that extent invalid, relied upon a charge effected in a prior paid-off mortgage to another mortgagee of the same property. The balance due for the prior mortgage-debt had been paid out of the money advanced on the later, and the prior instrument had come into the possession of the present mortgagee. Held that it must be presumed, in the absence of any expression of intention to the contrary, that the borrower, who claimed to be the owner of the property which he attempted to charge, intended that the money should be applied in paying off and extinguishing the prior mortgage, there being no intermediate incumbrance. It being also presumable that the lender lent the money upon the security of the later mortgage, he did not become entitled to an additional security merely because that which he had taken had thus proved invalid in part. Held therefore that the prior mortgage had been extinguished. This sum having been paid into Court, A lost possession of the zamindari. On January 5th, 1875, A had mortgaged the whole zamindari, which consisted of 22 villages, to M to secure a loan of R1,00,000 borrowed by A to pay off the debts of B which A undertook to pay in 1861. On 27th June 1879 A, being indebted to M in the sum of R1,78,000, paid M R1,00,000 and undertook to pay the balance out of the income of the estate, M releasing the 22 villages from the mortgage of January 5th, 1875. On June 28th, 1879, A executed a mortgage of the 22 villages to L, to secure repayment of R1,30,000. Of this sum, R1,00,000 was borrowed to pay M, and R30,000 was a prior debt due by A to L. Of the R1,00,000 paid to M, R27,000 was specially applied to discharge so much of the charge created by the mortgage of January 5th, 1875. 217. ——— Extinguishment of prior mortgage—Intention—Effect of payment of prior mortgage by subsequent incumbrances.—The mortgagor's right, title, and interest in certain immoveables in the Dekkan subject to a first and second mortgage were sold in execution of a decree to a purchaser who afterwards paid off the first mortgage. Held that, as he had a right to extinguish the prior charge or to keep it alive, the question was what intention was to be ascribed to him; and that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption was that he intended to keep it alive for his own benefit. Where property is subject to a succession of mortgages, and the owner of an ulterior interest pays off an earlier mortgage, it is a matter of course, according to the English practice, to have it assigned to a trustee for his benefit, as against intermediate mortgagees, to whom he is not personally liable. But in India a formal transfer for the purpose of a mortgage is never made, nor is an intention to keep it alive even formally expressed. It was ruled in the English Court of Chancery in Toulmin v. Stere, 3 Mer., 210, that the purchaser from an owner of an equity of redemption with actual or constructive notice of another intermediate incumbrance is precluded, in the absence of any contemporaneous expression of intention, from alleging that, as against such other incumbrance, the prior mortgage paid off out of the purchase-money is not extinguished. That case was not identical with this where the prior mortgage was not paid off out of the purchase-money, but was paid off afterwards by the purchaser. The above ruling, however, is not to be extended to India, where the question to ask is, in the interests of justice, equity, and good conscience there applicable—what was the intention of the party paying off the charge. He subsequently executed a second mortgage in respect of some of these properties in favour of one S. The legal representative of L obtained a decree on P's mortgage. While steps were being taken for the execution of that decree, P entered into negotiations with one R, from whom he borrowed R40,000 to pay off the prior mortgages upon a mortgage of the properties included in L's mortgage and other properties, and he promised to take a reconveyance of the properties and make over the mortgage-deeds to R. Two days before the mortgage to R, one of the properties comprised in R's mortgage was attached in execution of a money-decree against P, and subsequently purchased by D, the defendant No. 2, with notice of R's lien. P paid off his prior mortgages on the day following R's mortgage. R having died, his widow instituted the present suit upon the mortgage, contending that the property purchased by D was subject to her claim, he purchasing only the equity of redemption. D contended that he purchased the property free from all encumbrances. The Subordinate Judge gave effect to the plaintiff's contention, and made the usual mortgage decree against P and D. On appeal by D,—Held that the mere fact that the mortgagor pays the money to the prior encumbrancers for his own benefit, namely, with the object of getting a reduction in the amount of the debt, cannot be taken as an indication of an intention on the part reason of his having paid off the registered mortgage of 1880 could at best be that of an assignee of that mortgage having priority over the mortgage-deed on which the plaintiff was suing; that such priority could not enable him to place the equity of redemption upon a higher footing than it would have been had he not paid off the registered mortgage of 1880; and that, as a consequence, the sale of the property in enforcement of the mortgage of 1872 should be allowed to take place, but subject to the rights of priority which J had acquired by reason of his having paid off the registered mortgage of 1880. Sirbadh Rai v. *Raghunath Prasad, I. In 1878 the equity of redemption in plot No. 111 was purchased by J, who paid off the mortgage of 1866. R brought a suit against J to bring to sale the whole of the property included in the mortgage of 1874. The Court of first instance decreed the claim in part exempting from the decree plot No. 111, on the ground that the defendant, by reason of having purchased the equity of redemption in that plot and having paid off the mortgage of 1866, stood in the position of a first mortgagee of that plot, and his mortgage had priority over the plaintiff's mortgage of 1874. The Full Bench modified the decree of the Court of first instance by inserting after the words "land No. 111 be exempted from the hypothecation lien" the words "in that property the interest of the plaintiff as second mortgagee only to be sold." Per OLDFIELD, J., that the second mortgagee could not bring the land to sale so as to oust the first mortgagee, whose mortgage was usufructuary, and get rid of the first mortgage without satisfying it; but that he had a right to sell such interest as he possessed as second mortgagee. Per STRAIGHT, J., that the plaintiff was entitled to bring to sale the property charged to him under his mortgage of 1874, subject to the rights existing in favour of the first mortgagee of 1866: in other words, that a purchaser at a sale in execution of the decree would have no further right than a right to take the property subject to the right of the first mortgagee to possession of the property included in his instrument, and his other rights under that instrument, so long as it enured. At that time the decree-holder held a prior registered incumbrance which he did not personally announce. In 1872 the plaintiffs obtained a money-decree against one D, and in August 1872, in execution of that decree, sold the said groves, and at the sale purchased them and also two mills which were not in dispute in this suit. The decree against D had been found to have the same effect as if it were had and obtained against all the mortgagors. Of this sale H had notice; in fact, he opposed it. Subsequently H, the mortgagee, sued the mortgagors on their mortgage, and obtained a decree on it, and under the decree brought the said groves to sale in 1877, and purchased them himself. In May 1880 H sold the groves to two of the defendants. The plaintiffs, who were not parties to the suit which resulted in the decree under which the groves were sold in 1877, instituted this suit for possession of the groves. Held that, notwithstanding the sale of 1872, what was sold under the decree of 1877 was the right, title, and interest of the mortgagors, as they existed at the date of the mortgage of 21st December 1871, with which would go the rights and interest of the mortgagee; and although at a sale under a decree for sale by a mortgagee the right, title, and interest of the mortgagor which is sold is his right, title, and interest at the date of the mortgage, and any right, title, and interest he may have acquired between the date of mortgage and of the sale, still any puisne incumbrancer or purchaser from the mortgagor prior to the date of the mortgagee's decree, and who was not a party to the suit in which the mortgagee obtained his decree, would have the right to redeem the property which the mortgagor would have had but for the decree. L. R., 1 All., 126; Mul Chand* v. Balgobind, I. L. R., 1 All., 610; and Lachmin Narain v. Koteshar Nath, I. L. R., 2 All., 826, observed on. A mortgage is not extinguished by the purchase of the mortgaged property by the mortgagee, but subsists after the purchase, when it is the manifest intention of the mortgagee to keep the mortgage alive, or it is for his benefit to do so. Gaya Prasad v. Salik Prasad, I. L. R., 3 All., 682, and Ramu Naikan v. Subbaraya Muduli, 7 Mad., 229, followed. It is not absolutely necessary for the first mortgagee of property, when suing to enforce his mortgage, to make the second mortgagee a party to the suit. If the second mortgagee is not made a party to the suit, he is not bound by the decree which the first mortgagee may obtain for the sale of the property, but can redeem the property before it is sold; but if he does not redeem, and the property is sold in execution of the decree, his mortgage will be defeated, unless he can show some fraud or collusion which would entitle him to defeat the first mortgage or to have it postponed to his own. The ruling of TURNER, J., in Khub Chand v. Kalian Das, I. L. R., 1 Mad., 240, followed. In July 1874 a usufructuary mortgage of certain immoveable property was made to D. In July 1875 a portion of such property was again mortgaged to D. The instrument of mortgage on this occasion contained a condition against alienation. In July 1877 the whole property was mortgaged to N. In October 1877 it was again mortgaged to D. N sued the mortgagor on his mortgage in July 1877, and on the 29th September 1879 obtained a decree against him for the sale of the property. In October 1879 the mortgagor sold the property to D in satisfaction of his mortgages of July 1875 and October 1877. D did not offer to redeem N's mortgage, and on the 20th November 1880 the property was put up for sale in execution of N's decree (D's objection to the sale having been previously disallowed), and was purchased by A. D, who was still in possession under his mortgage of July 1874, then sued A for a declaration of his proprietary right to the property, claiming by virtue of his mortgages and the sale of October 1879. Held, applying the rules stated above, that N's mortgage of July 1877 could not affect D's right under his mortgage of July 1875, but N took subject to such mortgage; nor could the auction-sale of the 20th November 1880, which took place in enforcement of N's mortgage, affect D's prior mortgages; and therefore the condition against alienation deed has been registered. In 1867 R and G mortgaged certain lands to G R by a registered deed of that date. In 1870 G R obtained a money-decree against R and G, and in execution put up the mortgaged land for sale. The plaintiff purchased it without notice of the mortgage, and in February 1872 obtained possession through the Court. In the meantime, G R brought another suit upon his mortgage against his mortgagors. He obtained a decree, and in April 1872 ejected the plaintiff and obtained possession. In 1883 the plaintiff filed the present suit against R, G, and G R to recover the lands. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. G R (the mortgagee), when bringing the land to sale in execution of his decree, was bound by s. 213 of the Civil Procedure Code (VIII of 1859) to disclose the limited interest of his judgment-debtors in it. By concealing his lien he had induced the plaintiff to pay full value for the property, and he could not therefore retain his lien. By his omission he was estopped from disputing the plaintiff's title. The rule, that registration of a mortgage amounts to notice to all subsequent purchasers of the same property, does not apply to a case where there has been a fraudulent concealment by a judgment-creditor of the extent of his judgment-debtor's interest in the property brought by the judgment-creditor to sale. On the 25th June 1868 N sold the eastern half of that house to the defendant, who forthwith entered into possession. K sued N upon the mortgage, and obtained a decree on the 28th November 1868. N made certain payments to K under the decree until 1875. On the 27th July 1875 N passed to K an instalment bond for the balance due on the decree, together with R25 on account of savai profits, and as security executed a new mortgage of the house. Satisfaction of the decree was entered up and certified, and the new mortgage-bond registered. In 1882 K sued N upon this mortgage-bond and obtained a decree directing the debt to be realized by the sale of the mortgaged house, and on the 20th July 1883 the plaintiff purchased the house at the execution-sale. In 1885 the plaintiff sued to recover the eastern half of the house which was in the possession of the defendant. The lower Courts rejected the plaintiff's claim. On appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court,—Held, confirming the decree of the lower Courts, that the plaintiff, by his purchase in July 1883, did not acquire a title paramount to that of the defendant. All rights under the mortgage of 1864 had merged in the decree obtained in November 1868, but satisfaction of that decree had been entered up and certified when the second mortgage of 1882 was passed. The mere circumstance that the debt secured by the second mortgage was the balance of the old debt was not sufficient to justify the inference that it was intended to keep the decree alive. There were therefore no rights under the old mortgage which the plaintiff could assert as against the defendant in possession. RAMKRISHNA SADASHIV v. CHOTHMAL . . I. L. R., 13 Bom., 348

Decrees were obtained upon both mortgages: the terms of the first decree giving effect to a compromise between the mortgagor and the first mortgagee. Sales in execution followed; but before the sale under the decree upon the first mortgage was effected, the sale under the decree upon the second took place, the possession remaining with the purchaser at the first sale, who was acting benami for the mortgagor. At the subsequent sale under the decree upon the first mortgage, the plaintiff purchased, and now sued for possession. The High Court decided that the plaintiff was entitled to the first mortgage lien, in consequence of his purchase at the second sale; and, all persons interested in the matter being before the Court, that the proper course was to direct an inquiry as to how much of the mortgage-debt was chargeable upon that portion of the property which formed the subject of the appeal; and to direct that so much of the mortgage-debt should be realized by the sale of that property. Held that this judgment incorrectly treated the plaintiff as mortgagee, refusing him a charge for the full amount of his purchase-money. The case depending upon its own circumstances, it would be contrary to equity to allow the mortgagor to set up any right to possession as required by his purchase; and that the plaintiff as against him was entitled to a decree for possession as purchaser. The plaintiff subsequently sued M to enforce his san-mortgage, and, obtaining a decree, placed an attachment on the house, which attachment, however, was removed on the application of the defendant's father. The plaintiff now sued to establish his right to levy the amount due on his san-mortgage. He claimed priority to the defendant on the authority of Toulmin v. Steere, 3 Mer., 210, where it was held that a purchaser of the equity of redemption could not set up a prior mortgage of his own against subsequent incumbrances of which he had notice. Held that, the intention of the defendant's father when purchasing the equity of redemption having been to retain the benefit of all his rights, his son, the defendant, might properly require the redemption of his first mortgage as the condition of the plaintiff's enforcing the decree upon his mortgage against the property. A mortgagee purchasing the equity of redemption may indicate his intention to keep his charge upon the property alive otherwise than by express words. Per WEST, J.—The successive charges created by the owner of an estate may be regarded as fractions of the ownership, which embraces the aggregate of advantages that can be drawn from it. Each charge in its turn constitutes a deduction from the original aggregate, and the nominal ownership may itself then be reduced to a small fraction of what it once was. Still, be it small or great, it is a possible object of sale or purchase, and there is no ground or reason for saying that an incumbrancer who is already owner of one fraction of the property may not buy this other fraction without forfeiting the former fraction in favour of other fractional owners in the remainder left after deduction of his prior share. They had then no title to the property, but they subsequently acquired one by purchase on the 29th June 1871. On plaintiff demanding that P and his partners should make good the contract of mortgage out of the interest they had acquired, the matter was referred to arbitrators, who, on the 26th December 1873, made an award empowering plaintiff to sell the mortgaged property in satisfaction of his debt. The award was presented in Court by plaintiff on the 23rd January 1874, and was filed by the Court on the 23rd February 1874. Meanwhile on the 14th February 1874 the property was attached in execution of a money-decree obtained by a creditor of P and his partners against them. On the 15th April 1874 it was sold by auction and purchased by defendant. In a suit brought by plaintiff to recover possession of the property, both the lower Courts rejected his claim, on the ground that P and his partners had no right to the property when they mortgaged it to plaintiff. Held by the High Court on second appeal, reversing the decrees of the lower Court, that the defendant, as purchaser under a money-decree, could not defeat the plaintiff's right as mortgagee to sell the property in satisfaction of his debt. On the 19th December 1866, A (plaintiff No. 1) obtained a money-decree against K and the estate of his deceased father. In execution of that decree, the property was sold by the Court and purchased by A himself, who obtained a certificate of sale, dated the 30th January 1868. He subsequently sold and conveyed the property to D and C (plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3). On applying to the Court for possession, the plaintiffs were resisted by N. The Court rejected the plaintiffs' application on the 11th July 1868. On the 31st May 1871, K and his two brothers mortgaged the property to M (defendant No. 2), who took the mortgage with full notice of the Court-sale to the plaintiff A. K and his brothers paid off the mortgage of N out of the money borrowed by them from M (defendant No. 2) on the mortgage of the property. N returned his mortgage-deed to K and his brothers, who made it over to M. In 1878 the plaintiffs brought a suit against K and M for possession of the property. The Subordinate Judge held the plaintiffs entitled to recover it, on payment of the amount due to M on his mortgage, being of opinion that M was in the same position as N. On appeal, the District Judge dismissed the plaintiffs' suit on the ground that it was not brought within one year from the date when the application for possession was rejected. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the mortgage by K and his brothers to M, dated the 31st May 1871, was a mortgage of property which did not then belong to them,—their estate and interest in it having passed to the plaintiff A at the Court-sale. Held also that the order of the 11th July 1868, rejecting the plaintiff's application for possession under s. 269 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), did not affect the right to bring a redemption suit against N. Held further that there was nothing to show any assignment, by N, of his mortgage, or any intention on his part to assign it to M, or to keep it on foot for M's benefit. The High Court accordingly reversed the decree of the Courts below, and made a decree in favour of the plaintiffs. APAJI BHIVRAV v. KAVJI I. L. R., 6 Bom., 64

Subsequently, on the 14th June 1870, he mortgaged the same land to P. Both the mortgages were for sums less than R100. The mortgage to H was unregistered, but the subsequent mortgage to P was registered. On the 21st June 1873, in a suit to which P was not a party, H obtained a decree on his mortgage, and at the execution sale he himself became the purchaser, and was put into possession of the land under his certificate of sale. On the 21st September 1874, P assigned his mortgage to the plaintiff. The deed of assignment was not registered; neither P nor his assignee, the plaintiff, ever had possession under the mortgage of 1870. The plaintiff brought this suit to obtain possession of the land. Both the lower Courts dismissed the plaintiff's claim. On special appeal to the High Court,—Held that, in order to bind P by the decree passed in 1873 and thus make a good title to the purchaser under that decree, H should have made P a party to his suit, thereby giving P an opportunity of redeeming H's mortgage. H having neglected to do this, the plaintiff in the present suit, as the assignee of the rights and equities of P, was entitled to redeem the mortgage of H in case it was proved that P had notice of that mortgage. 263. ——— Suit by purchaser for possession—Priority—Equity of redemption—Registration—Notice—Parties to suit brought by a first mortgagee—Practice—Amendment of plaint.—A, the owner of certain land, mortgaged it to S for ten years for R1,500 by a deed dated the 27th November 1867. The deed was registered, but S was not put into possession of the mortgaged land. On the 17th January 1868, A mortgaged the same land to the defendant R for R250. The mortgage-deed was registered in May 1868, and recited that the mortgagee (defendant) was put in possession. The lower Courts found as a fact that the defendant had obtained possession of the mortgaged property. S sued A on her mortgage, and obtained a decree against him, dated the 8th December 1869, directing satisfaction of the mortgage-debt by the sale of the mortgaged property. The defendant was not a party to that suit. On the 10th March 1870 the land was sold in execution of that decree, and purchased by the plaintiff for R99-12, with notice of the defendant's mortgage. On the 28th April 1870 the defendant R instituted a suit in ejectment against N (the mother of A), who was in occupation of the land as tenant and had failed to pay the rent. On the 7th July 1870 the plaintiff, as purchaser at the above-mentioned sale, was put into possession, but on the 24th August 1870 the defendant obtained a decree in ejectment against N (the mother of A) as her tenant. In execution of that decree, the defendant recovered possession of the land, dispossessing the plaintiff, though he had not been a party to the ejectment suit. The plaintiff thereupon brought the present suit to recover the land under s. 230 of Act VIII of 1859. His claim was rejected by the Subordinate Judge, but allowed by the Joint Judge in appeal. On special appeal to the High Court,—Held that the claim of S against the land was prior to that of the defendant, inasmuch as her mortgage was prior in date to the defendant's mortgage, and was registered. S had a right to maintain a suit for the sale of land to satisfy her mortgage, but she ought to have made the defendant (as subsequent mortgagee) a party to it, inasmuch as the equity of redemption was vested in the defendant to the extent of her (defendant's) mortgage, and she (defendant) would have been entitled to redeem the land by payment of the amount which might have been found due to S in her suit. The defendant being in possession of the land at the time of the institution of the suit of S, and her (defendant's) mortgage being registered, S must be regarded as having had notice of the defendant's claim, and was bound to make defendant a party to that suit in order to give a good title to a purchaser under such decree as might be made in that suit. S, by her omission to do so, did not afford to the defendant the opportunity of redeeming to which the defendant was entitled. The plaintiff, notwithstanding notice of the defendant's claim, became the purchaser, although the defendant was not a party to the suit of S, and therefore not bound by the decree in it. The plaintiff accordingly was fully aware of the infirmity of the title which he was acquiring. No doubt, the decree in the suit of S bound the mortgagor A, who was a party to it, so far as his right to redeem was concerned. The plaintiff therefore had a good title to the interest of A, and was entitled to redeem the land from the defendant's mortgage. The utmost relief which the Court could afford to the plaintiff under the above circumstances was to permit him to amend his plaint by praying a redemption of the land from the defendant's mortgage, and to treat his suit, which was in the nature of an ejectment suit, as one for redemption. The High Court accordingly reversed the decree of the Joint Judge, and made a decree for an account on the defendant's mortgage, allowing the plaintiff to redeem within a certain time on payment of the balance that might be found due to the defendant, or, in default, ordering the plaintiff to be for ever foreclosed from recovering the land. Itcharam Dayaram v. Raiji Jaga, 11 Bom., 41, and Shringarpure v. *Pethe, I. adopted son of the obligee (deceased) of a hypothecation-bond to recover principal and interest due on the bond against the land comprised in the hypothecation. Defendant No. 1, the obligor of the bond, had executed it as manager of a joint Hindu family of which defendant No. 2 was a member and for the rightful purposes of the family. The family subsequently became divided, and the hypothecated property was divided between defendants Nos. 1 and 2. Defendant No. 1 afterwards hypothecated part of his share for a private debt to defendant No. 3, who having sued on his hypothecation and brought the land to sale in execution became the purchaser. The District Munsif passed a decree for the plaintiff against which defendants Nos. 2 and 3 preferred separate appeals. The District Judge on appeal passed a decree directing that the plaintiff should first proceed against all the property which was not subject to the hypothecation to defendant No. 3, including the share of defendant No. 2. Defendant Nos. 2 and 3 bound themselves as sureties for the due payment of the mortgage amount on default by the mortgagor. This mortgage had not been registered at the date of the execution of the mortgages next referred to. On the 27th of April 1888 the secretary of the plaintiff company handed over to defendant No. 1 most of the title-deeds which had been delivered to the plaintiff company on the execution of the mortgage, and defendants Nos. 1 and 3 undertook that they would raise a loan thereon and discharge the debt due to the plaintiff company, or return the title-deeds if they failed in raising the loan. On the 20th April 1888 defendant No. 1 deposited the title-deeds with defendant No. 4, and executed a mortgage to her for R4,000; and on the 7th May 1888 he executed an instrument creating a further charge in her favour for R1,000. These two sums were applied by defendant No. 1 to his own use, and not in discharge of the prior mortgage. The mortgages to defendant No. 4 described the mortgaged premises as being then free from incumbrances. Held that the plaintiff company had been guilty of gross negligence in letting the title-deeds out of their possession, and that the mortgages of defendant No. 4 had accordingly priority over the mortgage to the plaintiff company. The premises were mortgaged to defendant No. 2, who was an experienced sowcar in 1879, and to the plaintiff company in 1883, and again in 1884, and were conveyed absolutely by the mortgagor to defendant No. 2 in 1886. The mortgagor executed a rent agreement to the plaintiff company on the occasion of each of the mortgages of 1883 and 1884. The above mortgages were registered, but the plaintiff company and defendant No. 2 had no notice at the respective dates of their mortgages and conveyance of any previous incumbrance. The plaintiff company received the title-deeds of the estate from the mortgagor (but not the Collector's certificate) on the execution of the mortgage of 1883; the second defendant alleged that he had held them under a prior incumbrance which was consolidated in the mortgage of 1879, and that before the execution of that mortgage the mortgagor had obtained them from him for the purpose of obtaining a Collector's certificate, and had told him that the Collector had retained them, in order to account for their not being replaced in his custody. Held by the lower Court (SHEPHARD, J.), apart from the question whether the mortgage of 1879 had been extinguished by the conveyance of 1886, that the conduct of defendant No. 2 in permitting the title-deeds to remain in the possession of the mortgagor amounted to gross negligence within the meaning of the Transfer of Property Act, s. 78, and that the registration of the mortgage to defendant No. 2 did not affect the plaintiff company

292. ——— Redemption.—The owner of a house in 1861, in consideration of R190, mortgaged it to the defendant, and put him into possession. The mortgage-deed needed no registration, and was not registered. The mortgagor next mortgaged the house in 1873 to the plaintiff for R300 by a deed duly registered. He again in 1874 borrowed on the same security a further sum of R500 from the defendant, and executed in his favour a deed of mortgage which was duly registered. The plaintiff in 1876 sued the mortgagor for possession, and obtained a decree, the execution of which the defendant resisted. The plaintiff now sued the defendant to eject him, and to obtain possession of the mortgaged property until payment of the amount due on his mortgage. The defendant denied the plaintiff's mortgage and set up his own two mortgages, and claimed to be paid the amount due on both of them before he could be called upon to render up possession. Held that the English doctrine of tacking was of so special and technical a character, and so little founded on general principles of justice, that it ought not to be held applicable to the mofussil of Bombay, but that the obligations arising out of successive mortgages should be discharged in the order of their date. Held consequently that the defendant's right as against the plaintiff was either to redeem the plaintiff's intermediate mortgage, or else to hold the mortgaged property until his own first mortgage was redeemed by the plaintiff; but that the defendant could not claim to retain possession, as against the plaintiff, until his second mortgage, as well as his first, was paid off, since plaintiff's mortgage was prior in date to, and therefore was to be preferred before, the second mortgage of the defendants. The representative in title of the mortgagor subsequently sued the mortgagee for possession of such estate on payment merely of the mortgage-money. Held that, although such bonds did not in so many words create charges on such estate, yet inasmuch as it appeared from their terms that it was the intention of the parties that the equity of redemption of such estate should be postponed until the amount of such bonds had been paid, the representative in title of the mortgagor was not entitled to possession of such estate on payment merely of the mortgage-money. The assignee of the equity of redemption sued for possession of the estate on payment merely of the mortgage-money. Held that the two subsequent bonds did not create a further charge on the mortgaged premises, although they would prevent the original mortgagor from redeeming without paying their amounts. 307. ——— Decree for redemption—Execution barred by limitation—Second suit to redeem.—In a suit for redemption of a mortgage a decree was passed by consent to the effect that the land was redeemable upon payment of a certain sum on a certain date, but there was no direction in the decree that in default of payment the mortgage be foreclosed. This decree was not executed. After three years the right, title, and interest of the mortgagors in the land was purchased in execution of a decree by the plaintiff, who thereupon sued the mortgagees to redeem the land. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem. 309. ——— Suit for redemption—Conditional decree—Failure of mortgagor to pay in accordance with decree—Subsequent suit for redemption—Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 93.—In a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage, a decree for redemption was passed conditional upon the plaintiff paying the defendants, within a time specified, a sum which was found still due to the latter, and the decree provided that, if such sum were not paid within the time specified, the suit should stand dismissed. The plaintiff failed to pay, and the suit accordingly stood dismissed. Subsequently he again sued for redemption, alleging that the mortgage-debt had now been satisfied from the usufruct. Held, having regard to the distinction between simple and usufructuary mortgages, that the decree in the former suit only decided that, in order to redeem and get possession of the property, the mortgagor must pay the sum then found to be due by him to the mortgagee, and did not operate as res judicata so as to bar a second suit for redemption, when, after further enjoyment of the profits by the mortgagee, the mortgagor could say that the debt had now become satisfied from the usufruct. Having regard to s. 93 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), in a suit brought by a usufructuary mortgagor for possession on the ground that the mortgage-debt has been satisfied from the usufruct, and in which the plaintiff is ordered to pay something because the debt has not been satisfied as alleged, the decree passed against such a mortgagor for non-payment has not the effect of foreclosing him for all time from redeeming the property. 319. ——— Purchaser of equity of redemption, Right of, to redeem—Usufructuary mortgage followed by sale—Revival of mortgage by cancelment of sale—Attachment in execution of decree.—Z mortgaged in 1859 certain immoveable property, being joint ancestral property, for a term of five years, giving the mortgagee possession of the mortgaged property. In 1861 Z sold this property to the mortgagee, whereupon the sons of Z sued their father and the mortgagee, purchaser, to have the sale set aside as invalid under Hindu law, and in August 1864 obtained a decree in the Sudder Court setting aside the sale. The mortgagee, purchaser, remained, however, in possession of the property as mortgagee. In May 1867, Z having sued the mortgagee for possession of the property on the ground that the sale had been set aside as invalid, the High Court held that Z could not be allowed to retain the purchase-money and to eject the mortgagee, purchaser, but must be held estopped from pleading that that sale was invalid. In November 1867, one K having caused the property to be attached and advertised for sale in the execution of a decree which he held against Z and his sons, the mortgagee objected to the sale of the property on the ground that Z and his sons had no saleable interest in the property. This objection was disallowed by the Court executing the decree, and the rights and interests of Z and his sons were sold in the execution of the decree, K purchasing them. In 1878 K sued as the purchaser of the equity of redemption, for the redemption of the mortgage of 1859. Held that K was entitled to redeem the property. Held also that, the mortgagee not having contested in a suit the order dismissing his objection to the sale of the property in execution of K's decree, he could not deny that K had purchased the rights and interests remaining in the property to Z and his sons. Held also that the mortgagee had no lien on the property in respect of his purchase-money. Held also that, it being stipulated in the deed of mortgage that the mortgagee should pay the mortgagor a certain sum annually as "malikana," and the mortgagee not having paid such allowance since the date of the sale, the plaintiff was entitled to a deduction from the mortgage-money of the sum to which such allowance amounted. In 1861 one K R sued the representatives of R C on a mortgage-bond under which a sum of money was alleged to have been secured upon the said property, and obtained a decree against the defendants personally which did not direct sale of the mortgaged property. The plaintiff's ancestor bought the property with the knowledge of the mortgage. K R in 1868, in execution, sold the right, title, and interest of her judgment-debtors in the property to the defendants who paid ₨5,000 as consideration-money and obtained possession. In a suit to eject the defendants on the ground that the latter obtained no title to the property by their purchase,—Held that, so far as the defendants' money had gone to pay off the charge which K R had on the land to that extent, they were entitled to stand in her shoes as an incumbrancer; and that the suit, as far as regards the land covered by the mortgage-bond, must be taken to be a redemption suit, and the plaintiff ought not to be allowed to recover the property without paying the defendants so much as on a proper taking of accounts might appear to be due to them. But semble—It cannot be affirmed that every purchase by a mortgagee, of a sub-tenure existing at the date of the mortgage, must be taken to have been made for the benefit of the mortgagor so as to enhance the value of the mortgaged property, and make the whole, including the sub-tenure, subject to the right of redemption on equitable terms, e.g., where there is a mortgage of a zamindari in Lower Bengal, out of which a patni tenure has been granted, the mortgagee in possession might buy the patni with his own funds and keep it alive for his own benefit. An Oudh talukhdar granted an usufructuary mortgage of a portion of his talukh, in respect of which there existed certain subordinate birt tenures. The mortgagee, having subsequently acquired these birt tenures by purchase, did not, as he might have done, keep them alive as distinct sub-tenures, but treated them as merged in the talukh. The mortgagor, many years after, brought a suit for redemption, when the question arose, whether upon repaying the sum expended by the mortgagee in the purchase of the birts, in addition to the amount due on the face of the mortgage-deed, the plaintiff was entitled to the possession of the estate as then enjoyed by the mortgagee; or whether the latter was entitled to retain the birt rights and interests purchased by him as an absolute under-proprietary tenure in subordination to the talukhdar, and to have a sub-settlement on that basis. Held that the plaintiff, on repayment of the original mortgage-debt and on reimbursing the defendant the sum expended in purchasing the birts, was entitled to re-enter on the

It was to be redeemed in eight years, or else to become the absolute property of the mortgagee. It was not redeemed; and in 1859 B, in whose name the land was entered in the Government records, executed a razinama in favour of V, and V passed a kabuliat accepting the land. B and R then became V's tenants, and were, as such, successfully sued by him for rent in 1863. In 1872 V sold the land to N, who again sold it to the defendant. The plaintiff, as purchaser from the original mortgagors (B and R) of their alleged equity of redemption, filed the present suit to redeem the property. Held that, as the razinama given by V contained no reservation, and as it was accompanied by a transfer of possession, it had the effect of a conveyance of all the mortgagor's rights to the mortgagee. It operated to extinguish the equity of redemption, notwithstanding any misconception or ignorance on V's part of his rights as mortgagor. Under the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872, s. 21), error of law does not vitiate a contract; much less will it annul a conveyance after the lapse of many years, unless there has been some fraud or misrepresentation and an absence or negligence. In 1875 S mortgaged the property in dispute to H with possession. After S's death in 1877, S D managed the whole estate. In 1878, during D's absence from his native village, H sued S D as the heir and representative of S in respect of other debts, and, obtaining a money-decree against him, attached the mortgaged property in execution of the decree. After the attachment, H, without notifying or disclosing his mortgage-lien, caused several of the properties to be sold and, without obtaining leave from Court to bid at the sale, purchased some of them in the names of his defendants at an under-value and benami for himself. In 1892 D brought his suit against H, S D and the benami purchasers to redeem the properties so bought by H. The lower Courts found that the money-decree which H obtained and the execution-proceedings thereon bound the estate. It was contended that the execution-sales had not been objected to under s. 294 of the Civil Procedure Code and were therefore valid, and that the plaintiff consequently could not redeem. Held that the plaintiff might redeem, although he had not taken proceedings under s. 294. The fact that the mortgagee H had sold the property in execution of a money-decree did not free him from the liability to be redeemed as mortgagee. The sale was rendered nugatory, not by the provisions of s. 294 (though permission to bid granted under that section might have validated the purchase), but by the impossibility of a mortgagee by such sales and purchases freeing himself from the liability to be redeemed. The mortgagee purchased the portion so sold, whereupon the mortgagor presented a petition under s. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure, claiming that the mortgagee was bound to discharge his mortgage-debt, and should be called upon to certify satisfaction of his decree. Held that petitioner was not entitled to the relief prayed for, but only to proceed upon the footing that the portion of the mortgaged property which had been purchased by the mortgagee remained, notwithstanding such purchase, redeemable by petitioner together with the remainder of the property. On the question whether the purchase by a mortgagee of a portion of the mortgaged property at a Court-sale in execution of the money-decree of a third party involves a taking advantage by the mortgagee of his fiduciary position as mortgagee,—Held that the principle of the impossibility of a mortgagee freeing himself from his liability to be redeemed as affirmed in Martand v. *Dhondo, I. The mortgage was effected by the mortgagor as manager of all the co-sharers in union. In 1848 one of the co-sharers redeemed his share of two pies in the mortgaged property, and a further share of two pies therein was redeemed by a second co-sharer in 1867. The plaintiff was admittedly the owner of another two pies share; but he now sued the defendant to redeem the whole of the property still unredeemed, viz., a one anna eight pies share of the original mortgage. The defendant objected that the plaintiff could only redeem his own two pies share, which had become separated from the rest. The plaintiff denied that the estate had been divided. Held that the plaintiff's claim being to redeem all that remained of the estate in the mortgagee's possession, the suit could not be maintained, unless all the other persons interested in the equity of redemption were before the Court either as co-plaintiffs or as defendants. Without their presence, the suit could not be properly disposed of, and the excuse, that the defendant did not take objection at the right time, had, under such circumstances, no validity. As owner of a two pies share, which by consent of all interested had become an estate wholly separated from the other parts of the original aggregate, the plaintiff would have been bound to set forth the transactions on which his right rested. They made the purchasers of the other lots parties to the suit, and sought to redeem their own portion of the estate and to recover possession of their own portion and the portion purchased by the purchasers other than the mortgagees, on payment into Court of a sum sufficient to cover the proportion of the mortgage-debt attributable to the said parcels. On the 16th January 1869, in execution of a decree against B his interest in one of them (No 22) was sold and R became the purchaser. R, however, did not take possession. On the 25th April 1877, B paid off J's mortgage with money borrowed from the defendant V, to whom B again mortgaged the two fields as security. R died, leaving a son A whose interest in field No 22 was conveyed by his grandfather (R's father) to the plaintiff. A was not a party to the conveyance, but attested it with an expression of assent. The plaintiff now sued the defendant V to eject him from No 22. Held that the defendant V had a lien on No 22, and that the plaintiff could not eject him without paying him the amount of such lien. When R purchased No. 22 he and B stood in equal positions towards the mortgagee, J. J might enforce his rights under the mortgage against both together, or against either of the two, leaving that one, if forced to pay the whole sum, to recover the proper rateable contribution from the other. On the other hand, R might redeem the whole and seek contribution from B, or B might redeem the whole and seek contribution from R. Whichever of the two redeemed, he would have a lien on the share of the other for the proportional contribution of that share to the sum expended in redemption. B did in fact, redeem the mortgage to J, and thereupon became entitled to a lien on R's share of the property viz, field No 22. He then mortgaged his whole interest to the defendant V, including his lien on No 22. R, who had not yet obtained possession of No 22, was entitled to get it only on paying off the amount of the lien which had passed to the defendant V. As it appeared that there was such an excess, the Court gave N a decree for a moiety of such excess, together with interest on the same from the date of the sale of N's share at the rate of 12 per cent. per mensem; and further directed that, if such moiety, together with interest, were not paid within a certain fixed period, N would be at liberty to recover it by the sale of the share in mouzah A, or so much thereof as might be necessary to satisfy the debt. 1880 the plaintiff brought the present suit for redemption against M (the mortgagor) and the defendant R (the mortgagee), alleging (inter alia) that M, having sold the property, had not sought to execute the former decree for redemption. The defendant R in his written statement alleged that the sale by M to the plaintiff was fraudulent; that the plaintiff as purchaser from M had not applied to be made a party to the former suit; that M having failed to redeem as ordered by the said decree within the period specified, neither he nor the plaintiff was now entitled to sue. Held that the plaintiff's suit was unsustainable. By the sale to the plaintiff the rights of M came to the plaintiff subject to the result of the suit then pending in which he did not choose to get himself made a co-plaintiff. When the decree was passed, it was only through a right derived from M that the plaintiff could have a locus standi in the further proceedings, and he applied for execution as assignee, and therefore as representative of M under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure (X of 1877). As such representative, he might have appealed, but did not, against the order of the 6th March 1880, passed on the application made by him jointly with H S. He had this right of appeal as representative of M, but he could not bring a fresh suit. If he was not a representative of M, then he was a stranger to the proceedings under the decree; and as M took no steps to fulfil the decree, the right to redeem was foreclosed in six months from the date of the decree,—i.e., in May 1881. The plaintiff could not, by any step, prevent the right of the defendant as mortgagee against M from growing and perfecting itself during the six months allowed for redemption. She claimed to have a right to redeem from the mortgage in 1854, in due course of time, the share in the estate which devolved upon her by right of inheritance from her father and brothers, the sale-deed of 1863 notwithstanding. The purchase-money under the sale-deed represented personal debts of M and N, one of the brothers. The plaintiff did not claim as an heir of M, whose death was not known for certain. M did not profess in the sale-deed to be acting for her daughter either as guardian or as one of N's heirs managing for them all. The plaintiff was apparently not a minor at the time, and M was not an heir of N, being his step-mother. Under Mahomedan law, she could not have disposed of her daughter's property as her guardian, and not being one of N's heirs she could not deal with his estate on behalf of his real heirs. At the time of sale half the mortgage term had not expired, the mortgage-debt was not claimable at the time, and the sale with a view to its liquidation was unnecessary. 417. ———— Power of sale by mortgagor—Reasonable time—Suit to remove attachment.—Claim by a mortgagee to remove an attachment, placed by a judgment-creditor of the mortgagor, on the ground that the entire ownership of the property had passed to him at the date of attachment. The mortgagee had never had possession of the mortgaged property; and by the stipulations of the deed the mortgagor had a power of sale after the expiration of the time fixed for the payment of the debt, and it was only on the failure to exercise this power that the proprietary title would pass to the mortgagee. Held that, under a condition of this character, a reasonable time must be allowed for the exercise of the power of sale, and that the fact that no sale had taken place within an interval of twenty-three days from the date fixed for payment could not equitably be held to divest the mortgagor of the equity of redemption; that consequently at the time of attachment the defendant was only a mortgagee, and the suit to remove the attachment could not be maintained. 419. ———— Mortgagor entitled to redeem before expiration of term unless mortgagee can show that the term binds mortgagor —Usufructuary mortgage.—No such general rule of law exists in India as would preclude a mortgagor from redeeming a mortgage before the expiry of the term for which the mortgage was intended to be made unless the mortgagee succeeds in showing that by reason of the terms of the mortgage itself, the mortgagor is precluded from paying off the debt due by him to the mortgagee. Where parties agree that possession of any property shall be transferred to a mortgagee by way of security and repayment of the loan for a certain term, it may be inferred that they intended that redemption should be postponed until the end of the term, though the creation of a term is by no means conclusive on the point. The term fixed for payment of a debt should be presumed to be a protection only for the debtor till a contrary intention is shown. BHAGWAT DAS v. PARSHAD SING . . I. L. R., 10 All., 602

In a suit in which the plaintiffs asked for an account and for a decree for redemption on payment by them of the balance that might be found due on the mortgage, it appeared, on accounts being taken of the proceeds of the land, that the principal and interest had not been discharged thereby. Held that the right to redeem had not accrued to the plaintiffs, and that the suit should be dismissed. MUN PEARY v. SHIVA DEEN . 1 Agra, 91

422. ———— Hindu and English law.—The same principle exists both in the English and the Hindu law that the right of the mortgagor to redeem does not, in the absence of any circumstances or language indicating a contrary intention, arise any sooner than the right of the mortgagee to foreclose, and therefore a suit for redemption of a Hindu mortgage cannot be brought before the time fixed by the mortgage for the payment of the mortgage-money. take the profits of the land in lieu of interest; that the mortgagee should grant a lease of the land to the mortgagor, the latter paying the former the profits of the land every harvest in lieu of interest; that if the mortgagor failed to pay the mortgagee the profits of the land by the end of any year, he should pay interest on the principal amount of the mortgage at the rate of one per cent. calculated from the date of the mortgage, and in such case the mortgagee should have no claim to the profits; and that, if the mortgagor failed to pay the mortgagee the profits by the end of any year, the mortgagee should be at liberty to cancel the lease and to enter on the land, and collect the rents thereof and apply the same to payment of interest. On the 21st March 1874 M gave L a lease of the land, under which R1,980 was the sum agreed to be payable annually as profits in lieu of interest. In 1879 M, who had not been paid any profits, sought to enforce in the Revenue Courts the condition as to entry on the land, but was successfully resisted by L's widow. On the 16th January 1880 M sued L's widow for interest on the principal amount of the mortgage at the rate of one per cent. calculated from the date of the mortgage to the date of suit, claiming the same by virtue of the provisions of the mortgage, on the ground that he had not been paid any profits. Held that the mortgage and lease transactions must be regarded as one and indivisible, and the questions at issue between the parties be dealt with quâ mortgagor and mortgagee; that so regarding such transactions and dealing with such questions, M and L did not stand in the position of "landlord" and "tenant" and the proceedings of 1879 in the Revenue Courts were had without jurisdiction; also that, although looking at the terms of the contract of mortgage it was the intention of the parties that, on the mortgagor failing to pay the mortgagee the profits by the end of any year, the latter should in the first place seek possession of the land, yet as M had never obtained possession, but on the contrary had been resisted when he sought to obtain it, his present claim for interest was maintainable. The Court directed that so much of the interest as was due at L's death should be recoverable from such property of his as had come into his widow's hands; and as to the rest, which related to the period during which the widow had been in possession and in receipt of the profits, that it should be recoverable from her personally. XXXIV of 1803, ss. 9, 10—Act XXVIII of 1855—Act XIV of 1870—Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882, ss. 2, 62.*—A deed of usufructuary mortgage executed in 1846, under which the mortgagee had obtained possession, contained the following conditions: "Until the mortgage-money is paid, the mortgagee shall remain in possession of the mortgaged land, and what profits may remain after paying the Government revenue are allowed to the mortgagee, and shall not be deducted at the time of redemption. At the end of any year, the mortgagors may pay the mortgage-money and redeem the property. Until they pay the mortgage-money, neither they nor their heirs shall have any right in the property." In 1884 a representative in title of one of the original mortgagors sued to redeem his share of the mortgaged property, upon the allegation that the principal amount and interest due upon the mortgage had been satisfied from the profits, and that he was entitled to a balance of R45. It was found that from the profits, after deducting Government revenue, the principal money with interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum had been realized, and that the surplus claimed by the plaintiff was due to him. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, on the ground that under s. 62 (b) of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), and with reference to the terms of the deed of mortgage, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the property until he paid the mortgage-money. Held that, although the word "interest" was not specifically used, the natural and reasonable construction of the deed was that it was arranged that the mortgagee should have possession of the property and enjoy the profits thereof, until the principal sum was paid, in lieu of interest. Held that the provisions of ss. 9 and 10 of Regulation XXXIV of 1803, which was in force when the deed of mortgage was executed, were not affected or abrogated by Act XXVIII of 1855 or Act XIV of 1870 or Act IV of 1882; that these provisions were incidents attached to the mortgagor's rights of which he was entitled to have the benefit; and that the contract of mortgage being subject to these provisions, the charge would have been redeemed as soon as the principal mortgage-money with 12 per cent. interest had been realized by the mortgagee from the profits of the property. The deed contained various provisions for securing the payment of interest to the mortgagee, and among these a provision that he should have possession of the property and take the profits on account of interest, the profits being fixed at a certain amount yearly, leaving an agreed balance of interest to be paid yearly in cash. There was also a provision that in the event of possession not being given, the mortgagee might treat the principal money as immediately due, and recover it at once with interest at the rate of R1-6 per cent. per mensem. The mortgagee did not take possession of the mortgaged property, and took no steps to obtain such possession, or to recover the money for nine years, during which no interest was paid. In November 1884 the mortgagee brought a suit against the mortgagors to recover the mortgage-money, claiming interest from the date of the mortgage-deed to the date of the suit at R1-6 per cent. per mensem. Held that the fair inference of fact from the circumstances above described was that the

In execution of this decree, the mortgagor took possession of the property in dispute. On appeal by the mortgagee, the District Court amended the decree by directing the mortgagor to pay the mortgagee's costs of the suit by a certain day, or, in default, to stand for ever foreclosed. The mortgagor failed to pay the costs as directed. Thereupon the mortgagee applied, in execution, to have the property restored to his possession. The Subordinate Judge granted this application. The District Judge, in appeal, held that the decree did not provide for delivery of the property by the mortgagor to the mortgagee. He, however, directed the mortgagor to pay the mortgagee's costs with interest. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that, as the mortgagee's costs, which became a part of the mortgage-debt, were not paid on the due date, the mortgagor was finally foreclosed, and the property thereupon passed to the mortgagee. It was therefore not competent to the Court, in execution, to practically enlarge the time for redemption, by allowing the mortgagor further time to pay the mortgagee's costs. The decree contained no clause for foreclosure in the event of non-payment. On 19th April the mortgagees appealed to the High Court against the decree. On 12th October 1886 the mortgagor paid the R649 into Court and applied for execution of the decree, which, though the three months had expired, the Court allowed holding that it had power to enlarge the time for execution: this order was set aside on appeal, the High Court holding that there was no power in the Court executing a decree to enlarge the time for execution. On 15th July 1890 the mortgagee was allowed to withdraw his appeal, and the mortgagor's application to be allowed to execute the decree was rejected, the Court holding that the time could not be computed from the withdrawal of the appeal, but that it ran from the date of the original decree. Quære—Whether, there being no foreclosure clause in the decree, the mortgagor could file another suit to redeem. Default having been made in the payment of interest annually as stipulated, the conditional vendee, the term of seven years not having expired, took proceedings to foreclose, in pursuance of the condition contained in the fourth clause of the deed, and the conditional sale was declared absolute. 497. ——— Usufructuary mortgage—Position of mortgagee in possession.—Where, in proceedings held before the issue of Circular Order of 22nd July 1813, a mortgagor had the opportunity in a Court competent to decide the matter, to contest, as against the mortgagee, all questions of fact necessary to give a good and absolute title to the mortgagees, and, though called upon, did not show that the mortgage was a bad one, but admitted that the mortgagees were not paid off, and that an extension of the year of grace had elapsed without his performing any of the conditions which would have saved the property from being foreclosed, it was held that, even if the proceedings did not possess the character of a regular suit, they were sufficient in themselves to effect a foreclosure, if such was their purpose. Where a party, originally a mortgagee out of possession, has been put into possession by the act and permission of the mortgagors, he has really (inasmuch as a parol contract is sufficient in this country to pass immoveable property) obtained a new title altogether different from that which he possessed before, and having its foundation in the act of the parties themselves when they put him into possession. 501. ——— Effect of foreclosure—Sale for arrears of revenue—Fraud of mortgagee—Act I of 1845.—The effect of a foreclosure decree in the Supreme Court in a mortgage suit between Hindus is equivalent to a decree establishing proprietary right in the mofussil Courts, in similar suits on the like instruments. The mortgagee in possession and another having sought to deprive the mortgagor of his title to redeem by means of a secret purchase of the mortgaged estate between them, including the fraudulent device of a sale by auction for arrears of revenue, such arrears being designedly incurred by the mortgagee in possession, it was held that a suit for redemption and for possession instituted many years after the sale for arrears was not barred by s. 24 of Act I of 1845. If a mortgagee in possession fraudulently allows the Government revenue to fall into arrears with a view to the land being put up for sale and his buying it in for himself, and he does in fact become the purchaser of it at the Government sale for arrears, such a purchase will not defeat the equity of redemption NAZIR ALI KHAN v. OJOODHYARAM KHAN [5 W. JYRAM GIR v. KRISHAN KISHORE CHUND . . . 3 Agra, 307

551. ———— Service of notice—Proof of service—Beng. Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8.—The condition of foreclosure required by s. 8, Regulation XVII of 1806, is that the mortgagor should be furnished with a copy of the petition referred to in the section, and should have a notification from the Judge in order that he may, within a year from the time of such notice, redeem the property. In an action brought to recover possession as upon a foreclosure, it is essential for the plaintiff to satisfy the Court that the above condition has been complied with. In such a case, the service of the notice must be established by evidence. The mere return of the Nazir on the back of the Judge's purwannah to the effect that the mortgagor had been duly served, is not legal evidence of service. The functions of the Judge under s. 8 are merely ministerial. The year during which the mortgagor may redeem, runs, not from the date of the purwannah, or the issuing of it by the Judge, but from the time of service. Where there are several mortgagors, and it is not sought to foreclose the individual shares of each as against each but to foreclose the whole estate as upon one mortgage, one debt, and one entire right against all, service of the notice upon some only of the mortgagors is insufficient to warrant the foreclosure of the whole estate or of any part of it. Quære—Whether there may not be cases of mortgages of separate shares, in which by proceedings properly framed foreclosure may take place in respect of some of such shares only. While these accounts were being taken, A died, leaving a will by which he appointed his widow and his grandsons executors, and after certain devises, not comprising a property in Tumlook, gave the residue of his immoveable property to the said grandsons, who took it subject to payment—(1) of such of the legacies as remained unpaid under R's will, and (2) of what might be due by A to P's estate. After A's death, the above suit in equity was revived against his executors. The said executors borrowed money from one Mackintosh on the security of a bond and a mortgage of certain property which he obtained (including the Tumlook property) by an indenture, which recited that the said executors were still accountable in respect of the above legacies and debts, and provided that in the event of any default, or of any sale by Mackintosh, the said debts and legacies were to be paid out of the proceeds in the first instance before either mortgage-money, or interest, or costs, or expenses. After this a decree in the above suit was made against A's executors for R1,32,000, and this not being paid, a writ of fieri facias was issued under which the Sheriff sold to M (benami) the equity of redemption in the Tumlook property subject to Mackintosh's mortgage. The latter then obtained a decree of foreclosure and commenced another suit against M which was compromised, and a decree made by consent in favour of Mackintosh, who then sold his interest in the mortgaged property to M. Under these circumstances, M claimed the right of proving the whole amount of the sum due to him in the equity proceedings without taking into account the Tumlook property; on the other hand, the creditors of A insisted that M was bound to treat the Tumlook property as an asset of A's estate. Held that M was bound to hold the property on the same terms as those on which he acquired it, viz., that it was subject to a trust in his own favour for the payment of his own debt. XV of 1793, s. 10—Suit for redemption.*—Where a mortgage-deed stipulates for interest at 9 per cent., but other and collateral deeds, forming part of the same transaction, provide for further profits to the mortgagee,—Held that the mortgagor cannot, unless there be a positive legal enactment to that effect, be heard to plead that the written engagement, though not extending to the whole profit stipulated, must be adhered to as against the mortgagee, though the mortgagor may go beyond it to show the full extent of the profit, and so to be relieved from the consequences of his actual contract. The mortgagee may retain his pledge until he has received out of it his debt with interest at 12 per cent., the maximum allowed by s. 10 of Regulation XV of 1793. In a suit for redemption, on the ground that the debt has been satisfied with interest, the onus is on the plaintiff. A mortgagee is not an assurer of the continuation of the same rate of profit as his mortgagor was able to raise; hence an estimate of the rental preceding the mortgagor's possession is not sufficient proof of the profits in his time. The nature of the accounts which a mortgagor may call for from the mortgagee, explained. The mortgagee need not personally attest the accounts, if he has no personal knowledge of them. Presumptions against mortgagees for non production of accounts must have reasonable limits, and not be mere conjectures or based on in exact data. MAKHANLAL v. SRIKRISHNA SINGH [2 B. L. R., P. Within the six months limited by the decree for redemption, the mortgagor applied for execution, and it appeared that the value of improvements had diminished by the loss of trees of the value of R157. It made no difference, in the result of the account, whether the rents and profits received by the mortgagee in each year were set off year by year against the amount expended by the mortgagor in that year for improvement and management, or their total was deducted at the end of possession from the sum expended by him. The balance of his expenditure had, in fact, exceeded in each year that of his receipts and carried only simple interest. The mortgage-debt decreed bore compound interest. Held that the account need not be taken on the principle that the mortgagee should give credit for his receipts, first, in reduction of that debt, which was most burdensome to the debtor. There was no obligation to pay off the compound interest debt before the other. Whether the improvements and the expenditure were reasonable, were questions of fact on which two Courts had concurred; and there was no ground for interference with their finding. During the life of the mortgagee, his son managed the property, living on it at a distance. The account directed was of sums "laid out in management." Salary to his manager was not paid, and in the account could not be allowed, such allowance not having been decreed.

The onus is on the mortgagor to prove that the principal sum has been paid or satisfied; and on the mortgagee to show what, if anything, is due to him for interest. 629. ——— Usury laws—Beng. Reg. XXXIV of 1803—Obligation on mortgagee to file accounts.—In a mortgage dated in 1852 of malikana fixed for the period of settlement, it was agreed that the mortgagee should collect the village jumma, pay the Government demand, and take the malikana, of which part was to be received by him as interest on the money lent at one per cent. per mensem, and the balance, viz., R565 per annum, was to be retained by him as the costs of collection. No accounts were to be rendered of the malikana collected during the time of the mortgagee's possession. If this agreement had been a contrivance for securing to the mortgagee a higher rate of interest than that to which he was then by law entitled, it would have been void under the usury laws (in force under Regulation XXXIV of 1803 until the passing of Act XXVIII of 1855), and would not have prevented the accounts from being taken. But as the Courts found that the R565 per annum constituted a fair percentage, which it had been bonâ fide agreed should be allowed to the mortgagee for the costs of collection, it was held that the agreement had been rightly treated as a sufficient answer to a suit based on the assumption that the whole of the mortgage-money, principal and interest, would be satisfied if the accounts contrary to the agreement) were taken on the basis of charging the mortgagee with the R565, or so much thereof as he should fail to prove had been actually expended in the collection. If the amount received by the mortgagee had been fluctuating, production of the accounts might have been necessary for a decision on the validity of the agreement set up. But it could not be said that by no agreement could a mortgagee relieve himself from the obligation of filing accounts under the 9th and 10th sections of Regulation XXXIV of 1803; and in this case he had done so: the only sum that he was to receive beyond the interest allowed by law being an unvarying balance found to be a fair allowance for the costs of collection. 643. ———— Suit for redemption of two distinct mortgages—Right to separate accounts—Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), s. 13—Mode of taking accounts.—By two separate mortgages certain land were mortgaged in 1830 by the plaintiff's father to the defendant. In 1882 the plaintiff as an agriculturist brought the present suit for redemption of the lands comprised in both mortgages. Held that separate accounts of the two mortgages should be taken. The mortgages were distinct transactions relating to different lands, and s. 13 of the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act contains no words enabling the Court to treat them as one. The fact of their being included in the same suit could not affect the question. In taking the accounts of the above mortgages it was proved that on one mortgage there was a sum of R5,075-13-2 due to the plaintiff (mortgagor) by the defendant (mortgagee), and on the other mortgage a sum of R3,774-2-7 due to the defendant by the plaintiff. The plaintiff contended that, although by the ruling in Janoji v. Janoji, I. L. R., 7 Bom., 185, he could not compel payment of the R5,075-13-2 due to him on the one mortgage, he was entitled to have so much of it as might be necessary set-off against the R3,774-2-7 still due by him on the other mortgage. Held that on the authority of Janoji v. Janoji, I. L. R., 7 Bom., 185, the plaintiff had no legal claim to the R5,075-13-2, and, that being so, the existence of that balance in his favour on account of one mortgage could not be treated as extinguishing the claim of the defendant to the R3,774-2-7 due on the other mortgage. The plaintiff as an agriculturist mortgagor was enabled to free his land from both the mortgages on the favourable terms provided by the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), but was precluded from compelling the mortgagee to refund what the latter had personally acquired under the terms of his contract of mortgage. 17. ———— Joinder of several plaintiffs in respect of separate causes of action—Contribution, Suit for—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 578—Irregularity affecting merits.—The plaintiffs, who were husband and wife, brought a suit to recover a certain sum of money, part of which was alleged to have been paid by plaintiff No. 1, who was a co-sharer with the defendants in two patnis to save the patnis from being sold for arrears of rent; and the remainder by plaintiff No. 2, who alleged that she had a subordinate miras talukh under the two patnis granted to her by plaintiff No. 1, and that the sale would have resulted in the cancellation of her miras talukh. In appeal it was contended by the respondents, in support of the decree made by the Court below dismissing the claim of plaintiff No. 2, that the claim was liable to dismissal by reason of its involving the misjoinder of plaintiffs with different causes of action. This objection had been raised in the written statement, and the Court was asked to raise an issue on the point. In answer to this contention, it was urged by the appellants that, as the respondents went to trial upon the merits, it was not open to them to urge any objection like this to the frame of the suit on appeal. Held that the suit was bad for misjoinder of plaintiffs, as the suit of plaintiff No. 2 ought properly to have been brought against all the holders of the patnis, including plaintiff No. 1, and not merely against the defendants in the suit. Held further that it was open to the respondents to raise the objection as to misjoinder in appeal. Tarinee Churn Ghose v. *Hunsman Jha, 20 W. In a suit for possession of immoveable property, part of which had been usufructuarily mortgaged by defendant No. 1 to defendant No. 2, the plaintiff alleged that the first defendant had no title to make such a mortgage, while both defendants maintained such title. Held that, inasmuch as the title of defendant No. 2 was derived from defendant No. 1, and stood or fell with the failure or success of the plaintiff's claim against the latter, there were not two causes of action but one, namely, the infringement of the plaintiff's right by the defendant No. 1, and hence the suit was not bad for misjoinder of causes of action. Against one of the defendants who claimed a particular portion of the lands under the tenure in question, they brought a suit in 1869; but this suit was finally dismissed in June 1876, on the ground that all the persons, who were claimants of any part of the lands, ought to have been joined as defendants. Accordingly a fresh suit was brought against all the claimants of the tenure. To this suit the defendants set up various and distinct defences, some alleging one defence and some another, and so on. Of the remaining 5 biswas, 3 biswas $6\frac{3}{4}$ biswansees belonged to D and 1 biswa $13\frac{1}{4}$ biswansees to H. These 5 biswas were in the defendants' possession. The plaintiffs sued to recover possession of them, alleging that the mortgage had been redeemed out of the usufruct, and that they had acquired D's rights by auction-purchase in the year 1848, and H's rights by private purchase from his sons in 1873. They also sued for mesne profits. The defendants pleaded that they held the 5 biswas in suit as proprietors, having acquired D's rights by private purchase in 1847, and H's rights similarly in 1851. They also pleaded that, inasmuch as the plaintiffs had brought a suit to establish the sale alleged to have been made to them by H's sons, and that suit was still pending, the claim for possession of H's share could not be maintained; and they lastly pleaded that, inasmuch as the plaintiffs admitted that the rights of D and H were acquired by them under separate sales, their claims to those rights could not be joined in one suit. The plaintiffs replied that, assuming the claim to H's share could not be maintained on the basis of the alleged sale to them, they were nevertheless entitled to possession of H's share in virtue of their right to D's share, both shares having been jointly mortgaged. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to ask in one suit for a determination of their claim to the possession of the shares, and to any surplus mesne profits which might be found due in respect of them on taking account, and that the pendency of the suit to establish their purchase of H's share did not deprive them of the right to sue to recover possession from the mortgagees, although it might have been necessary to determine incidentally in the suit the question at issue in the suit respecting the purchase. Held also that, if the plaintiffs established their right to

In execution of this decree, the property first mortgaged was sold on the 4th March 1878, and after satisfying the mortgage a surplus of R7,664 remained. After the institution of the first suit and before L's purchase, the plaintiff instituted a suit upon his mortgage in the Tirhoot Court without having obtained leave to include that portion of the mortgaged property situate in the Bhaugulpore district. On the 17th July 1874 a decree was made in this suit. The plaint was returned by the Judge, under s. 23 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), for presentation in the ordinary Civil Court, and it having been presented to the Munsif, he tried the suit, and passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge reversed that decree, holding that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to try the suit. Held that, under s. 23 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, the order of the Small Cause Court Judge was regularly made, and the Munsif had therefore jurisdiction to entertain the plaint. Semble—Having regard to the provisions of ss. 646A and 646B of the Code of Civil Procedure, it is doubtful whether the Appellate Court would have been right in dismissing the suit for want of jurisdiction, even supposing that the order made under s. 23 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act had not expressly conferred jurisdiction upon the Munsif. A conflict having arisen as to the right to receive the compensation, and the District Court having declined to determine it under the Land Acquisition Act, s. 15, an interpleader suit was instituted on behalf of the Secretary of State in the Court of the District Munsif. fixed for the official year by the Secretary of State; annuities already due or hereafter becoming due on risks accepted before the 1st July 1876 shall be payable to incumbents residing in Europe at the fixed rate of two shillings to the rupee." Exchange continuing to decline, on the 22nd May 1880, the Society, by the votes of 553 against 505 of the subscribers, passed the following rule: "Annuities already due, or becoming due before the 1st May 1880, on risks accepted before the 1st July 1876, shall be payable to incumbents residing in Europe at the fixed rate of two shillings to the rupee: but all other annuities due, or becoming due, shall be paid, if to incumbents in India, in full, and if to incumbents residing in Europe in London, at the market rate of exchange." The plaintiffs were the widow and children of F, a member of the Society, who was admitted as a subscriber for the benefit of his widow in November 1871 for the benefit of his son in September 1873, and for the benefit of his daughter in November 1874. He commenced to pay an increased subscription for the benefit of his son in September 1878. He was not one of the majority who voted in favour of the rule of the 22nd May 1880, though he attended the meeting of subscribers. He died on the 25th June 1880, having up to that time duly paid his subscription to the Fund. In a suit in which the plaintiffs, who were residing in England, claimed to be paid their pensions at the rate of two shillings in the rupee,—Held that F had no vested interest at the time of the passing of the rule of the 22nd May 1880; that the plaintiffs were, with respect to their pensions, bound by the terms of that rule, which a majority of the subscribers had full powers to pass so as to affect the nominees of all existing subscribers, and therefore the suit should be dismissed. Rule 41 gave an undue advantage to one class of subscribers, which was extra vires and open to correction under rule 60 by a majority of the subscribers. The Society being one for the equal benefit of all subscribers, even if rule 60 did not give power to adjust payments in accordance with the rate of exchange, such a power might be implied for the purpose of continuing the business of the Association. 2. ———— Madras Civil Service Annuity Fund—Refund of excess subscriptions, Right to.—The Madras Civil Service Annuity Fund was established in 1825 for the purpose of providing annuities to the Civil Servants of the East India Company in the Madras Presidency on retiring from service. The annuities were to be provided for by subscriptions of the Civil Servants to that Fund to the amount of one half and by contributions by the East India Company to the extent of the other half. These contributions were to be received by trustees and applied by them to make good the deficiency which was to be supplied by the Company. It appeared that in some instances the trustees of the Fund, where an excess of subscriptions had been paid by a subscriber entitled to an annuity beyond the half value of the annuity, had returned the excess. R, a subscriber from the commencement, had contributed beyond the half value of his annuity. Held that, although the regulations of the Fund did not justify a refund to a subscriber of the amount of his subscriptions in excess of the prescribed amount, yet that the practice which had prevailed of refunding the contributions in excess, and the acquiescence of the East India Company in such practice, precluded the Company from disputing the right of the subscriber to repayment of the surplus of his subscriptions in excess of the half value of the annuity payable out of the Fund. Held also that, R having become entitled to his annuity in 1852, his right to such repayment could not be affected by rules passed in 1853 prohibiting such refund, although R remained a subscriber in 1853. 3. ———— Rules of Benefit Society—Power to alter rules.—The Bombay Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund was a voluntary society established in 1850. Its object was to provide pensions for the widows of its members. One of its rules provided that the rules of the society were subject to such additions and alterations as might from time to time be sanctioned by the general body of subscribers, and by the form of application for admission as a member each applicant promised and engaged to abide by the rules of the society. The plaintiff became a member in 1875. At that time one of the rules (which had been passed in 1871) provided that the pensions of widows resident in Europe should be payable to them at the rate of 2*s.* per rupee. On the 20th July 1895 the society passed a new rule which provided that all pensions due or becoming due after the 31st July 1895 should be paid to incumbents residing in Europe or the colonies at the market rate of exchange on the day of remittance. The plaintiff contended that the society was not competent to alter the rule passed in 1871 by which he had been induced to join the society, and he prayed for a declaration that his wife, if and when she became a widow, would be entitled to have her pension paid at par. Held, dismissing the suit, that the society was competent to alter its rules, and that the plaintiff was bound by such altered rules. The contract with the plaintiff was that his widow, if he left one, should receive such pension as the rules prescribed, and that the rules were liable to alteration by a majority at a general meeting to which he would be subject so long as he remained a member.
